CURRENT OBSERVATIONS

Much of the interest that was generated during 1945 about J. Arthur Rank and the British product to be marketed here, should crystalize during 1946. One thing is certain; if British product expects to get any attention from American exhibitors the producers over there had better start selling the showmen here well in advance of the pictures' arrival in this country.

We have often stated here that a good picture will always get substantial playing time in this country. In the past the occasional good picture (and by "good" we mean entertaining qualities) made its bow and with any kind of a favorable reception was highly touted to encourage sales to theatremen. But it always seemed like a "one-shot" proposition.

Now we are to expect a continuous flow of British pictures and, without benefit of build-up, we cannot see why the exhibitors here can be expected to get overly-excited about them. Perhaps the plans call for extensive advertising. But how about creating advance interest in the pictures and building up sufficient prestige so that when they are ready for screening and selling here this market will know a lot more about them than had been the practice in past years?

One thing we do know: if it is the American market that is being sought, then there had better be some good, American selling to go with it.

1946 may go down in industry history as the year in which the Theatre Activities Committee came into being.

Before the ink on this issue is too dry, the guiding group of this new organization will be meeting in New York to set plans for the first general convention of the national body. This convention will probably be scheduled for early spring.

We have been accused of taking too much interest in this new organization. Well, if it will bring about the kind of a national organization that we have long felt the independent exhibitor needs, then we plead guilty.

And so long as they stick to their intentions and really do the job they set out to do, we'll be for them, lock, stock and barrel. As is true in any such a move, a great deal will depend on the men who assume responsibility for the guidance of this Committee.

If they are the right men and do an open and above-board job, we cannot see how they can fail. But if they get involved in "secret" sessions and behind-the-back whispering campaigns, then they will fall by the wayside.

As a little boy we were taught that secret meetings always meant that some one or some group were ashamed to speak out in the open for fear their intentions might be subjected to the limelight. In most instances, such groups and the things they talk about in secret sessions can't stand too much limelight.

An out-of-town exhibitor enabled us to spend several enjoyable hours visiting. Best of all, he didn't have a single squawk to register about tough buying terms or high percentages. But he did leave one choice morsel behind when he departed for home.

In discussing price trends for pictures he said that he had come to the conclusion that sales managers are more interested in trying to beat the other company's revenue figures than in honestly trying to sell their product for what it was worth.

You know, there is a lot of truth in his observation, and the more you analyze it the truer it seems to be. If you look back over some past years you will find many instances of this or that company with a deplorably weak season of product which, nevertheless, demanded terms that would apply better to far superior product.

No doubt the sales manager of "this or that" company didn't give a hootenell that his pictures were mostly turkeys. He was out to gross a big figure to match the company whose product was head and shoulders above his own.

Some day we hope to see a set-up wherein pictures are bought and sold for what they (the pictures) are worth and NOT what some master minds in the home office think they should bring.

When that time comes there will be less beefing but a heck of a lot of better feeling between exhibitor and distributor.

Nothing short of inspiring is the eloquent devotion of adopted-son Ned Depinet for his foster-native-state, Texas, in as pretty a letter as we've ever received. Ned, the doughty, two-fisted showman who learned his picture business in Texas, addressed a letter to his friends to carry to them a precious "first day of issue" cancellation of the stamp commemorating the 100th anniversary of the admission of Texas to the Union. We were delighted to receive that prized "cover" with its Texas stamp cancelled as of 9 a.m., Dec. 29, 1945.

Challenge Gov't. on Arbitration System

Challenging the assertion of the Department of Justice that the arbitration system set up under the industry consent decree has failed, the five defendant theatre owning companies—MGM, Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox and Warners—who were signers of the decree, in an effort to refute the charge, this week filed a brief in the New York Federal Court with the three-man statutory court which in November and December heard the 20-day trial of the U. S. anti-trust suit against the five defendants and United Artists, Universal and Columbia.

In an 111-page document, the defendants contended that the arbitration system has been efficiently and impartially administrated and is an efficacious method of settling industry disputes; that if any defects do exist, they can be corrected without destruction of the system, and that the 400 arbitrated cases out of the hundreds of thousands of contracts for 18,000 theatres, show the system has worked well.

Beginning with a short history of the consent decree and the events leading up to its adoption, to show the careful preparation which went into virtually every word of the decree and the arbitration system which was an integral part of it, the defendants declare that the Government cannot now come to the court after five years and say the machinery of its choosing as well as that of the court, is unworkable and ill-advised, any more than can the Government now challenge the provisions of clearance and say that clearance is not necessary, after having incorporated in Section VIII of the decree the statement that "It is recognized that clearance, reasonable as to time and area, is essential in this distribution and exhibition of motion pictures."

The defendants challenge the U. S. right to take 29 cases involving arbitration and use them as examples of discrimination, when 408 cases exist. The defense runs the gamut in the 29 cited instances and seeks to refute all U. S. evidence of discrimination by citing its own interpretation of the principals involved. The document concludes with the assertion that aribtration and clearance have both worked to the advantage of the exhibitor and distributor and should be retained.

Chicago Uptown Robbed of $4100

Five bandits held eight janitors of the Uptown Theatre, Chicago, captive early New Years Day, and after blowing up a safe, escaped with $4100 in silver. As each janitor arrived he was seized by the gangsters, all of whom were armed, and marched to the front row of the auditorium where they were seated and guarded until the safe was cracked. The thieves entered the house by forcing an exit door.

Tradeshow 'Strangers' January 28

National tradeshowing of "Three Strangers" has been set by Warners for January 28. The picture stars Geraldine Fitzgerald, Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre.

Settle Coast Dispute

The Hollywood jurisdictional union dispute, which caused the worst labor war in the industry's history during seven months of 1945, was settled in Washington this week when a committee of the American Federation of Labor Executive Council ruled that set decorators come under the jurisdiction of the Brotherhood of Painters. The decision is binding on the Painters Union and the IATSE. The problem of proper jurisdiction was solved on a basis of a division of work designations within the industry, patterned after previous agreements, negotiated mutually by the various crafts. It was also recommended but not decided that all office workers in the industry be included within the jurisdiction of the Office Employees International Union.

Rank Production Executive Here To Study American Audiences

The first of a series of British film executives to visit America to see and learn about the American market so that British productions can be attuned to suit American audiences, Filippo Del Guidice, managing director of Two Cities Films, one of the three major J. Arthur Rank production groups, arrived in New York last week. Del Guidice, who produced "In Which We Serve," "Blithe Spirit" and "Henry the Fifth," will confer with Matthew Fox, president of United World Pictures.

The producer will visit various sections of the country studying audience reactions and speaking to exhibitors before leaving for the coast in mid-January to confer with Leo Spitz and William Goetz of International Pictures regarding Two Cities productions. Fox will also attend the coast conferences.

Del Guidice declared that he will report his findings to his technical staff upon his return, and hopes while here, to learn enough about American film desires to be able to deliver suitable pictures for this market.

11 Companies Sued in Anti-Trust Unreasonable Clearance Action

The Cross Bay Amusement Co. and Rockwood Theatre Enterprises, Inc., lessee and owner of the Cross Bay Theatre, Woodhaven, L. I., filed an anti-trust suit charging unreasonable clearance and run against 11 film companies, four circuits and nine individuals in the New York Federal Court this week.

Suit asks a preliminary injunction to refrain defendants from alleged refusing to contract with the Cross Bay for pictures on a run and clearance of seven days after Loew's Willard and RKO Richmond Hill, and with a clearance of seven days in favor of the Cross Bay over all other theatres in the area. Treble damages are sought. All 11 companies are named as defendants with John Wimple, Spyros, Charles and George Skouras, Samuel and Harold Rinzler, Louis and Emanuel Frisch and Joseph M. Schenck.

Over 200 in Attendance at Moskowitz Testimonial Dinner

More than 200 executives, department heads and theatre managers of Loew's Inc., plus 20 others prominent in the industry, tendered a testimonial dinner to Charles C. Moskowitz at the Seven Eleven Restaurant Thursday evening in honor of his recent elevation to the post of treasurer of Loew's. James J. Walker acted as toastmaster and Eddie Sullivan, Louis Sobel, Joe T. Lewis and Harry Hershfield as masters of ceremonies. The reception was arranged by Gilbert Marbe, Jack Harris, Ed Burke, Sam Perlman, Bernard Zelenke and Leo Sidowsky.

Unger Named UA Gen'l Sales Manager

Appointment of J. J. Unger, United Artists western sales manager, to succeed Carl Leserman as general sales manager, was announced last week by Gradwell L. Sears, UA vice-president in charge of distribution. Unger, who takes up his new duties immediately, shortly will announce his own successor to the western sales post and will also name a new eastern sales manager.

J. J. Unger

In announcing the appointment, Sears praised Unger for his dealings with exhibitors which, Sears said, "have always been on the highest level, a fact which has won for him the admiration and respect he presently enjoys among members of the industry." He also cited the new appointee for his "long training and experience," which "admirably qualifies him for this important role in the UA sales organization."

Unger started his career in the industry as a booker for the General Film Company in 1920. A year later, he joined First National Pictures as New York branch manager, transferring to Paramount in 1924 in a similar capacity. In 1932, Unger was elevated to the post of eastern division manager and in 1939 was made eastern and Canadian division manager. He joined United Artists two years ago as western sales manager.

Bernhard Back From Coast

Joseph Bernhard, president of United States Pictures, Inc., returned to New York over the weekend from coast conferences with Milton Sperling, vice-president and production chief of the new unit which will release through Warner Bros.

Ted R. Gamble

(The Man on the Cover)

National War Finance Director of the United States Treasury Department and one of the film industry's most distinguished representatives on the record of his outstanding service during the war in a high and responsible official position. Mr. Gamble, a theatre owner and head of a circuit he organized in Seattle, will receive a high tribute from the film industry on Monday night January seventh, when he will be honor guest at a testimonial dinner to be held in New York. Among the speakers at the dinner will be: Spyros P. Skouras, Lieutenant-General A. A. Vandergrift, Hon. Henry Morgenthau Jr., Hon. Earle Snell, Frederick W. Gehle, S. H. Fabian, George J. Schaefer, Delos Walker, Francis Harmon and George Murphy, president of the Screen Actors Guild, who will act as toastmaster.

Johnston Awards Profits

Eric A. Johnston, MPPDA president and a member of President Truman's labor-management advisory committee, this week made front-page news when he announced a 25 per cent profit-sharing plan for employes of all his Washington State companies. This includes the Brown-Johnston Company, retailers of electrical equipment; Columbia Electric and Manufacturing Co., and the Brick and Lime Company of Spokane. Johnston stated he regarded the plan as his solution of the problem of "industrial democracy."

Rodgers Sees No '46 Business Recession

No one connected with the industry has any thought of any trend toward a recession of business within the discernible future, William F. Rodgers, MGM vice-president and general sales manager, declared late last week in a year-end statement. He admitted there would be slight readjustments, "as for example, a possible tendency of families to favor neighborhood theatres in some localities, rather than big downtown spots, but that is all. The mounting foreign market will play a factor in the over-all returns of the next few years."

W. F. Rodgers

Looking back on 1945, Rodgers declared that not only did MGM achieve the highest film booking circulation in the company's history, but it also set a new record for engagements totaling a week or more. "Product which will set a new mark for engagements of one week plus," he said, "demonstrate a high level of quality, and we believe that during 1946 we will have an even stronger lineup of pictures, the strongest we have ever been able to offer the picture-buying public."

Rodgers listed "Thrill of a Romance," "Thirty Seconds Over Toyko," "Meet Me in St. Louis," "The Valley of Decision," "National Velvet," "Dragon Seed," "Mrs. Parkington" and "Anchors Aweigh" as films which attained the highest box-office volume in 1945. "Weekend at the Waldorf" would also be in this group but still has a substantial percentage of dates yet to be played.

'Weekend,' Milland, Bergman Win Awards of N. Y. Critics

"The Lost Weekend" was voted the best film of 1945 by the New York Film Critics this week. Ray Milland won the critical nod for the best male acting performance of the year in the same picture and Ingrid Bergman was voted the best actress, based on her performances in "Spellbound" and "The Bells of St. Mary's." Billy Wilder was judged as having performed the best directorial job in "The Lost Weekend."

Film runner-ups included "The Story of GI Joe," "Colonel Blimp," "State Fair," "The True Glory" and "The Fighting Lady." Actor runner-ups included Robert Mitchum, Zachary Scott, James Dunn, Roger Livesey, Gary Cooper, Gene Kelly and James Mason. Among the women, Joan Crawford, Deborah Kerr, Peggy Ann Garner, Bette Davis, Rosalind Ivan and Margaret Rutherford won votes. Directors who received recognition were William Wellman, Jean Renoir, Powell and Pressburger, Henry Hathaway, Raoul Walsh and Leopold Lindberg. Scrolls will be presented the winners January 30.

1946 Theatre Business Outlook Dimmed by Capital-Labor Unrest

Only settlement of the present strife between capital and labor, full employment and the availability of good pictures can make 1946 a prosperous year in the motion picture industry, a business-outlook survey of leading exhibitors in representative sections of the nation reveals. While there is some optimism in predictions of "the biggest year yet," nevertheless a cloud of anxiety hovers over the general outlook.

Typical of this pessimism is the attitude of leading exhibitors in the St. Louis, eastern Missouri and southern Illinois area who declare that chances of 1946 bringing any measure of success to this area depend upon whether the current labor problem will be resolved to permit the pent-up buying power of the nation to make itself manifest. The situation is summed up by Fred Wehrenberg, head of the Wehrenberg Circuit and president of the MPTO of the St. Louis territory:

"I hate to contemplate what will happen to the film industry if the flood of strikes and other labor disturbances persist through the early months of 1946. Business in this section has already been running up to 25 per cent behind the corresponding period last year." Unless there is a more realistic approach to the solution of the nation's postwar problems by both capital and labor, the nation is facing a real crisis, Wehrenberg says.

Indiana Exhibitors Duly Alarmed

Possible labor unrest is also cited by Indianapolis exhibitors as a condition for the 1946 box-office outlook which, otherwise, they report as "good." Statewide prospects, however, are viewed with alarm. The closing of war plants in many areas has started a migration of workers to their former homes, with reconversion affecting not only theatres but other lines of business as well. With box-office receipts falling because of the absence of free-spending workers, many exhibitors are duly alarmed and see no prospects for an early recovery.

The business outlook in the Cleveland area varies in degrees of optimism, ranging from opinions that business, which picked up after Christmas, will improve rapidly, to the more conservative prediction that recovery will be slow and painful.

Construction of downtown apartment buildings and the proposed lake front development are seen as theatre business boosters by Harry Schreiber, RKO Theatres district manager, while M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit, holds that even if strikes are settled and employment is general, business cannot remain at wartime levels. "The take-home pay of every worker will be considerably less than it was in the days of overtime pay. The living costs are high. The standard of living is high. I don't see how these conditions can be reconciled with a highly optimistic outlook for the immediate future."

Faith in the drawing power of good pictures is expressed by A. E. Ptak, owner of the Lyceum Theatre and vice-president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association. "Once the holidays are over," predicts Ptak, "the public will turn again to motion pitcure entertainment, provided we have good pictures to show them."

Basing their predictions upon the earnest and apparently successful efforts of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Associated Industries of New England and the New England Council to reconvert rapidly and to bring new business into the area, leading New England exhibitors comprise one group interviewed to forecast the biggest year in the history of films. Moreover, the largest vacation business in the territory's history is predicted by heads of the New England Council and Associated Industries.

Comparatively few new theatres are planned, but, theatremen hasten to explain, this is because New England underwent a "terrific" theatre-building boom just before the start of World War II and in many instances new theatres were completed before the conflict got under way. However, such projects announced include a new Television theatre in Boston, a new theatre in connection with the new 1000-room Ford Hotel and new film houses in some of the adjacent suburbs. E. M. Loew plans several drive-in theatres, while M & P Theatres will convert the former Esquire or Repertory into a television house, with another theatre of similar type to be erected by 20th-Fox.

With some war plants still operating at full speed and reconversion to peacetime work in others now complete, there has been little or no change in employment in the New England area.

In Memphis and the surrounding territory, a constantly increasing population resulting from new industries and new distributing firms, has given film men here a feeling of optimism for 1946. Theatre managers and owners are willing to predict business will be good, but they feel moviegoers will be more inclined to shop in 1946 than in the war years, when practically any picture could be depended on to play to an SRO audience. Rejuvenation of most theatres is planned and scores of operators in the vicinity are planning new houses, with many having already definitely announced them. Elliott Johnson, advertising manager of the Malco; Bill Kemp, manager of Loew's State and Colonel Cecil Vogel, manager of the Palace are all optimistic about business prospects, as is Col. Howard Waugh, who left Warners January 1 for a production post in Mexico City.

Bright '46 Up to Hollywood, Exhibitors

Leo Wolcott

Prediction of a bright future for 1946 if Hollywood and exhibitors are willing to go back to work was voiced this week by Leo Wolcott, president of the Allied-Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, who said that the future and box-office prospects are bound up in a neat package with these two questions:

Will Hollywood produce more really good pictures, now that the "war honeymoon" of automatically packed houses is over?

Are exhibitors willing to go back to work selling their shows, cleaning up their theatres, insisting upon politeness in their employes now that the war is over, and thus meet the competition which will be in the field?

If the answers to the questions are emphatically "yes" backed by real action, Wolcott said, the future prospects for the box-office are bright. If the answer is negative or "maybe," he concluded, the future for the box-offices of the competition "is terrific."

Block-Booking Held Delinquency Aid

Theatremen of Spokane, Wash., and a committee from the Spokane censor board rapped block-booking at a meeting last week, claiming the practice forces the exhibition of films unsuitable for children on the same bill with desirable pictures. Vandalism and disorder in theatres was discussed and several methods were proposed for dealing with the persons responsible, especially those who have not attained their majority.

City Commissioner Payne addressed the meeting, attended by censor board members, and commended exhibitors for refusing admission to children under 12 after 7 p.m. unless accompanied by parents. The commissioner decried the amount of murder on the screens and attributed many crimes by the young to the influence of the screen. Exhibitors, in rebuttal, pointed out that they were forced to buy certain films whether they played them or not, and had to put on horror attractions with desirable films for children. An attempt is being made to segregate the showings to avoid such couplings in the future.

16,870 Theatres Contributed Over 70,000 'Free' Days to Bond Drives, Report Shows

The 1945 edition of "Movies at War," annual report of the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, shows that the 16,870 motion picture theatres of the country contributed to bond campaigns more than 70,000 "free" days. The producing companies gave the armed services more than 76,000 entertainment films with an estimated money value of $38,500,000.

Copies of the report, made public late last week by its editor, Walter T. Brown, associate coordinator and director of publicity of WAC, have been sent to all theatres, all producing and distributing companies, executives of allied industries and officials of 31 WAC exhibition areas of the United States.

The War Activities Committee, which ended December 31, began its work on December 8, 1941—one day after the Pearl Harbor attack by the Japanese. The 1945 "Movies at War," is the fourth and last of the WAC reports.

Up to the beginning of the Victory loan campaign October 30 to December 8, 1945, the theatres had held 30,661 free movie days and 23,913 bond premieres. Brown estimated that the Victory loan, the report of which had not been completed when "Movies at War" went to press, would add 5,500 premieres and 10,000 free movie days.

Final reports on the gift films for the fighting men are recorded in "Movies at War." The final delivery of the 16-mm. films was made to the Army on October 31.

The WAC report is largely made up of illustrations with only enough textual matter to amplify and complete the pictorial story. Special sections are devoted to movie theatres, the gift films, newsreels, Hollywood stars, the trade press and other war-time jobs undertaken for the Industry by the War Activities Committee.

The dedication page in the book carries the caption "Detachment Dismissed," and reads as follows:

"With the defeat of Japan, the Motion Picture Industry began demobilizing its war-time organization and began reconverting to peacetime pursuits. Figuratively, the Industry discarded its ODs, put on blue serge and returned to normalcy.

"The day after France fell in 1940, a group of movie executives banded together to help the Government meet the twin-funnelled typhoon that swept toward the United States out of Japan in the East, Germany in the West. Pearl Harbor in December, 1941, gave the Industry the War Activities Committee. Its war-time success is the Motion Picture Industry's proud record of achievement. This volume is the fourth of the 'Movies at War' series. The four tell a tabloid story of the Committee's work. No valedictory need be uttered. The civilian audiences at home, the uniformed audiences overseas, know that the Industry accepted every assignment from the Government; completed every operation successfully, and gave its time, its energies, its talents and its property beyond the call of duty. The days of peace ahead will be no less challenging than the days of war behind. Peace, too, must be fought for with the same degree of national devotion and tolerance and generosity."

Prepare N. Y. Plans for March of Dimes Drive

The industry's 1946 March of Dimes drive got under way in New York last week with a meeting at the Loew publicity offices, with Harry Mandell, New York State publicity chairman presiding, assisted by Edward C. Dowden, New York City publicity chairman. A number of ideas were adopted for the opening day of the drive, January 24, when an all-out attempt will be made to make it the biggest since the annual campaign's inception.

On that day Times Square will be converted into Dimes Square, with a number of stunts and special events heralding the inauguration at theatres throughout the city.

Present at the meeting last week were Sid Gross, Jerry Sager, Ira Morais, Sol Handwerger, Vincent Ligurio, Sid Kain, Ray Malone, Artnur Price, Bill Slater, Ted Arnow, Fred Herkowitz, Carl Fishman, Blanche Livingstone, Paula Gould, John Cassidy, Pat Grosso and Herman Silver.

WAC Liquidation Continues Until Feb. 1 Under Skeleton Staff

The War Acitvities Committee of the industry, although officially liquidated as of December 31, is continuing to function temporarily with a skeleton staff under Walter Brown, until unfinished matters are disposed of. The second and third floor offices in the Paramount Building, New York, have been vacated and the offices on the fourth floor are being retained on a month-to-month basis while liquidation of assets, including furniture, is under way.

A possibility that part of the fourth floor offices will be retained as headquarters for the new theatres organization patterned on the Theatres Division of the WAC, is reported. All final business of the WAC is expected to end by February 1.

8213 Circuit Pledges

Total number of circuit and independent theatres pledged to aid the forthcoming March of Dimes drive starting January 24, is now 8213 as a result of additional pledges from 20 circuits representing 593 theatres, it has been announced by Joseph R. Vogel, Dimes Circuit chairman.

Record Crowds Set Holiday Week Highs

Starting with the Christmas holidays and extending up to New Year's day, with prospects for continued good patronage on not quite so large a scale, theatre business in nearly all sections of the country reached one of the highest holiday season peaks in the nation's history. Buffeted by Christmas shopping, a wave of influenza cases and inclement weather, downtrodden box-office receipts began rising Christmas day and reached high levels during the seven-day holiday period.

A new long-line record was established in New York by "The Bells of St. Mary's" at Radio City Music Hall, where Gus Eyssell, managing director, announced that the throngs awaiting admission were greater than any ever experienced in the history of New York theatre attendance.

Beginning at the main box-office, situated at 50th Street and the Avenue of the Americas, the nearly mile-long line of persons extended east to Rockefeller Plaza, twined around the Associated Press building corner to swing again in 51st Street in a westerly direction all the way through to the Avenue of the Americas, completing encirclement of both the AP and RKO buildings. At this point the line was separated by police to allow for 51st Street traffic at the busy intersection, taking up again on the north side of that thoroughfare and stretching east once more to Fifth Avenue and curving up north on that Avenue almost to the corner of 52nd Street.

Experts in estimating New York crowds figured the wait of any individual or group bringing up the far end of this history-making line to be some minutes more than three hours before reaching the box-office and gaining admission to the theatre.

While other queues were not quite comparable to those at the Music Hall, waiting lines were in evidence at nearly all Broadway theatres, including the Roxy ("The Dolly Sisters" and stage show), the Capitol ("They Were Expendable" and stage show), the Paramount ("The Stork Club" and stage show), the Strand ("San Antonio" and stage show), the Hollywood ("Saratoga Trunk"), the Rivoli ("The Lost Weekend"), the Astor ("Spellbound") and other first runs on the main stem. In many cases, lines were on hand at 7:00 a.m. The Music Hall opened at 7:30 a.m. during the week, earliest opening hour in its history.

Although New Year's Day business reports were not all in, general indications were that the majority of the nation's theatres prospered to the tune of extra thousands of dollars in additional patronage, making the Eve and the Day the biggest since 1940. The Roxy reported Thursday that all attendance records in the history of the theatre had been broken during the Christmas holidays.

Final WAC Report to Be Made At Gamble Testimonial Dinner

Final report of the War Activities Committee, summing up the services and accomplishments of this wartime organization financed by the motion picture industry, will be made at the Ted Gamble testimonial dinner on January 7 in the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, it is announced by the Dinner Committee headed by Spyros P. Skouras.

The fourth issue of the booklet, "Movies at War," also will be distributed to all dinner guests ,among whom will be many prominent non-industry personages.

$10,500 Stolen from Astor

Receipts totaling $10,500 were stolen from the Astor Theatre, New York, last Sunday night by two teen-age robbers who, wielding guns, forced the theatre's manager and her assistants to part with the bundles of currency from the safe.

RKO Redeems Its 6% Preferred At $106

The final step in a general program of unification of properties and refinancing of RKO was announced this week by Floyd B. Odlum, chairman of the RKO board of directors, in a statement that the board had elected to redeem all RKO's outstanding six per cent preferred stock at a price of $106.54 a share on February 2. There are now approximately 93,000 shares outstanding, some 35,000 having already been retired through the sinking fund or through conversion by holders into common stock.

Floyd B. Odlum

Odlum's announcement revealed that all important theatre operating assets are being integrated in B. F. Keith Corporation, which name is being changed to RKO Theatres, Inc. That subsidiary has placed with the Equitable Life Assurance Society, the $22 million of new three per cent debentures under the financing plan arranged by Lehmann Brothers. The proceeds of the debentures will be used to the extent required to retire substantially all the outstanding funded debt of theatre subsidiaries and to enable them to pay off all their debt to the parent RKO company aggregating nearly $5 million.

Ex-Servicemen Myers, Boudouris In Key Strong Electric Positions

radar work on carriers and seaplane tenders, will serve as research engineer with the Strong organization. He has been associated with the theatre industry since 1928, mainly in sound engineering for Western Electric and Warner Bros.

Ensign A. B. "Al" Boudouris, USNR, Navy pilot specializing in radar work, has returned to the Strong organization as field engineer. Boudouris was associated with Strong prior to entering the Navy and has a host of friends in the theatre field.

300 Attend Paul Terry's 30th Anniversary Party

A cocktail party commemorating Paul Terry's 30th anniversary as a producer of motion picture cartoons took place last week at the Sky Garden Room of the St. Moritz Hotel, New York.

Officers and executives of 20th Century-Fox, distributors of Terrytoons, were among the 300 members of the industry, trade and metropolitan press on hand to greet Terry.

Variety Meet in May

The Variety Clubs of America will hold their annual convention in New York at the Astor Hotel May 15-18, it was announced this week by "Chick" Lewis, publicity chairman and publisher of Showmen's Trade Review. The Humanitarian Awards banquet will be held on the night of May 18. Members are now voting on the selection for the recipient of the award.

Johnston Hails Columbia On 25th Anniversary

Praising the ingenuity and achievements of early motion picture leaders, and declaring that the horizons of the industry's future are far wider than those of today, Eric Johnston, MPPDA president last week greeted Columbia at the onset of its 25th anniversary, and expressed the hope that the company's achievements and record would continue to grow brighter in the years to come.

Johnston declared in part that "as a newcomer to the industry, I marvel at the talent and ingenuity of the individuals who made the American motion picture what it is today. They combined an art and an industry into a universal medium of entertainment which has brought untold joy and happiness to the earth's humble people. The motion picture has become a chief provider of information, entertainment and inspiration for millions who crowd the great houses that it has built. To this progress, Columbia has made worthy contributions."

Johnston's statement also declared that "the horizons of tomorrow for the motion picture industry are far wider than the horizons of today. They are wider because of the vision and the enterprise of the men who built so well during the past quarter of a century. On the future pages of motion picture history may Columbia's achievements continue to be many and its record of service be ever bright."

Columbia Launches Playdate Drive Coinciding With 25th Anniversary

As a feature of Columbia's 25th Anniversary which will be celebrated throughout 1946, General Sales Manager A. Montague this week announced a Playdate Jubilee, to provide a competitive incentive plan for the domestic field sales force.

District managers, managers, salesmen and bookers are to receive awards scaled in relation to their performance in obtaining the greatest number of playdates in the company's history during the Jubilee which ends June 28, 1946.

Koerner Names Votion RKO Representative in Europe

Appointment of Lt. Col. Jack William Votion, Hollywood producer, as RKO Radio European representative, was announced on the coast recently by Charles W. Koerner, vice-president in charge of production, coincident with Votion's arrival home from three years of service in Europe with Army Intelligence.

Votion, who will make his headquarters in London, will act as liaison between RKO's Hollywood studio and production activities in London and Paris, and will function as talent scout for personalities and story material in England and Continental Europe.

Rosenfield Returns to 20th-Fox

Jonas Rosenfield, Jr., has been appointed 20th-Fox national and cooperative manager of the advertising department, it was announced this week by Charles Schlaifer, head of the company's publicity, advertising, exploitation and radio departments.

Elicker Joins Astor As Vice-President

Joe E. Elicker, for the past two and a half years a member of the editorial staff of SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, this week assumed the duties as vice-president in charge of advertising and publicity for Astor Pictures. Elicker was appointed to the post he now occupies with Astor by Robert M. Savini, president of the company, who declared in making the announcement of Elicker's appointment that the company had recorded its biggest year in 1945 and was launching on an expanded program of distribution and production.

Joe E. Elicker

In addition to his duties connected with advertising and publicity for the Astor program, Elicker will engage in production work. He now has one film, "Silver Devil" in distribution through Astor exchanges, and plans several others for the Astor release schedule this year.

Astor's new vice-president is a veteran of 21 years in the amusement industry, which he entered as an usher with Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, Pa. Since that time he has had active experience in practically every phase of the industry, having served from time to time as publicity and advertising manager for several theatres including Comerford's largest houses in Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Hazelton and Pottsville, Penna., before becoming advertising and publicity director for the Comerford circuit

In his early days in the industry, Elicker was a pioneer in poster service for smaller houses, inaugurating the Poster Art Design Service, a forerunner of the present American Display Corp.

Jack Schlaifer Joins Monogram; Morey, Goldstein Are Promoted

Appointment of Jack Schlaifer as Monogram director of sales was announced late last week by Steve Broidy, president. Schlaifer, a newcomer to the organization, is widely known in the industry through his association with Universal as general sales manager; with United Artists as vice-president and western general sales manager, and more recently with 20th Century-Fox as central sales manager.

Jack Schlaifer

At the same time Broidy also announced the promotion of M. Edward Morey to the post of executive assistant to the president, and the elevation of Maurice Goldstein to the position of general sales manager. All three executives will headquarter in New York.

De Sylva Terminates Producing Contract With Paramount

Paramount and B. G. De Sylva late last week announced the friendly termination of their contract by mutual agreement so that De Sylva may get an extended vacation and rest.

De Sylva has been with the company for more than four years—first as a producer and then as executive-producer in charge of all production. During the past year he has been head of the B. G. De Sylva Productions, Inc., organized to produce pictures for release through Paramount. Under his own banner De Sylva produced "The Stork Club."

Samartano, Providence, Sets Talent Contest

Plans are afoot in Providence for a Musical Talent Contest to be held January 21 on the stage of Loew's State Theatre.

Last week Manager J. G. Samartano, Assistant Manager E. Stenzel, Student Assistant Manager E. O'Neill, Secretary M. Ross, Chief Usher A. Mott and Artist E. deSauve met to line up the details for the event. Here are the results of their conference:

A special trailer urging all those who can sing, do imitations or play a musical instrument to register with the manager will be projected two weeks in advance. Contest details will also appear on a 40x60 lobby display during the same period. Teaser cards on chandeliers and in rest rooms will seek contestants.

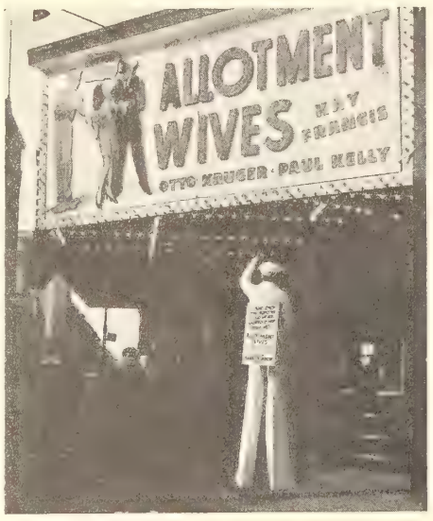
A thousand heralds will be distributed by music schools and stuffed in bags by four local markets, while 300 window cards will be placed in the suburban neighborhood one week in advance.

Five downtown music shops selling instruments will use tie-up cards and distribute circulars. For ten passes weekly, station WEAN will announce the contest on its Spotlight on Youth program.

Maurice, the house organist, will make special announcements at every performance.

Fifty dollars in prizes are offered, together with a week's personal appearance with Maurice at the State.

Blue Motif Keeps Wollaston Campaign on the Sunny Side



Blue, as might be expected, was the dominating color note of Gerry Wollaston's campaign for "Rhapsody in Blue" at the State Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa. He made full use of the theme, and it is said that even color-blind people understood the tieup with the picture. A beautiful window at Bowman's a downtown department store, attracted attention, featuring all blue clothes and accessories, and "Blue Sapphire" perfume. Sixteen music windows were decorated in cooperation with the D and H Distributing Company, and displays were arranged in the five and ten cent store music counters.

Gershwin music was played daily on spots of 15-minutes each on the three city radio stations, WHO, WKBO and WHGB, sponsored by Finkelstein Cleaners, the Record Mart, and other local advertisers. The ABC half-hour show "Music in Manhattan," aired over WHGB, the local outlet, included four plugs for the picture, while spot announcements, stations breaks and similar promotion were utilized. For three weeks in advance of showing the intermission music at the State was exclusively Gershwin, with Wollaston using a Victor and a Columbia album. Special days were arranged when music classes in public schools attended as part of their music appreciation courses.

Increased linage in regular advertising, and a series of specially designed ads were used in the Telegraph and Evening News.—HA.

Looking for More Space

Using forethought and initiative, Brock Whitlock of Loew's, Richmond, Va., has been calling on local newspaper managing editors reminding them that with increased newsprint in prospect, those foreshortened movie pages should get more space.

BALLYHOO. This gigantic, on-stilts Longfellow dressed in the sailor outfit plugged the New York engagement of Monogram's "Allotment Wives" at the Ambassador Theatre. The sign on his back reads: "I came back from overseas to find my wife married to two other men. See 'Allotment Wives'." Stunt bears duplicating in other spots.

Radio, Teaser, Display Campaign for 'Dakota'

More than 40 radio spot announcements and advance teaser newspaper ads featured the exploitation campaign executed by Norman E. Kassel, publicity director of Essaness Theatres for the Chicago run of Republic's "Dakota," at the Woods Theatre.

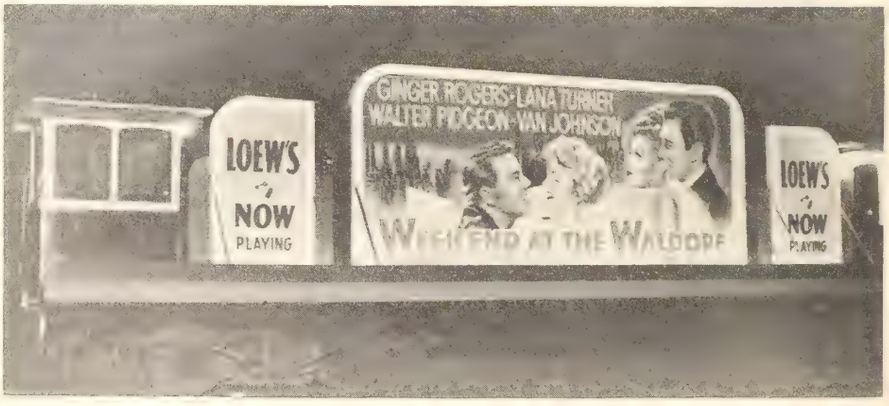
Part of the theatre front was put up a few days in adavnce of the opening, with displays prominently showing a head of John Wayne, a clinch shot of Wayne and Vera Hruba Ralston, and action shots from the film. Forty-by-sixty displays were used throughout the house.

Newspaper promotion consisted of the aforementioned teaser ads, which were run five days in advance plus the usual display advertisements.

MGM '46 Ad Plan Stresses 4 Brackets

Following its policy of the past year, MGM will distribute its advertising budget in four important brackets: newspaper, magazine, radio and express truck advertising during 1946, the company announced late last week.

The Railway Express advertising posters cover 1500 cities from Canada to Mexico with 4000 two-sheets and 3200 four-sheets in a campaign that is said to reach a carefully estimated total of 600 million persons per month.



The company will continue its 52-week radio representation throughout the country, utilizing 185 stations in 100 cities, with concentration on spot announcements tieing in with local first-runs.

MGM's extensive nationwide magazine coverage will be continued in all the leading weeklies and monthlies, with the two ad-columns, "The Lion's Roar" and "Picture of the Month," featured as in the past. Special full-page ads will be used for the season's most important releases.

Newspapers, considered the backbone of MGM's advertising campaigns, will be used more extensively than ever. Stress will be placed on timing of news ads and campaigns for local feature presentation. An increasingly detailed study will be made, through many channels, of all types of advertising, with the plan to obtain best possible exhibitor results.

'Deadline at Dawn' Campaign To Include Men's Magazines

National campaign on RKO's "Deadline at Dawn" has been extended to include publications directed principally at male readers. Inside Detective, Front Page Detective, True Detective, Master Detective and Official Detective magazines are augmented by such general publications as Saturday Evening Post, Liberty, Look, Pic, Time, True, Movie Story, Motion Picture, Screenland, Silver Screen, Movie Show, Movie Life, Movie Stars on Parade, Movies, Modern Screen, Movieland, Photoplay, Scren Guide, Screen Romances and Screen Stars. Combined circulation of all publication is in excess of 19 million copies, making it one of RKO's top advertising budgets.

COVERING THE TOWN. With the newspaper strike still on in Reading, Pa., when this photo was taken, Manager Larry Levy of Loew's Theatre persuaded the transit company to resurrect an old advertising car which was postered and illuminated. As it toured various sections of the city, it attracted much attention to the local engagement of MGM's "Weekend at the Waldorf."

Ace Duals Campaign For 'Main' and Short

S. L. Sorkin, RKO Keith's Theatre, Washington, put on a top campaign for his showings of "The Spanish Main" and the Frank Sinatra short, "The House I Live In" with a combination of newspaper publicity and ballyhoo exploitation on both subjects. Publicity obtained in connection with his Victory Bond show held the night before the regular opening of the films added impetus to the picture's regular run.

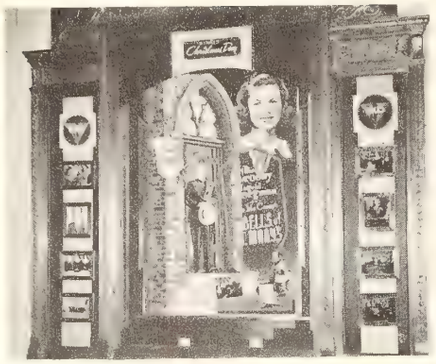
Tickets for the Victory Bond premiere were made up in the form of heralds and the house was sold out for the affair, helped by advance pictures and stories in all newspapers, which were the direct result of a luncheon and screening of the two films for dramatic critics, other representatives of the press, radio people, the clergy of all faiths and members of the Veterans Administration.

A two month's pass was offered as first prize in the regular RKO coloring contest for "The Spanish Main," for which 3000 coloring heralds were distributed in the local schools. As a newsstand tieup, 24 imprinted aprons were distributed to newsboys at busy corners, 12 reading "Coming" and the other 12 distributed during the run of the picture reading 'Now," both with appropriate copy about the film.

Direct Mail Used Widely

Direct mail was widely used on the Sinatra subject, with 200 being sent to local organizations interested in racial and religious tolerance. The Veterans Administration sent letters about the film to organizations such as the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, etc., and 100 letters reached 100 delegates of the Jewish Community Council. A picture and story about the short appeared in the Washington News Letter of the Anti-Defamation League.

Two windows in the Hecht Company department store were secured, with the windows decorated with original costumes worn by Maureen O'Hara in the film and with treasure chests of jewelry and other items characteristic of "The Spanish Main." The music department of the store also arranged for a window on the Frank Sinatra short, showing recordings of The House I Live In as sung by Sinatra. A similar display was used inside the store at the music counter.



Three months prior to opening, an impressive lobby display on the two subjects was set up and during the run of the films the theatre was colorfully decorated with transparencies on both marquee ends, instead of the usual attraction letters. Ushers and box-office windows were adorned with coat lapel badges and streamers, respectively, three weeks prior to the opening.

Teaser ads ran seven days in advance and regular radio announcements four days ahead.

The advertising, publicity and exploitation were so successful that the theatre rearranged its schedule to give one extra performance daily and two extra on Saturday, including a midnight show and one extra performance Sunday. Doors were opened earlier to care for the extra crowds and all extra shows received mention in daily advertising.—WA.

Exploitation Calendar

An attractive monthly calendar, advertising current and coming attractions for Schine's State Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., is the cooperative medium used by Manager Sam Shafer. Seeing an imperative need for exploiting films, Shafer enlisted the aid of two merchants in taking co-op ads on the bottom of the card so as to pay for the cost of the calendar. Made up very colorfully, it can be hung up and kept in front of the patron's eye.

CATCHES MOOD. This attractive display is one of several set up in the lobby of the Keith Memorial Theatre, Boston, in which the spirit and theme of RKO Radio's "The Bells of St. Mary's" has been aptly caught and presented to the predominately Catholic audiences of Boston. Script next to Crosby's head states: "The further adventures of Father O'Malley is a story of human warmth that will make your heart smile!"

Bond Stunt, Ballyhoo Sells 'Trail' in Owosso

A special exploitation contest staged in cooperation with Owosso, Michigan's leading newspaper, sparked the publicity campaign designed by Manager Howard Sweet of the Butterfield Capitol Theatre for the screening of Screen Guild Productions' "Northwest Trail." Two Victory Bonds totaling $75 were given away free by the theatre and the newspaper for the best essay on the writings of James Oliver Curwood, which resulted in huge front-page breaks prior to the opening.

Other exploitation consisted mainly of rebuilding the theatre front in the form of a log cabin, with huge photo cut-outs placed on top of the marquee; showing of a special advance trailer in the two Butterfield houses; and posting the town with heralds, window cards, and one and three sheets.

A special preview of the picture was held two days prior to the opening for over 300 "old timers" in Owosso and many friends of Curwood, who was born here. The newspaper devoted considerable amount of space to this stunt.

Look and Life Devote Pages To MGM Stars, New Films

Look magazine for January 8, now on the stands, devotes four full pages to Clark Gable and "The Harvey Girls." In the Gable layout, the MGM star, is shown in scenes from "A Free Soul," "Mutiny on the Bounty," "Gone With the Wind" and "Adventure." The three pages devoted to "The Harvey Girls" also include a half page on Cyd Charisse, ballerina, who also appears in "Ziegfeld Follies" and "Three Wise Fools."

Along the same lines, the current Life, gives a page and a half to "They Were Expendable" as its Movie of the Week.

Levey Names Kaufman to Handle 'Abilene Town' Promotion

Wolfe Kaufman has been appointed by Jules Levey as his assistant to work on current promotion on "Abilene Town," also his forthcoming "Conspiracy in Jazz."

Kaufman, who has held various posts in the industry for the past 15 years, shortly will entrain for Abilene, Kansas, to arrange details of the world premiere of "Abilene Town," United Artists release.

Noel Coward Angles Plug 'Blithe Spirit'

An extensive and well-balanced exploitation campaign for Rochester's opening of United Artists' "Blithe Spirit," was employed effectively by Lester Pollock of Loew's Rochester Theatre, using the medium of radio, newspaper, store display and direct mail.

Advance publicity program was well planned. A Noel Coward biographer prepared special feature stories which were planted well in advance with two local newspapers. A teaser trailer, a reproduction of one of the national advertisements, was made and used two weeks in advance.

Pollock then promoted window display tieups with six leading department stores and shops, liberally using star stills, attractive theatre copy and playdate credit in the display patterns. Two of the merchants were induced to partake in cooperative newspaper ads.

Uses English Mailing List

The fact that the film was British made, with an all British cast, brought the injection of direct mail into the campaign. Pollock obtained an English mailing list from the Chamber of Commerce and with it sent out regular U. S. postcards embossed with typically English atmospheric content, in an attempt to lure Anglo-American patronage.

A contest, making use of the Noel Coward tunes featured by the picture, was offered by the local radio station. Various records were played, to which the audience was asked to identify those written by Coward. The "Waltz Theme," which lends itself from the film, was introduced to Rochesterites for the first time by the Eastman Rochester Symphony Orchestra.

Bop Hope Addresses Audience Through Novel Amplifying Setup

A recent press notice from Muncie, Indiana, described an excellent stunt arranged by Vic Sicillia, city manager of the Rivoli Theatre in that city, in which their Altec Lansing "Voice of the Theatre" horn system played an important part.

Bop Hope addressed a huge audience via long distance telephone from Hollywood, for a Purple Heart Victory Bond Premiere, through the theatre amplifying system and the "Voice of the Theatre." Technical problems were handled by F. C. Dickely, Detroit manager for Altec, and Ken Ross, Altec inspector.

Springer Pleased With Showing Of Century Managers in Contest

Joseph R. Springer, general theatre manager of Century Circuit, was particularly pleased with the exceptional showing of managers in the recent "Tomorrow is Forever" contest held by International Pictures.

Winners included Leonard Freund of the Nostrand Theatre; Howard Cohn of the Midwood; Ben Mindlin of the Valley Stream; Lou Hartmann of the Park, and Walter Smith of the Grove.

Starts in Lobby

Proving that good showmanship starts in the lobby, Manager Boesel of the Palace Theatre, Milwaukee, promoted a novel, simple campaign with the run of Paramount's "Duffy's Tavern." From the House of Seagrams, distillery concern, he obtained a miniature setpiece depicting a bar and tavern. The miniature set, valued at more than $1000, was framed and then placed on display in the lobby.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

Theatre-Garage Tieup Held Business Aid

Have you ever noticed the patrons who attend your theatre by means of an automobile? Have you ever considered how this four-wheel trade could benefit both you and the local parking lot in a cooperative campaign?

This inexpensive, but nevertheless effective stunt is again finding favor with box-office minded showmen all over the country. With the priority lifted from gasoline, more and more cars are being used daily, especially by women who drive into town to shop and then take in a matinee. Consider this with the ever growing traffic and parking problem facing practically every city and town, and not only will you be able to render an appreciated service, but the goodwill built up helping parking-frustrated patrons will be invaluable.

The plan operates along the following lines:

The garage supplies three or four uniformed attendants, who are on duty at all times in front of the theatre, to park the cars of those patrons desiring the service. The usual parking fee is charged.

The garage should also be induced to shoulder expense on the distribution of throwaways announcing the tieup. These circulars should be included in the garage's monthly statement list and also on the theatre's program mailing list. Showcards plugging the service with appropriate garage, theatre and picture credit, could be placed at proper spots in the theatre and parking lot, and the same information could be dispensed by prominent 3-sheets around town.

Cooperative ads in local newspapers are suggested, with the possibility of the garage offering special services such as cleaning, lubricating and oiling the car, when brought in by a theatre patron, for special reduced prices.

In return for the above, the theatre can carry a 1-frame trailer calling attention to the service.

Train Box-Office Man

Your box-office man can be the difference in making or losing ticket sales simply by the manner in which he approaches hesitant patrons and by just what he says. If he says, "Waiting in the lobby now for seats" or "There are seats in the balcony only," he is conveying correct information, perhaps, but certainly is not convincing anyone through his rejective manner that they should come right in. If he says, instead, "There will be only a short wait in the lobby now for seats" or "No waiting for seats in the balcony" you'll find that more prospective patrons will be ready to buy seats then and there.

Fire Alarm Signal Urged

If the theatre oil-burner is automatic, have the latest devices been installed to sound an alarm or to signal if a fire starts from the oil? Insurance companies usually are more than willing to advise about the practicability of such devices and to recommend commercial companies to bid on their installation.

Examine Upright Sign

A detailed examination of the theatre's upright sign usually may be made from the theatre roof. In the inspection, look for the condition of the steel work and its method of support, giving consideration to wind strains and other destructive factors.

If It Sells, It's a Good Advertisement

By Jack Jackson

The manager, in addition to being a good executive and administrator, must be a top-grade merchandiser. The basis for good advertising, which is the tool of merchandising, is the subject of this tenth article in a series of discussions and analyses of management, and the veteran in theatre management as well as the recruit can learn much that will profit him by close study of the fundamentals and the plan of procedure for good show selling as set forth herein.

It's not often that I become so incensed that I fearlessly and rashly pick an argument with that word-wise gentleman, Mr. Webster. But recently I have been looking over so many examples of theatre advertising that so evidently were conceived and executed in accordance with Webster's definition of the word "advertise" that my dander's up and the controversy no longer can be avoided.

Mr. Webster defines "advertise" as meaning: "to turn the attention of others to; to announce; to publish."

Well, if you're one of the many who have been unimaginatively following his prescription for advertising you are in the same position as the Southern colored boy who stood among his fellows in a long line awaiting their turn at the paymaster's window of a war plant whose contracts had been cancelled. Turning to another darkie he violently protested: "Dey can't take de jobs away cause de Washington man said we wuz frozen to dis work." To which the other negro replied: "Yes, I knows, but dey's defrosting us now."

Every well-schooled and sound thinking showman knows that the word "advertise" —so far as his business is concerned—means: to forcibly and emphatically command the attention of others to; to stridently vociferate; to emblazon in public print; to shout from the house tops; to rave and rant about; to shout and thunder about; etc. etc.

In short, a real full-time showman firmly believes his advertising is incomplete and ineffective unless it so packed with punch and push that its message is as irresistible as the rolling tide of a roaring sea, and generates an uncontrollable desire to see and enjoy the attraction for which the effort is put forth.

With a half-way manager (and, I fear, there are all too many of them) it's different. He's prone to content himself with putting up an expensive gingerbread front for a side street theatre and then promptly forget all about using other mediums to let the folks know his show is there.

Don't be a half-way manager. Get on the beam. Study your particular advertising problem and then carefully plan the best and least expensive methods of reaching the greatest number of potential prospects for the kind of entertainment your theatre is offering. And, as the kind of programs and show appeals change, so should the character and methods of advertising approach. Don't waste time or money trying to sell program Westerns to the swells that live up on the hill and the gorgeously costumed classics hold little or no interest for the laborer and his family, so don't kid yourself that you can drag them in when you have that type of show.

There are a lot of mighty fine showmen discarding their khaki battle togs and again donning "civvies" preparatory to resuming their war-interrupted activities as theatre executives. And if those half-way managers who have been taking Mr. Webster's definition of "advertise" too literally want to escape the "defrosting" squad, they had better start rigid study of the planning, problems and procedure for getting their wares forcibly and effectively before prospective patrons.

To accomplish the "about face" each manager must of necessity study his own situation with a view of determining the appeal of the attraction to the potential patronage in his community. The media are many, and careful analysis is essential to determine the speediest, safest, surest and least expensive avenues of approach. Measure each contemplated activity by the infallable yard-stick applied by John Friedl.

Avoid Any Accident Possibility

In Toronto recently a jury awarded Mrs. Margaret Brown $5000 damages for injuries sustained when she mistook the cellar stair of B & F Theatres' Christie for a powder room.

It is just this type of remote possibility that causes many acidents in theatres which otherwise take every ordinary precaution against accidents and ensuing liability damages. The fact that a jury awarded monetary damages to Mrs. Brown does not necessarily indicate that the theatre involved did not take more than ordinary precautions against accident to its employes and its patrons; rather it is an indication that juries often will award damages to a complainant just because it was possible for such an accident to take place. It emphasizes, again, that careful thinking is constantly necessary to obviate any accident possibility, no matter how remote that possibility.

Shaffer's Showmanship Builds New Star, Teen-Age Patronage

Do bobby-sockers and 'teen-age patrons make good audiences? Are they as critical and as discriminating as adult audiences? Yes, definitely, claims showman Willis Shaffer of the Royal Theatre, Atchison, Kansas, who should know.

"Most theatremen take 'teen-age business for granted," said Shaffer. "In the past we have promoted free kiddie shows and special screenings for the adult trade, but the 'teen-agers, with parental grace, will attend every change of show and have been completely overlooked."

Shaffer, who hit upon the idea of screening a picture for 'teen-agers, wagered that not only had this innovation never been attempted, but that exploiteers and showmen were passing up a good bet. Said the Royal Theatre manager: "These youths comprise a large share of our most steady customers, and for the most part we pay perhaps too little attention to them. I sincerely believe that our box-office receipts will show a decided increase when we start catering to the 'teen-agers of today—our friends and business associates of tomorrow."

With this thought in mind, Shaffer contacted the local school superintendent, who supplied him with a list of groups and organizations who participated in after-school activities. This gave him accurate figures on 'teen-agers in Atchison, and with this information he invited members of the Hi-Y, Pep Club, Dramatic class, and presidents and officers of the various classes, to the advance showing.

By an arrangement with the school superintendent, Shaffer planned a ten-minute meeting of these groups which enabled him to talk to them in a body, explain the idea and invite them to the screening. "I might add," says Shaffer, "that the school officials were quite enthusiastic about the idea."

Before the showing of the film, Shaffer again addressed the group and pointed out that through their cooperation, the initial 'teen-age screening would garner a lot of publicity. He mentioned that when the film was finished, they would find comment cards in the lobby and that their comments would be used in the theatre's newspaper campaign. "I emphasized the fact that they were not required to do anything, which of course resulted in their bending over backwards to do anything possible to cooperate."

Shaffer then gifted everyone with an autographed photo of Robert Scott and stated that he was the particular star they were interested in publicizing, so would the audience please watch him very closely during the picture.

After viewing the reaction of the group, Shaffer remarked that he had yet to see a more appreciate audience. Practically everyone attending the screening made a special effort to personally convey his or her appreciation. "I am completely convinced," he predicted, "that they will sell more tickets by word of mouth than any woman's organization (with all due respect to them) ever did. These youngsters will tell their parents all about this showing, and parents will listen because they are interested in their children. Now reverse this; try to imagine how many kids would pay attention to their mothers if she mentioned some screening she had attended in the afternoon while they were in school." Shaffer also added that nothing could beat the enthusiasm of the 'teen-agers.

"The comment following the screening was nothing less than sensational," beamed Shaffer. "I got a big kick out of it because it was 'teen-age comment." What he meant was that remarks were not the usual stereotyped "wonderful picture" stuff. Instead, in modern slang, were picturesque comments like: "Hubba, Hubba, that Robert Scott really sends me"; "I want Robert Scott for Xmas" and "Oh! those beautiful dimples, just what we've been waiting for!" All which made for novel newspaper copy.

Fitting in well with the 'teen-age screening was a tieup with radio station KVAK. "I contacted the station manager," said Shaffer, "and presented the idea to him, emphasizing the point that it would give him an original program which would create local interest." The manager, sensing the advantages to the station, agreed to make a 15-minute transcription at no cost to the theatre.

At the close of the screening, the girls and boys were asked to gather on the stage, where they were interviewed by a station announcer.

"We explained that a transcription would be made, and then played back over the air later that evening.

"In order to create the proper background, which consisted of a considerable amount of 'swooning' at the mention of Scott, the program was rehearsed. The bobby-sockers got quite a bang in making the program and many of them heard their voices over the ether for the first time that evening. No need to say that film and theatre received its share of plugs."

The broadcast and screening were the "talk" for days at school and at home, which of course not only brought a smile to the face of Willis Shaffer, but resulted in heavy and well deserved revenue at the Royal Theatre box-office.

Protect Electrical Panels

If the main electric panel is located in the boiler room, it should be protected with a pair of metal, fire-resisting doors to prevent its destruction or short-circuiting from heat or fire.

Speak Softly

Loud talking in the projection room may cause annoyance to patrons in the rear of the balcony or otherwise near the booth. Caution operators to converse in normal tones.

Citations Spur Staffs In Theatre Upkeep

A citation for excellent theatre maintenance may not, at first glance, seem to be an extraordinary honor. But the way these citations are handled by Rick Ricketson, division head of the Inter-Mountain chain, has inspired staffs in theatres throughout the chain to maintain their operations in such excellent shape that the Rick Ricketson Maintenance Club Citations are eagerly sought after, and the presentation of a six months' award usually is the occasion for a staff blow-out or party of one kind or another.

Providing tangible evidence of management's appreciation of excellence in maintenance, Ricketson awards these citations to theatres which qualify for them after rigid inspections. District managers provide the inspections during periodic visits to the theatres, after which they send to Ricketson thorough-going house-inspection reports, which have come to be known as reports on "white glove tests."

At the end of each six-month period the reports are reviewed, and spotless theatres are presented with certificates which state, "Rick Ricketson Maintenance Club Citation. This theatre is hereby cited by RRMC for its patriotic devotion to the war effort, for its cleanliness and maintenance in the interest of public safety and preservation of essential equipment, for its courteous and efficient war-time service, and for its contribution to the civilian morale. A symbol of perfection in theatre operation." The certificate, signed by Ricketson, bears the date of its issuance and states the length of time for which the award has been made.

The Maintenance Club Citations have been a long-time custom of the Ricketson group of theatres and have become so valued that staffs voluntarily pitch in to make their theatres clean. Usually, the crew has itself a party of sorts, winding up the chores with a feed, a juke-box party, dancing on the stage or in the lobby and in general just having a swell time. Nothing is forced, ordered or compulsory—and they love it!

Individual theatre managers can instill in their staffs great pride in accomplishment when such accomplishment is recognized in this or in a similar manner, particularly since the accomplishment itself is such a simple thing. A little thought probably will give theatremen an idea how they can adapt this to their own operations.

Wattage Reduction Possible

A check with lighting engineers of the local electrical utility company will reveal the possibility of decreasing wattage in marquee lighting and theatre fronts, with the same or nearly the same results as before, should illumination surrounding the theatre (new stores, new street lighting, etc.) suggest the possibility. This would reduce monthly power bills.

Tell About the Heat

During the summer no manager would fail to take advantage of the opportunity to advertise the coolness of his theatre, by whatever system he cools it. By the same token it might be smart to tell patrons about the no-draft, comfortable heating system now installed in the Blank Theatre—or is this too obvious?

Protect Marquee Letters

Marquee letters should be kept in large, mobile file to protect them from ravages of weather and to permit the man who changes them, to have immediate access to the letters he needs. The top of the marquee may be convenient for storage, but the letters piled atop of each other become damaged and snow and sleet add nothing to their attractiveness.

(that talented showman and big man of the Minnesota Amusement Co.) "Will it sell tickets?" If it will, about how many —how much will it cost in money, materials and in effort expended—and does the potential return justify the gross expense? If the answer is "yes" go after it thoroughly and enthusiastically and, if it doesn't measure up, continue the noggin-nudging until another and more promising idea is born.

Any attempt properly to set up (by analysis and synthesis) a prospective advertising campaign for YOUR theatre would be highly presumptuous and undoubtedly have as many "holes" as a pasteboard rabbit in a Coney Island shooting gallery. However the normal picture-to-picture advertising procedure of the average theatre varies only slightly, and breaking it down into a study chart may possibly assist in getting the slide rule and calipers adjusted for use on the more difcult and unusual forms of patron approach.

Everybody uses newspaper space, so let's start with the ads.

What is the regular budget? Does this picture warrant an increase or is it sufficiently presold to justify a reduction?

With that question decided, the next step should be a study of the story synopsis in the press sheet and a check of the reviews in the trade press to determine what qualities the picture contains that would prove most attractive bait for the customer to which your theatre caters. An examination of the trailer will very often provide catchline material far more intriguing than the press book or the reviews will suggest. Remember you are counting on the newspaper to reach the greatest majority of your customers, so be very careful of what angle of the picture's entertainment quotient you choose to emphasize. Make sure that (so far as you are able to determine from your experience and a close study of the likes and dislikes of your patrons) that the angle you select is tailored to fit their preferences. If there happen to be side-issues that have particular appeal for the country club set or some other faction, treat that angle separately and approach it directly. Don't let it creep into the general advertising layouts intended for the overall appeal.

Always keep in mind the fact that motion pictures are made, in their entirety, from recipes holding nothing other than various mixtures of recognized and proved stimulents of human emotions. Human emotions are like taxes—everybody has 'em, only some have 'em different than others. Your job is to determine what emotional appeal the picture possesses that promises greatest response from your customer group. Write your catch-lines and select your illustrations accordingly, and your newspaper ad has far greater chance of returning the profit dollars expected than the slipshod product of slam-bang clipping of the first press-book ad that happens to fit the space requirement.

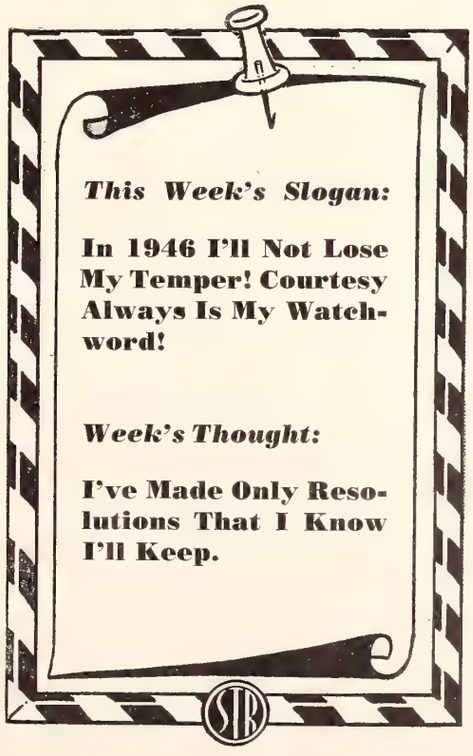
We're going backwards a bit, but, how about the screen trailer? Would an off-stage scream, a moving shadow, a side-stage display with intermittent lighting, a color-wheel effect, a prepared travel-ghost or some other novel supplement provide the kind of emphasis that would prove patron-pulling?

Is it possible to revamp the theatre front display so that it emphasizes the selected angle of customer appeal in a way that will make the observer really want to dig down for the admission price?

Can animation be provided by the use of flags, hanging flyers, (made from three window cards stapled into hexagon form) a dummy hung from the flagpole, a home-made windmill or some other equally simple and inexpensive device to agitate the curiosity of the folks at the corner?

Does the attraction lend itself to changing the color of the soffit lights to get attention from the night-time crowds?

If you happen to work a poster route, is it possible that a change to block paper would be compellingly effective? Or, if you've been using block paper, how about going to illustrated lithos on this one? How long since the boards or stands have been cleaned and the borders blanked? Painted? Have the locations deteriorated? Are they off the line of new travel?—war conditions have made many formerly desirable stops obsolete. Try to get all of your small paper (ones-threes-sixes-cards) on live locations. I mean the sides or fronts of occupied buildings. Grocery stores, drug stores, etc., are the best spots because the people of a community visit those spots most frequently. Try to get the merchant to use his passes on the first day of the picture so he will be able to tell his patrons about it.



Your window card route and placement in windows is also subject to careful analysis if you would get the utmost from the money expended. Make a study of the most traveled side of the streets of your town—Woolworth does—and place your window cards accordingly. Keep in mind that most people walk on the right hand side of the sidewalk so try to have your window cards set so they will be in the line of vision for the longest possible period of time. It is advisable to occasionally change these from illustrated lithos to block letter and vice versa.

If you prepare any special advance displays for use inside the theatre, be sure they are so designed that they lend themselves to use currently with the attraction either on the theatre front or in some merchant's window. Don't waste money on one-time shots if it can be avoided.

There is a new—it came to the front very fast during the war—arm of advertising whose use is still the subject of lively controversy in some quarters show business, but which justifies lengthy discussion. Radio seems to be a sort of "problem child" to many theatre men, and their experiences vary so greatly that it is entitled to treatment as an individual unit of advertising. Space limitation forbids further discussion at this time, so I will attempt to diagnose that media in a forthcoming installment of this series.

A very famous advertiser once said: "Successful advertising consists of drawing the fewest possible blanks." Try to make every shot count. Fight for the right word in your ad; the right location for your posters; the right spot for your window cards; the most advantageous presentation of every unit of your advertising program, and it will be impossible for YOU to draw many blanks, because the whole world is interested in the glamorous, emotion-stirring merchandise you sell.

A Tip or Two Every Week for Your Bulletin Board

Advocate Cellar Check

Coal furnaces are in existence in many theatres and in these operations a check should be made to see if the ash hoists are in good condition, that the coal storage bins are fire-proofed and that the ashes are removed often enough to prevent accident-inviting accumulation.

Eliminate Fire Hazards.

The theatre cellar and janitor's room are natural spots for accumulated rubbish, waste paper and just plain dirt. A regular check by the theatre manager will eliminate these fire hazards.

HARRISBURG

The State's new unemployment partial payment and low earnings report system will become effective at once, according to an act passed at the recent session of the Legislature. The pay affects exhibitors, owners and managers who employ part-time help. Blanks have been sent to all employers, who must fill in the required information regarding part-time help. Pennsylvania, one of the last states to enlist in the partial employment benefit plan, has adopted a simplified system, a State Department of Labor and Industry spokesman said. Under the new system a part-time employe would be eligible for benefit if earning less than his weekly benefit amount. An example given is that if the unemployment benefit would entitle him to $12 a week and he earns $15, a report would not have to be submitted. However, if he earned $10, a report would be required.

Special forms have been printed, and will be sent upon request, but employers may use their own payroll envelope or check stub forms provided they contain sufficient information. The state will approve or mark for necessary changes any payment form submitted by employers. However, where there are only a few part-time employes, it is thought the employers may wish to use the blanks printed by the Commonwealth.

Exhibitors of the area agreed that Christmas 1945 was the "worst for business in many years, and certainly during the war." Houses were scarcely occupied during the day, and at night, after a sheet of ice coated the highways, it almost wasn't worth being open, Sam Gilman, Loew's Regent, said.

New Year's Eve brought a series of outstanding pictures to vie for patronage, which included: "They Were Expendable" at Loew's Regent; "Bells of St. Mary's," Senate; "San Antonio," State and "Stork Club," Colonial. All had midnight showings and all opened Monday, to run for a week or more if necessary.

ST. LOUIS

All of the Fanchon & Marco-St. Louis Amusement Company houses, with the exception of the Shubert, were closed Christmas Eve to give employes an opportunity to spend that day and night at home with their families. The Shubert remained open because its current attraction is "Pinocchio," an ideal picture for the Christmas season from the children's standpoint.

Fred Wehrenberg, head of the Wehrenberg-Kaimann Circuit, the second largest in St. Louis, said that none of its houses were closed Christmas Eve. "We have found through the years the parents in St. Louis use the motion picture theatre as the place to send children on Christmas Eve, while Santa Claus calls at their house to set up and trim the Christmas tree. For that reason our houses remained open."

On New Year's Eve practically all of the 110 theatres in the city and county observed their usual custom of past years by presenting special bills at advanced prices. These shows ran for four or five hours with nothing repeated and were designed to help the patrons properly observe the passing of the old year and the coming of the new year.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of the Fanchon & Marco houses, now in New York, plans to return to St. Louis early in January.

Harry Crawford, manager of the Missouri; Al Wheeler, manager of the Ambassador, and Dave Berger headed a committee from the St. Louis Variety Club that carried a huge Christmas tree and trimmings to Bellefontaine Farms to entertain the boys in that institution.

University City's Third Ward, headed by Bill Harvey, gave a children's Christmas Party at the Beverly Theatre, December 22. Every youngster in the ward was invited to attend. Henry Halloway owns the theatre.

A fire of undetermined origin caused damage estimated at $5000 at the Avenue Theatre. The fire started in a wing in a pile of cotton batting, used for repairing seat upholstery. Most of the damage was from smoke and water and was confined to stage properties and to the contents of a room used by the stagehands. The theatre is owned and operated by Dave Komm. The house has continued to operate.

"Voice of the Wind" opened an engagement at Ruby S'Renco's Art Theatre December 22.

Jimmy Frisina, chief booker and buyer for the Frisina Amusement Circuit, returned recently from the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where he underwent a checkup. Speaking of the Frisina Amusement Company, the report persisted in informed circles that the circuit would, on January 1, add to its houses the Orpheum and Star in Hannibal, Mo. It is understood that H. A. Scheidker of Hannibal will continue to be identified with the management of the two houses. Dominic Frisina, president, and J. B. Giachetto, general manager of the Frisina Amusement Company, have been in Hannibal. They are said to have been accompanied by their legal adviser.

The Frisina Amusement Company plans extensive improvements to the Arcadia and Roxy, Olney, Ill., where Vint Helling is the resident manager for the circuit. The Arcadia is to have its front modernized and will also sport a new marquee, while the Roxy is to have important alterations and improvements as part of the circuit's postwar program.

Local independent exhibitors are reaching out into new fields of conquest. Last week, a group of officials of Associated Circuit bought the Film Bldg. This week, they added the Capitol Bank to their holdings. Reported purchasers of the bank are Meyer Fine, Sam Stecker, Abe Kramer, Max Lefkowitch, Jerome Friedlander and other local industrialists.

Imperial Pictures, newest local independent exchange, which was organized some five years ago by M. M. Jacobs, passes to new owners next week. New owners are Bernard Rubin, former prominent film man just released from the Army and John Urbansky, Jr., son of John Urbansky, treasurer of the Associated Circuit and owner of the Jennings Theatre. Jacobs plans to devote his time to his theatre and allied interests. Rubin announces that Lee Goldberg of Popular Pictures in Cincinnati, will be affiliated with him as buyer of product. Imperial Pictures has concentrated on re-issues of "A" pictures. The new owners plan to expand so as to distribute new product in this area.

Harry Schreiber, RKO Theatres division manager, has announced the Palace in Cleveland, which went into a straight picture policy on November first, will revert to a combination program for the one week of January 17. Count Basie will be the attraction, aided by an all-colored cast of singers and dancers. Thereafter, the Palace will go back to straight pictures. Admission scale will be upped for the week of January 17.

Columbia exchange is getting all ready to celebrate the company's silver anniversary. All of the walls in the exchange are being painted silver in honor of the occasion.

Gregory Vojae, Columbia booker before he joined the Navy four years ago, was in town for the holidays. He is out of service and has rejoined Columbia as an auditor. His initial assignment is in the Chicago area.

Lester Zucker, Columbia branch manager and distributor chairman for the March of Dimes, held a meeting of distributor personnel last Monday in the Statler Hotel. All theatres in the Greater Cleveland area will participate in the March of Dimes collection, it is understood.

J. S. Jossey went to his old home town of Forsyth, Georgia, for the holidays. After that, he will travel through the south in the interest of his exploitation picture, "Mom and Dad."

MILWAUKEE

The Portage, Portage, Wis., has had the "Voice of the Theatre" installed, according to Manager R. D. Hutchings. The first use was made of the new sound system December 9, when "Story of GI Joe" played a return engagement in the house. The system is said to be the second installed in Wisconsin since the beginning of the war, the only other theatre in this state which had this system installed since the war being the Wisconsin, Milwaukee. There was no interruption in the schedule at the Portage while the system was installed. Made by Altec Lansing Corp., Chicago, it employs a speaker unit of about 104 by 108 inches, which produces sound much more pleasing to the ear than pre-war sound systems which most movie houses are still using. It is claimed that all distortion in loud climaxes is eliminated with its use. Regular patrons of the Portage, accustomed to the old sound system, remarked favorably after the Voice of the Theatre was installed.

Edward Paul of Sturgeon Bay, Wis., has announced the proposed erection of a new theatre soon. It will be called the Bay. Foeller, Schober, Berners, Safford & Jahn of Green Bay, are now drawing up the plans, which show that the new structure will be 53 feet wide and 145 feet in length, all fireproof construction, with 760 seats on the main floor and 160 in a balcony.

William Glodosky has resigned his position as manager of the Stanley, Stanley, Wis., operated by the Heywood Amusement Company, after having held it for more than 13 years. Captain Henry Thoreson has been named as his successor.

William F. Loibl has sold his interest in the Cedarburg, Cedarburg, Wis., to Cedar Theatres, Inc., the latter company now owning the Rivoli. The new owners advise that the Cedarburg will remain closed until it can be completely remodeled, making it more fireproof.

Melrose, Wis., a town of about 500, is to have a movie theatre second to none outside of the larger cities of the state. It will be called the Rose and will be erected by H. W. Ruecker, of Chicago.

The Gem, Platteville, Wis., is to be remodeled as soon as material is available. August C. Berkholtz, West Bend, Wis., is the owner and Myles E. Belongia and Urban F. Peacock are the architects, the latter being located in Milwaukee. Plans are now being drawn.

Plans are being prepared by Milwaukee architects for a new theatre to be started in Grafton, Wis., by spring, to be known as the Grafton. It will be owned by M & E Theatre Co., Milwaukee. The building will be 50 x 90 and will have air conditioning, a warm air heating system and modern insulation.

Although Madison, Wis., was thought to have enough show houses, the crowds attending those now operating convinced a large theatre operating company, name unknown at present, to start another neighborhood show house. It is to be located on Monroe Street and is to be started in the spring. As this is a good residential area, three theatre operators were said to be looking around as far back as Pearl Harbor time for one or two additional neighborhood houses, but, of course, the war stopped further building. It is claimed that at least two properties for prospective show houses were leased at that time, but as even remodeling was out of the question, the idea was dropped for the time being. Now it is definitely known that at least one such new show house will be started in a few weeks. Rumor has it that it will cost about $125,000, seat about 1000 and be a very modern structure.

WASHINGTON

Winners of annual awards of the Motion Picture Salesmen's Clubs of Washington were: John Fox of the Marva and Fox, Pocomoke, Md., $500 bond; M. Wolf, Charleston, W. Va., $200 bond; M. Pohl, Laurel, Md., $100 bond; K-B Amusement Co., Washington, $50 bond; Hippodrome, Baltimore, $50 bond; Elco, Portsmouth, Va., $50 bond; A. Ornoff, Lenox, Norfolk, Va., $25 bond; D. C. Query, Lincoln, Marion, Va., $25 bond.

Sidney Lust of the Lust Theatres and the Bethesda Kiwanis Club have joined forces to sponsor a series of free children's matinees on Saturdays for the Baptist Home for Children, at Lust's Bethesda Theatre. Plans are also being made for clothing matinees at the Bethesda as part of the Victory Clothing Drive, January 7 to 31.

Babe Coval, formerly here and later in Trinidad, B.W.I. for Warners, is now in Toronto recuperating. The climate did not agree with Babe and he lost considerable weight. In the interim, he made a trip out West and business acquaintances say he now looks more like his old self.

Advance sales for New Year's Eve performances was tremendous, with Loew's sold out on the 27th and the other four first run houses also over the top early. Nearly every cinema in the city had vaudeville of some nature or other to back up the film fare. There was no price increase anywhere.

The five first runs showed as follows: Loew's, "The Dolly Sisters"; Capitol, "State Fair"; Palace, "The Stork Club"; Princess, "George White's Scandals" and at the Imperial, "I Love a Band Leader."

Regal Films recently held its annual office party, not to be confused with the Yule and New Year variety. For the event, Hilly Cass had a piano brought in, but at the last minute it was necessary for a tuner to hi-tail it over to tighten up the odd keys.

Herb Mathers of Empire-Universal is busy preparing for the influx of films due from France. The company plans to go after the Quebec provincial market in a big way. There are 30 pictures on the way over, all of which have been produced since the industry got started following the invasion. There are a few films which were produced before and during the occupation also on the way. E-U will continue to use dubs on English productions and is pleased with the success achieved to date. Best spots are Quebec City and the Orpheum here. To handle the special crew doing promotion, Larry Druxerman will come down from Toronto where he has been for the past two years. He is a brother of Dave Druxerman, manager of His Majesty's.

In Ottawa the aldermen are squawking quite some about movies not considered conducive to good morals. They have urged that advertising carry a note designating whether the pix are for adult, child or general consumption. The main complaint is that there are too many advance posters showing the use of firearms, said being particularly offensive if they are pointed at someone. They claim if steps are not taken, the situation will result in an increase in juvenile delinquency.

The Christmas week was not a good one for theatres here, with family celebrations keeping theatres empty. A flock of turkeys were given away in prizes to the few who ventured to attend the houses. A tremendous New Year's Eve with capacity audiences, however, was the order of the day, which made up partially for the wounds of the preceding week.

Christmas parties were held at Famous-Players, Odeon, Empire-Universal and the Film Exchange Union.

A further request has been made by the industry on behalf of theatres and the cinematographs branch of the Province of Saskatchewan, for the elimination of censorship fees on subsequent prints as a means of maintaining present methods of censorship and shipping. The reason for the request is that the extra cost of shipping all prints from Winnipeg to Regina to be censored is too much. Previously it was all done in Winnipeg.

The Surrey Junior Chamber of Commerce is planning a 450-seat $15,000 house at Cloverdale, British Columbia. The area is a farming community 26 miles from Vancouver. Presently, patrons have to go to either White Rock or Lengley Prairie, both six miles away. A new house will also be built by Vancouver interests at Ladner, British Columbia, which will do away with the presently outdated upstairs theatre, looked on with disfavor by the Fire Department.

Variety Club, Projectionist Plays Santa

With Santa Claus having a bit of tough sledding in Grand Rapids, Mich., because of the heavy Yuletide demand for his services, Projectionist Jack Dolph of the Center Theatre and Clive R. Waxman, chairman of the Heart of Variety Committee, staged a plan to help the old fellow.

Dolph has a spare-time hobby wherein he employs woodworking machinery to make toys which his wife paints. Accordingly, he asked Variety Club's Chief Barker Walter Norris if his organization could distribute the toys to the kiddies who needed them. With Norris responding enthusiastically in the affirmative, Dolph and Waxman set up a screening of MGM's "Son of Lassie" at the Blodgett Hospital for Crippled Children, where the children received 50 of Dolph's wooden toys. Eye witnesses declare that the screening and toys provided the youngsters with the happiest Christmas they'd had in a long, long time.

PORTLAND

With the lifting of the ban in part on building materials, a half hundred theatres in the Portland trade area are being built or being remodeled. This is due in part to a number of changes in ownership of suburban theatres, which are getting a small supply of new equipment and putting in new and much needed building materials.

A wave of influenza is just now sweeping Oregon and Washington, which together with Christmas shopping, has put a crimp in theatre attendance.

TORONTO

Two of Canada's leading film critics, Roly Young of the Toronto Globe and Mail and Jack Karr of the Toronto Star, have given special attention to documentary features in picking their best films of 1945. Young played up "The Fighting Lady" and "The True Glory," as well as "Wilson," which he classed as partly documentary. Karr selected two groups and, in the factual category, he listed "The Fall of Berlin," "Fighting Lady," "The True Glory" and "We Accuse." Karr's entertainment list, in alphabetical order, comprised: "Anchors Aweigh," "Blithe Spirit," "Colonel Blimp," "Murder, My Sweet," "The Princess and the Pirate," "A Song to Remember," "State Fair," "The Story of GI Joe," "The Way Ahead" and "Wilson."

Two doors away from the Belsize Theatre in North Toronto, the slaying of Meyer Tobias by gangsters took place in his store, and it was Rita Munro, cashier of the theatre, who gave the alarm by phoning the police and a doctor. She also provided the information that the wife of the victim had entered the theatre only a couple of minutes before the shooting. Mrs. Tobias was allowed to remain in her theatre seat for practically an hour during which time the police studied the scene. Manager Ed Collins of the Belsize also used good judgment in keeping the news from the audience.

Lawrence Ryan, assistant manager of the Biltmore, Oshawa, had a crime experience in which he figured in a hero role. After everybody had left the theatre at midnight he was making the rounds for a final checkup, when he was accosted by a gunman in the balcony. Ryan refused to hand over his money or open the safe and the thug dashed from the theatre.

The Hillcrest, a neighborhood house in Northwest Toronto, underwent a face-lifting job and was re-opened in all its brightened glory before the close of the year. It is operated as a unit of the 20th Century Theatres Circuit.

Manager L. E. Osier of the Biltmore, Oshawa, had three morning shows for juveniles in a row, thus outdoing the many other exhibitors who were content with one special performance for the kids. Entirely separate from the regular program for December 27-29, the feature of the early show each day was "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Manager Al Perly of the Midtown and Manager D. Baecher of the Circle, both of Toronto, combined in promoting a "Cartoon Party" for the youngsters during the school-holiday week.

Toronto's first-run theatres did not bring in a different picture this year for the New Year's Eve midnight shows. They adopted the policy of playing the regular program for the extra show and running continuously until closing time around 2:30 a.m. Higher prices were not charged for the performance starting at 12 o'clock. In past years, the theatres had advance sales, special prices, different attractions and noise-makers.

Theatre managers reported generally better business the day after Christmas than on the actual holiday. Most of the stores and offices were closed December 26, people had recovered from Christmas feasting and, besides, the weather on Christmas was not pleasant. Some theatres staged midnight shows on the night of Christmas Day rather than on Christmas Eve, and found this arrangement paid nicely at the wicket.

NEW YORK

New York exchanges this past week contracted little business and from the visiting viewpoint, were like a morgue, as most exhibitors remained at home or at their theatres and salesmen left them alone. A son, Jeffrey Goldsoll, is owner of Budd & Co., jewelers, and in recent years, "Daddy" Goldsoll had been associated with his son in the firm. Goldsoll is survived by another son, Myron Gray Goldsoll, New York City; two daughters, Mrs. Madolyn Levit, Charleston, West Virginia, and Mrs. Irene Sachs, Chicago, and three grand-children.

Several hundred persons in the Saturday matinee audience at the Hartman Theatre were oblivious to three pieces of fire equipment and a police safety car that responded to an alarm. The alarm came after a spectator reported he smelled smoke, which firemen traced to a piece of smoldering waste paper that had been ignited by a cigaret in the women's rest room.

Joe E. Brown and General Robert S. Beightler, commander of Ohio's famed 37th Division, were reunited here during Brown's appearance in "Harvey." The stage and screen comedian called Gen. Beightler out of the audience and presented him to the home town folks. In turn, the General revealed that Joe killed two Japs on northern Luzon last summer. Joe also accepted the General's invitation to ride in a lead tank, as the Buckeyes took the Luzon village of Bambang.

Heart committee of the Variety Club, headed by Leo Yassenoff, staged an early morning Christmas party for children at Nightingale Cottage. There were individual presents for each boy and girl in addition to baskets of fruit, cookies, candy and nuts. A western was shown following the distribution of gifts. Other members who worked on the holiday party included Lou Holleb, George Anagnost, Walter Miles, Leo Haenlein and Harry Simons.

Betty Jane Hiner, Ashland, Ohio, co-ed at Ohio State University, is on her way to Hollywood for a voice audition with Columbia. The 19-year-old music student, who was graduated from Ohio State at the autumn quarter commencement, is going to the film capital with great confidence in her ability to make good. Until a few weeks ago, when the offer came, she had planned advanced musical study in New York City.

Dr. Wayne Brehm, chairman of the board of trustees of the Franklin County Memorial Auditorium, said that the board's decision about a site for the $4,500,000 structure would be made by the end of January. The favored site, on West Broad Street at the end of the Broad Street Bridge, contains nine acres and would cost an estimated $500,000.

Along the Main Stem: "The Bells of St. Mary's" was booked for a full week at the Palace, rather than the usual four days; it's predicted the film will be around the Palace and Grand most of January; Claud Stevens is the new daytime doorman at the Ohio; Betty Dunnick, relief cashier at the Ohio, is the new full-time how-many girl at the Palace; colds and flu have seriously depleted local theatre staffs; Joseph Holleran, Ohio assistant, was laid up for a week with the flu.

PHILADELPHIA

Harold O. Hogan of the Warner sound department was sworn in as a full naval commander just before he started his terminal leave. He is now back at work in the sound department.

Bobby Bien, former member of the Warner Theatres publicity department and now a traveling manager with the USO Hospital Circuit, was a holiday visitor. He reached town in time to attend the Warner Club Christmas party.

Ronald Anthony is the name of the new born son to Pete and Laura Magazzu in the Hazelton State Hospital recently. Pete is one of the well-known exhibitors in the coal regions.

Helen Mahoney, Warner Club secretary, has been out ill.

Morton Sablosky, son of Abe Sablosky, Philadelphia circuit head, has become engaged to Elayne Lustgarten of Jackson Heights, Long Island.

The new attraction sign at the Savar, Camden, has been getting plenty of attention from the customers. Even the officials from Warners' Stanley came to give it the onceover.

Judge Varbalow of the Savar Amusement Co. had to give away his cocker spaniel because his children were allergic to the hair of the animal. The first week the dog joined his new family he was taken to Florida for a vacation. Who ever said anything about a dog's life?

Elmer Hollander of the Stanley Warner film buying department, has resigned. He will become affiliated with PRC.

Dick Kirsch, former manager of the Queen, Wilmington, who had been stationed on Iwo Jima with the Army Signal Corps, was home for the holidays, according to his sister, Sara Kirsch, of the Universal billing department.

Harry Brillman, Film Classics office manager, is back at work after a tough bout with pneumonia.

Frank L. McNamee, prominent theatreman, last week turned down an opportunity to become a contender for the chairmanship of the Democratic State Committee to succeed David L. Lawrence, mayor-elect of Pittsburgh. Although it was almost certain that McNamee would get the job, he gave the press of private business as the reason for declining the offer.

Dave Weinster has moved his affiliation to the Ambassador Theatre.

Labe Neidorf, who left for Army service several years ago, has been discharged and is now the assistant manager at the Midway Theatre.

Anita Felt, daughter of Louis Felt, prominent theatreman locally, is now studying dramatics in New York.

Morris Dovberg, manager at the Allegheny, was operated on this week for the removal of a growth at the end of his spine.

Orpheum H. Fischer, architect and husband of Marian Anderson, the famous singer, is reported designing a theatre for his brother-in-law John Hopkins, a theatre operator in Wilmington, Del.

MEMPHIS

For the first time in the history of the Loew's State midnight shows for the benefit of the Commercial-Appeal-American Legion Christmas Basket Fund, the house was sold out here. Bill Kemp, manager, worked hard and sent his employes out to sell tickets in the stores. The capacity crowd saw a picture, two bands and vaudeville acts. With admission set at 60 cents, the Christmas Basket Fund benefited by slightly more than $1250.

M. A. Lightman, Jr., who has returned from service, has purchased a new home.

The board of directors of the Memphis Variety Club selected Herbert Kohn, general manager of Malco Theatres as chief barker, to replace M. A. Lightman, president of Malco, who held the post for some time. Tom Kirk, branch manager of Republic, was named assistant chief barker; J. A. Prichard, Universal branch manager, second assistant chief barker; Bailey Prichard, branch manager of Monogram, dough guy, and Ed Sapinsley, Malco city manager, property master.

Jim Barnes has been appointed manager of the Warner here, replacing Col. Howard Waugh, who left the first of the year to go to Mexico City to enter production. Before entering service, Barnes was one of the youngest managers in the south, being manager of the Warner under Colonel Waugh before he was 18 years of age.

Bernhard Signs Romantic Leads

Producer Jack Bernhard has signed Virginia Grey and Kent Taylor for the romantic leads in Universal's mystery-comedy, "Notorious Gentleman," with Charles Barton directing. Jane Adams, Milburn Stone, Danny Morton, John Litel and Samuel S. Hinds were assigned feature roles in the film.

Nadell Joins STR As Technical Editor

Aaron Nadell

Aaron Nadell, long associated with the industry as a writer on technical subjects concerned with projection, theatre construction and equipment, this week joined SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW'S editorial staff. Mr. Nadell will serve as Technical Editor, a post in which he will devote the major part of his time and talents to the editing of this publication's special technical service, The Motion Picture Theatre, Equipment and Maintenance, published every fourth week, and will make his bow as editor of that feature with the issue of February 2.

Nadell has been closely associated with technical phases of the motion picture theatre since 1928. His articles on various phases of technology have appeared frequently in SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW and other publications in the industry. He is the author of "Projecting Sound Pictures," "Understanding Theatre Television" and other books dealing with theatre technics; and was F. H. Richardson's collaborator in preparing the sixth and seventh editions of Richardson's "Blue-book of Projection."

During the year preceding America's entry into the war, Nadell was editor of "International Projectionist." After some months with the Army he transferred to the merchant marine with which he saw service overseas, and incidentally had opportunity to study the equipment and methods of European theatres.

In his new post, Nadell returns to his first love of keeping himself and his readers thoroughly abreast of the latest technical developments in all the physical departments of the theatre.

'Abilene' Premiere January 14

Jules Levey's "Abilene Town" will have its world premiere in Abilene, Kansas, January 14 at the Plaza. The premiere will be attended by Ann Dvorak, Randolph Scott and Rhonda Fleming, principal members of the cast. Levey, now on the coast, also will be present at the opening.

Performance —any year—with RCA Brenkert Projectors

BACKED by more than thirty years of experience in the design and manufacture of motion picture equipment, the RCA Brenkert Projector has been engineered for the best in performance, simplicity of operation and long life.

Among its many outstanding design features is the double shutter which reduces flicker to a minimum and permits a 20% gain in light on the screen. Less heat reaches the film in the RCA Brenkert Projector since both shutter blades are located between the arc lamp and the aperture. Specially designed guide strips reduce film weave to a minimum.

Dependable operation of the intermittent—"heart of the projector"—is assured by high precision manufacture. Large bearing surfaces and continuous automatic lubrication insure long life and freedom from lubrication worries. For the year's best performance—any year—order RCA Brenkert Projectors today.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

Peak Production Outlook Clouded by Labor, Price, Material Problems in 1946

A prosperous New Year is our wish for you and from all indications it will be just that in spades. Despite indications of labor-management bickering, price control uncertainties, prospects of unemployment, building material shortages and restrictions, we have a hunch that 1946 will have a very happy ending for all parties concerned. The motion picture industry has thrived despite depressions and it is not difficult to recall what a beaut the last one was. Unemployed people turn to the movie theatre in their idleness for a moral uplift. Movies are the poor man's holiday diversion and even the well padded pocketbook toters gor for screen entertainment with equal enthusiasm. The box-office till should jingle-jangle-jingle throughout 1946, come what may. People have filled the mattress with long green and it will keep coming out pretty consistently.

Manufacturers of motion picture equipment are expanding their facilities for increased production and much of their more experienced personnel which was absorbed by war industry are trickling back to the old job. Inefficient employes will have to produce or else and the attitude of employers is generally on a 'let's get down to business and quit this kidding around' basis. Production, production and still more production is the watchword. General Precision Equipment Corp. recently announced acquisition of a new plant from General Motors at Bloomfield, N. J. which will provide the International Projector Corp., a subsidiary, 150,000 sq. ft. of floor space for the consolidation of manufacturing activities. I.P.C. make Simplex Projectors and Sound Equipment.

From Chicago came word that Erwin G. Fredrick, theatrical and industrial architect is readying plans for a big new plant on a site adjoining Motiograph's Plant No. 1 on West Lake Street. Construction of this new Motiograph plant will make possible a consolidation of that company's manufacturing activities under one roof instead of in the three present widely separated units. This new plant will contain a private theatre for testing projection and sound equipment under operating conditions, is expected to be completed by mid-1946, enable trebled production of the company's line. The Motiograph-Mirrophonic sound system line has been expanded to include models utilizing the Voice of the Theatre loudspeaker systems. All of the ten models are based on Western Electric engineering designs.

The carpet and seat industries are just getting into stride and there can be a very considerable increase in available production for delivery during the year. Similarly, other manufacturing lines which are used by this industry will enjoy improved supply and increased production with many new articles of particular usefulness making their appearance in the dealers showcases.

Fire Deaths Laid to Acrolein

Of interest to picture theatres owners throughout the country is the report of Harvard Medical School showing that laboratory tests have at last produced the cause of the 499 deaths in the famous Boston, Mass., Cocoanut Grove disaster in 1942.

These tests show that acrolein, whose vapors are extremely irritating and highly toxic, was present in the artificial leather used in chairs and benches and that it also has been present in many other public buildings including night clubs, theatres, auditoriums and even churches. They indicate that the acrolein, which is derived in liquid form through dehydration of glycerol, probably came from an oil or plasticiser used in cellulose nitrate in the manufacture of leather to make the material soft and flexible and to give it a glossy sheen. It is claimed that the discovery of acrolein in the leather explains most of the deaths in the Cocoanut Grove fire, for few of the bodies were charred or burned.

Proofs that the public in the Boston area at least has become extremely safety-conscious comes daily to the Massachusetts State Department of Safety in the form of complaints and suggestions from various citizens indicating that it is not only the scientists who are interested in the cause of the disaster of three years ago. With no complaint owners of theaters, hotels and other public places in Boston have spent more than $2,000,000 on approved safety devices. The legal seating capacity of places of assembly has been drastically cut. Under the impetus given by the Cocoanut Grove horror, the state is now on its way to a system of building an inspection regulations that will be the most drastic, exacting and workable in the nation.

Commissioner Ralph Stokes of the State Department of Public Safety said, "There has been one hundred per cent co-operation from the owners of all theatres in Massachusetts, many of whom were compelled to spend large sums of money adding safety devices and new equipment. One large theater chain alone has spent more than $325,000 in this safety campaign. Individual theatres have appropriated as much as $100,000. At least 500 tons of new iron went into new fire escapes for theatres and halls.

Science Museum Awards Plaque

The Certificate of Merit of the New York Museum of Science and Industry, Rockefeller Center, was presented to William C. DeVry, president of the DeVry Corporation of Chicago. The presentation was made by Robert P. Shaw, director of the museum in connection with the opening of an elaborate Navy exhibit of wartime developments which include the motion picture equipment developed by the DeVry organization for both Army and Navy. The inscription on the Certificate reads in part: "In recognition of the organization's outstanding achievement in the development of motion picture equipment for use in training and enter-

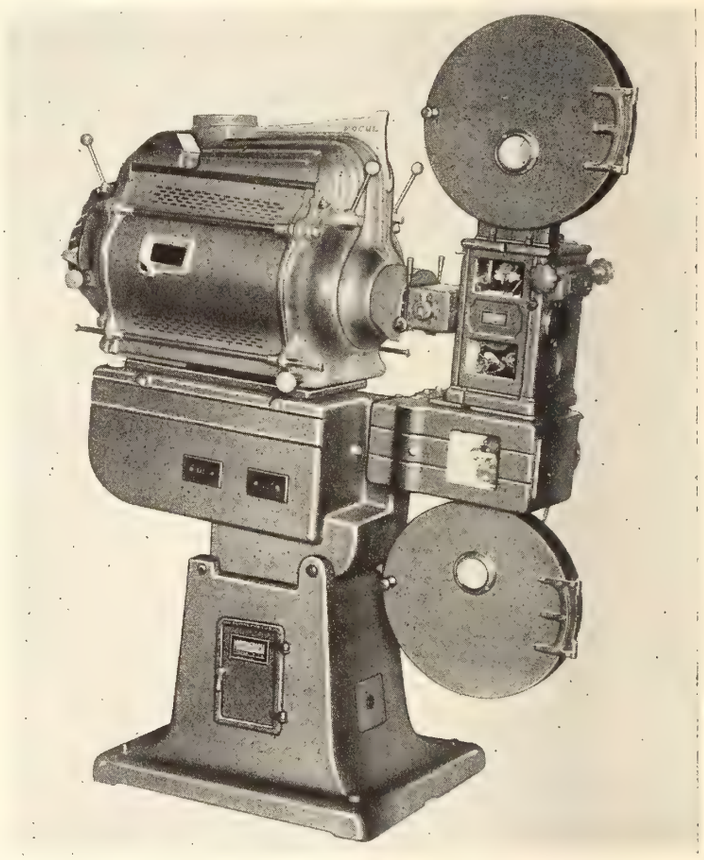
35mm Projectors for 1946

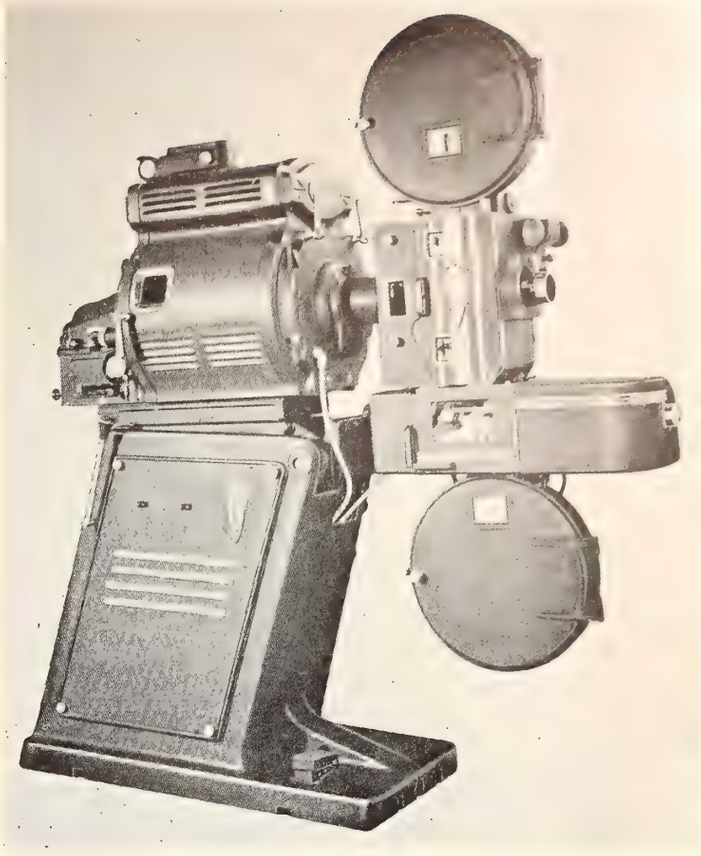


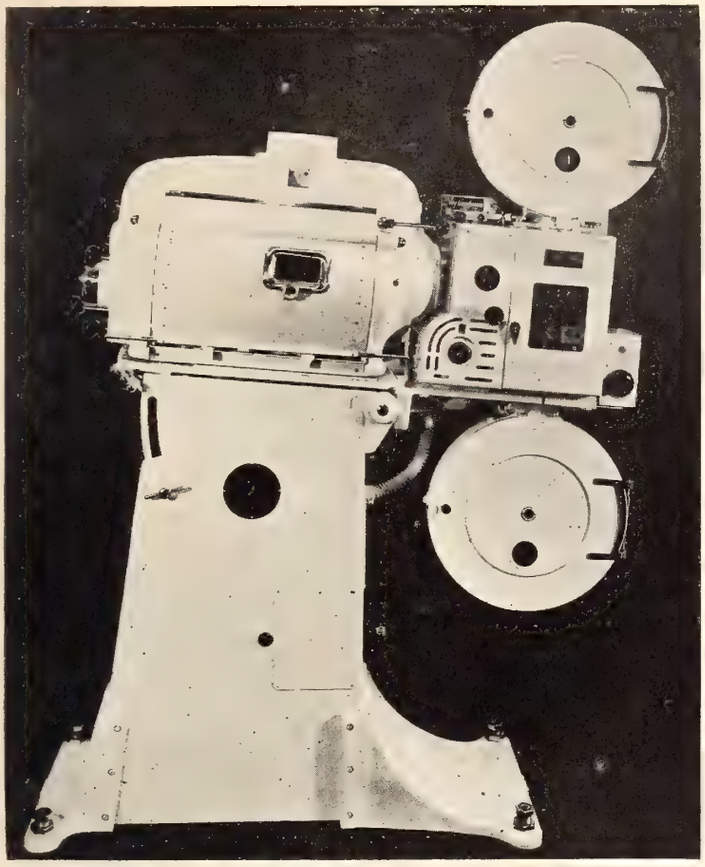
Presenting Pictorial Closeups and Data on Current Models of Five Leading Manufacturers

The year 1946 sees manufacturers readying their plant facilities for the greatest war or peace-time theatre equipment production in the half century old history of the industry. Backlogs of orders from the four war years have piled up to such an extent that it seems dubious that supply can meet demand by year's end Theatre owners, who have nursed along outmoded projectors through the war years are advancing their modernization plans for re-equipping projection rooms. The demand for new projection equipment is timed with the urge to provide a greater degree of eye and ear appeal and physical comfort for the patron. Projection, the heart of the theatre, is a must on ths long list of improvements contemplated and with interest in the models of such equipment running at flood tide we are pleased to present this display of the latest de-luxe models which are available from fine of the industry's leading manufacturers of precision-built theatre projection equipment.

SIMPLEX E-7

The famous Simplex E-7, which enjoys a reputation of faithful service, dependability and constant engineering advances over the years, is heralded as having twelve salient features which are worthy of note; (1) Synchronized Front and rear shutters to assure more light, sharper picture, less eye strain. (2) Automatic Fire Shutter Safety Trip to guarantee absolute fire safety. (3) One shot oiling system for exacting lubrication, longer life. (4) Cone shaped pad rings to reduce sprocket wear, equalize film tension. (5) Improved film gate design for steady image. (6) Demountable film trap to meke cleaning easier, reduce film scratching. (7) New ring-type governor for silent, trouble-free operation. (8) Studio type guides to prevent side sway of film. (9) Framing lamp to minimize chance of picture appearing out of frame on screen. (10) Oversize drive gears for longer life. (11) Novel synchronizing device for sharper picture, preventing travel-ghost. (12) New intermittent oil system to prevent blurred pictures and noisy sound.

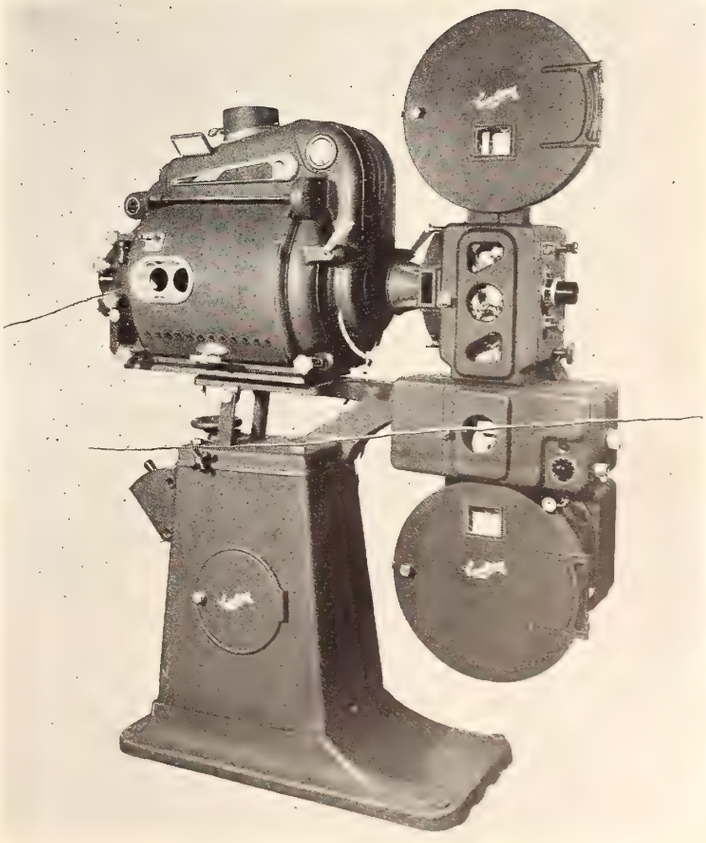




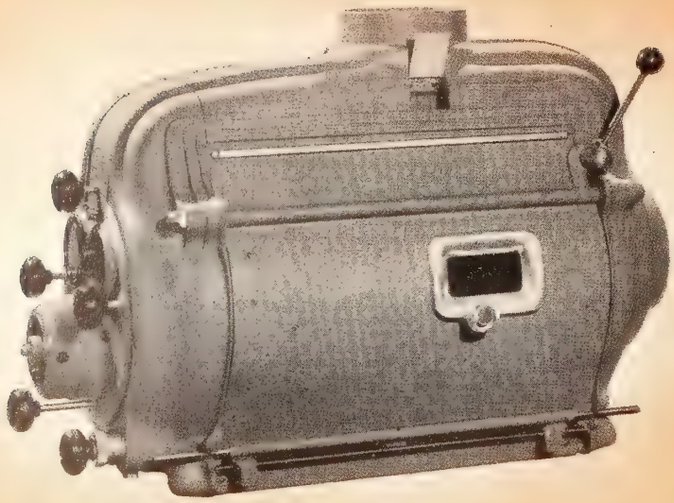
MOTIOGRAPH Model K

Motiograph, manufacturers of projection equipment since 1896, have done much pioneering in the field of theatre projection. The Model K, the company's finest projector to date, is provided with a precision-built mechanism and among its outstanding features are the following: One piece horizontal cylindrical shutter rotor, statically and dynamically balanced, free running on large ball bearings, permanently adjusted for end play; this rotor gives maximum screen light and acts as an automatic cooling system, hence all parts of the film tension system are always cooled; a shutter setting adjustment enables quick, easy synchronization of shutter and movement; the intermittent movement has unified drive, web-backed star wheel, sprocket and cam of hardened steel, precision ground; removable oil absorbent bearings, grease lubricated movement; main frame casting is designed for strength and rigidity; removable bushings permit easy replacement of standard size shafts. Illustrated is the Model K base, SH-7500 Motiograh-Mirrophonic sound reproducer, Model K upper and lower magazines and the Strong Mogul Lamp.

BRENKERT BX-80



Brenkert, a familiar name to theatremen, places great stress on the fine craftsmanship and advanced design which it claims for its streamlined BX-80 projector. Some of the salient features of this projector are: dual rear shutters for increased screen light, improved cooling; rugged construction for "rock steady" projection; automatic lubrication, with all moving parts of the mechanism constantly sprayed with oil. The design prevents any lubricant from reaching the film side of the head even while in operation. All bearings, gears shafts and the intermittents are enclosed in a dust proof compartment which is sealed. One pint of lubricant lasts 600 operating hours and is never under pressure. A safety mechanical fuse which will shear under abnormal strain protects the gearing. Main frame and housing are of rigid construction for stability. The Brenkert BX-80 is illustrated with Brenkert base, Brenkert Arc Lamp, RCA Photophone Sound Head and Brenkert magazines.



DE VRY "12000" Series

Engineered to meet rigid military specifications, this postwar DeVry theatre projector and sound system is now ready for distribution to civilian theatres. Outstanding features are: built-in projector head incorporating mechanism and sound head in one quickly removed and easily replaceable unit, reduced temperature at film gate, pedestal with (1) 4-point leveling, (2) rugged elevator device, (3) training mechanism allowing side-to-side swing for screen alignment, (4) interchangeable for all types of arcs and projector heads, (5) vibrationless rigidity. Feed and take-up magazines are easily removed for servicing. Projector is pinned and registered to pedestal to permit quick changeover of complete mechanism. All wiring terminates in barrier-type terminal strip, eliminating splicing during installation. Sound head incorporates new type sound filter which it is claimed reduces flutter to less than 2/10 of 1 per cent and serves as free film fly wheel, reducing strain. Available in old ivory, chrome and red or in battleship gray finish.

CENTURY Model CC

The Century Model CC Projector with rear double shutter represents the culmination of 25 years of progressive enginering. This mechanism was designed to offer 25 to 50 per cent more light than single shutter devices. The case and center frame are cast in one piece as a protection against center frame warping. The film trap assembly is removable as a unit. Film trap shoes and studio guides are reversible. Film gate has two open positions, for threading and for shoes and pad inspection. Lens mount and gate holder assembly and shutter shaft assembly are removable as a unit as is the main vertical shaft assembly. All assemblies are supported by sealed ball bearings. Special gear train reduces necessary gears by one half. Hunting tooth steel and fiber gears reduce noise and wear. The intermittent movement is direct drive. Positive adjustable stops are provided on all pad rollers. Model CC shown is assembled wih Ashcraft Arc Lamp and Century Sound Head.

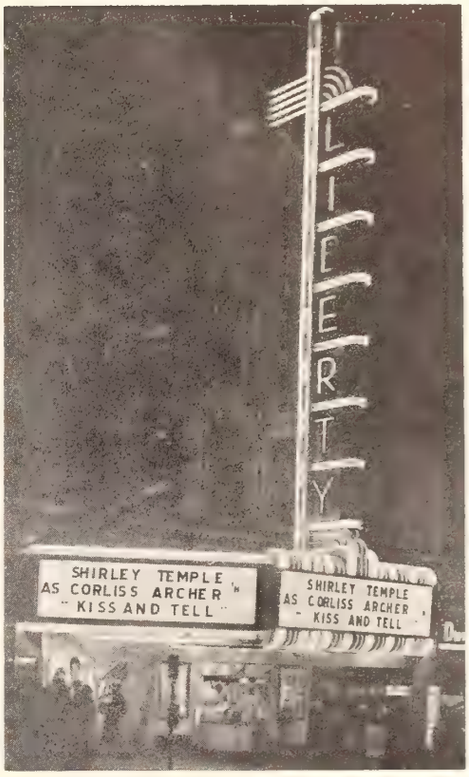
The modern version of Aladdin's Lamp is lighting, with particular emphasis on theatre lighting for the theatre structure is more adaptable to various novel usages of light than any other type building. This Council meeting will prove, we believe, an Open Sesame as to the plans and thinking of the major theatre circuit operators on the future of theatre lighting. If you would like to sit in and hear the comment on this intriguing subject, just pull up a chair and we will call the Council to order by rubbing the magic lamp.

First let us start with the front of the theatre and, of course, the focal point of prime lighting interest, the marquee. While location and facade design have much to do with decisions as to the shape or type of marquee selected, several members have expressed emphatic preference for the "V" shaped canopy. Such marquees offer several advantages over the old square style. Attraction space is increased, permitting longer lines of copy for more versatile selling of the program. The copy is visible from the direct and from right angle of approach, with the result that not only pedestrian traffic on the facing sidewalk is able to read the copy head-on, but vehicular traffic is afforded a better vision from other angles of approach.

But, let the members have their say. Here are some opinions and answers to our question, "What is your idea of an ideal canopy especially as it relates to attraction space, lighting facilities, etc."



(1) "I prefer large attraction space in combination with the new plastic letters, well lighted and with the metal portions held to a minimum."

(2) "I favor the triangular shaped canopy for the normal location. A minimum of three rows of 10-inch letters (12-inch letters for Double A locations on main business streets in large cities)."

(3) "My ideal is a weather canopy with fast traveling lamp borders. Maximum size attraction board with interchangeable letters and designed as a unit with the theatre name sign."

(4) "A canopy should be designed to give maximum weather protection to patrons and where ordinances permit, the ceiling under the canopy should not be more than ten feet above the sidewalk. It is my opinion that visual lighting is more effective than indirect, whether incandescent bulbs, fluorescent, luminescent or neon is used. Attraction space is most effective when facing the sidewalk."

Another member cited the following experience: "We have never found any lighting that was what you could call entirely satisfactory with reference to attraction space and light on the marquee. While light globes can no doubt give the greatest brilliance, the maintenance and replacement cost is excessive. For this reason, in most of our theatres, we have installed neon fluorescent tube lighting. In most cases we are using a combination of colors to get what is near white light—rose, white and blue behind the letters. This gives the attraction sign considerably more life than straight white tubing. We found that the straight white tubing alone gives a rather ghastly light and for this reason has not been particularly satisfactory."

While not submitted by a Council Member, the mail brought this photo of a recent marquee installation of the Warner stainless steel frames, glass units and colored plastic letters made at the Liberty Theatre, Seattle, Wash. The combining of marquee and upright sign both through design and light utilization seems to perfectly illustrate one of the points made by several council members in this report.

"We are hoping," the member continued, "that the cold cathode tubing will give us improvement over what we have at present, although we have not yet made any installations of this type of lighting. Fluorescent tube lighting is good with the exception that it is affected by especially cold weather, which slows the illumination and also the tendency of this type of tube to decrease in efficiency with age. The maintenance, replacement and operating costs are considerably lower than incandescent lamps."

Here is another member's opinion: "The ideal

Every Theatre Worker Who Follows The Golden Rule Can Make Progress Toward A Top Spot In the Film Industry

Editor's Note: We present, with permission, a compilation of some of the many provocative and inspirational pointers for theatre employes which have been written from time to time by Charles A. Ryan, veteran showman and executive of the Warner Theatres organization in Chicago —where his bulletins are circulated to employes of the company. Mr. Ryan's advice and counsel to young theatre managers and the ambitious youngsters who are working their way up to eminence in the industry from a start as ushers, etc., are justly famous and much sought by theatre employes in all sections of the country.

THE MANAGER

The importance of thorough maintenance starts with understanding. It comes easy for the man whose business has been built through long and hard labor, attended by personal sacrifice. He knows full well how much planning and foresight were required in the operation of his business, how much sweat and pain was necessary to accumulate enough to provide modern and adequate equipment. The Manager is placed in charge of a grown business institution which, in land, building and equipment is worth something between thirty-five thousand and a half-million dollars, for none of which he has made the sacrifices which engender natural appreciation.

He is responsible for the upkeep, repairs, proper use of all equipment, all of which you must know with first-hand information. If he is not a good superintendent his maintenance losses, through burned out motors, and dozens of other wastes may off-set much of the gains made by smart merchandising. In most instances ushers take better care of the clothing bought with their own money than they do with those bought with the employer's money. Some managers permit dust and disorder in the dressing rooms, hanging uniforms on nails or leaving them on chairs and sometimes on the floor. Re-

THE ASSISTANT

It is not the hours you put in as an Assistant Manager—it is what you put into the hours that counts.

Today you are a student of the Theatre . . . tomorrow a Manager.

Those who give to their jobs the highest effort and service will continue to hold them and graduate into better ones.

Managing a theatre is a specialized business. You sell only one commodity, ENTERTAINMENT! You must function in every department so well that you stand head and shoulders above the pack.

Successful amusement merchandising is not the sale of tickets to those who naturally would desire to see your entertainment, nor to those who have already been attracted by the better conduct of your enterprise. The real profits come from selling new patrons who are drawn to your theatre through good advertising and held through good management.

Diamonds are chunks of coal that STUCK TO THEIR JOB. The observing assistant who is never too preoccupied to take on an extra assignment and give it all he can, even if it entails extra time and asking questions, will go places in showbusiness.

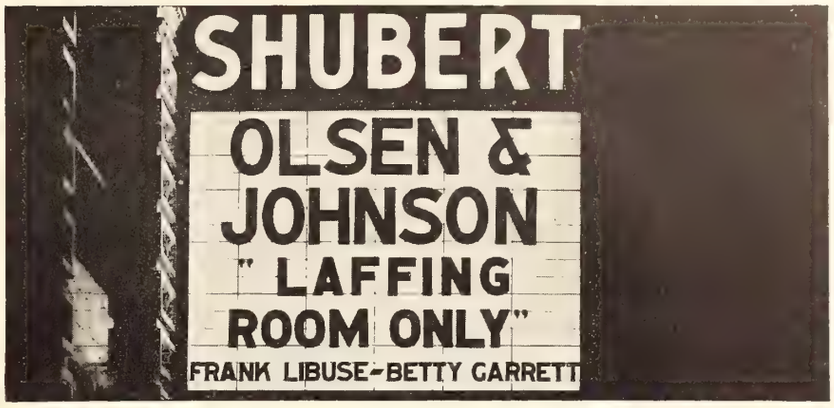
(Other Staff Reminders on Page E-23)

DOORMEN

The average patron will go along with you. They will sympathize with your work, with your effort to please. They come to your theatre to have a good time. They are in good humor when they meet you. It is your job to keep them that way.

Most every patron of a theatre realizes that some sort of an effort is being made by the management to make the public comfortable and to cater to their every want, and to so build up the reputation of the theatre, that it will be first in the choice of those who seek entertainment. Now is the time for business courtesy. The first law of show business is that the customer is the boss and must be pleased at all costs.

Those who harass customers will be punished by loss of patronage. Courtesy and good service now, when manpower is scarce and facilities are overcrowded, stand out more than ever. Patrons will long remember the good service of theatres who cater to them.



Patrons must be made to say more often "let's go to the Blank Theatre." Knowing whatever the program may be, they are certain to enjoy it because the theatre itself provides an atmosphere of courtesy, friendliness and relaxation. Today, it is our most urgent

PERMITS BILLING SPACE OF ANY HEIGHT OR LENGTH

Installed separately and before the glass . . . Accommodates the largest letters and lifesize colored photo transparencies. Lamps, neon and glass can be cleaned or replaced without removing frames. No flimsy soldered parts. No shopwork necessary in the event of glass breakage. The most economically maintained frame made.

WAGNER TRANSLUCENT COLORED PLASTIC LETTERS

No other equipment affords such a vivid, colorful display. With the gorgeous brilliancy of neon, when light shines through them, they assume a sharply silhouetted third dimensional effect by day. Available in 4", 10" and 17" sizes in assorted, beautiful, non-fading colors (red, green, blue, amber and opaque black) that go all the way through the letters, hence cannot chip or scale. They never require painting. Strong. Durable. Interchangeable, they do double duty, as they can be used outside on the marquee or inside in Wagner Lobby Displays.

WAGNER LOBBY DISPLAY UNITS

Sell coming attractions to the crowds going out. Made of sheet steel, with attractive white enamel finish. Easy to install. Made in standard sections 7" high by 24", 36" and 48", which can be so combined to make up any desired length. Wagner slotted plastic letters are mounted on the bars in the middle, firmly held in standee positions at the top or suspended from the bottom by clips. Price per lineal foot visible opening, including frames, opal glass, sockets, wiring, wall plate, top and bottom mounting rail, but less lamps, $6. End pieces included at no extra cost on displays 8' or longer.

Which kind of Picture do your Patrons See?

NATURALLY, patrons will enjoy your showings more if you have the quality of projection illustrated on the right, above.

Then why not use it? It costs little, if any, more. And Simplified High Intensity Projection, in any of its forms, will give you the last word in quality and quantity of screen illumination.

For instance, consider the many advantages of using "National" One-Kilowatt High Intensity Carbons:

- a brighter screen by 50-100%
- a snow-white light—especially suited for color pictures
- clearer, easier-to-see images on your screen

This will mean more relaxation, more enjoyment for your patrons. It will mean showings on a par with any top-notch movie house in the land! And that will pay off at the box office.

For more details on this type of High Intensity Projection, consult National Carbon Company, Inc. Also ask your supply house about the availability of High Intensity Lamps.

The word "National" is a registered trade-mark of National Carbon Company, Inc.

Patrons Pay for Illusion, Not Mechanics

Screen Show Enjoyment Depends on Smooth Performance—Good Projection

By ARTHUR E. MEYER
Manager, Projection Equipment Division of National-Simplex-Bludworth, Inc., New York

Ideal results on the motion picture screen are those which make the audience forget there is a screen, or a motion picture. The patrons want to forget they are watching a mechanical trick. They don't come to see mechanical tricks. They want real people living out real life problems—loving, laughing, sorrowing. Ideal screen results allow the audience to imagine that that is what they are watching.

To provide this ideal result the projection must be perfect. Specifically, it must satisfy four requirements. The picture must be steady on the screen; it must be bright; it must be clean; the focus must be sharp. Any shortcoming in these four respects distracts the attention of the patrons from the entertainment and compels them to take notice of mechanics.

The exhibitor, it is important to remember, pays for perfect screen results even when he does not deliver them to his patrons, because the producers go to enormous expense in the matter of photography and its related arts. Since that expense is added in to the rental cost of the picture, the exhibitor pays it. He is paying for nothing if he allows his own equipment to destroy the screen values the producers send him in those cans of film.

The Four Requirements

As to the vital need for screen steadiness—people in real life don't vibrate up and down. Eye muscles, furthermore, have no practice in ordinary life at following such rhythmic vibrations; if forced to do so in a theatre they tire quickly and become painful.

If the focus of a picture is not sharp the unreality of the whole presentation becomes very marked. Real people in real life don't blur here and there.

Real people aren't streaked, spotted and smeared. Hence if the picture is too seem real to the audience, it must be clean.

Steady, bright, clean and sharply focused projection preserves the screen values the producers charge for in their rental prices, and the customers pay for at the box-office.

The Projector

A good projector is one which assures those screen values. But it is not enough for a mechanism to produce ideal screen results only when it is brand-new. A cheaply and carelessly built device might do almost as much when it is just fresh from the factory. But it would not stand up very long under the kind of strain a projector must endure. In the mechanism the most sensitive, delicate and important parts are just the ones that have to come to a full stop and start again 160,000 times to show one feature picture—how many times in a year? Yet it must continue to deliver ideal screen results after many years of that kind of strenuous operation. Otherwise it is not a pactical machine for practical theatre business.

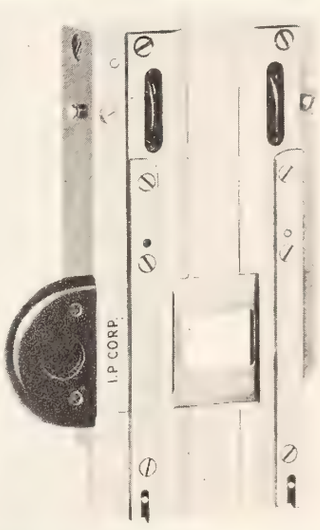
The almost endless field of the mechanical arts has been searched and re-searched from end to end for devices and materials to be used in motion picture pojectors. The field of the mechanical arts is so large that there is always more than one way of doing a given thing. Each separate requirement of good projection can be met by a number of different mechanical arrangements—there isn't any "one and only" way of dealing with these technical problems.

But the designers of Simplex projectors are convinced that in solving most of them there is only one BEST way. This conviction they derive from a great many years of experience, for the companies now merged in International Projector Corporation were the pioneer companies of the business.

Their experience has taught them not only what devices and methods in a projector mechanism will BEST give the desired screen results, but what methods will best continue to give them year after grinding year.

Steadiness of Image

To illustrate, consider one or two details of the problem of maintaining a steady screen image. Here is what seems to be a trifle—Simplex E-7 intermittent sprockets are ground to dimensions AFTER hardening. In other words, when the sprocket has been ground and gauge-inspected, it is put on the projector. It is not first ground to dimensions and then submitted to a hardening process which may warp the delicate exactness of those dimensions. Now it is obviously more expensive to grind hardened metal than soft metal. International Projector Corporation doesn't go to that extra expense without reason. The reason is that experience has shown that grinding after hardening results in long rugged wear.



The latter may be considered typical of an immense number of details, each small in itself, that contribute to producing a steady picture. In the case of the intermittent movement (which drives the sprocket just referred to) thirteen different points on the star wheel are ground to an accuracy of 1/10,000th inch. At the same time, experience proves it is equally important NOT to have such close fit at other points. Here again vast background of experience guides IPC technicians in selecting the one best procedure, having in mind not only the excellence of the immediate results, but the durability of that excellence through years of gruelling operation.

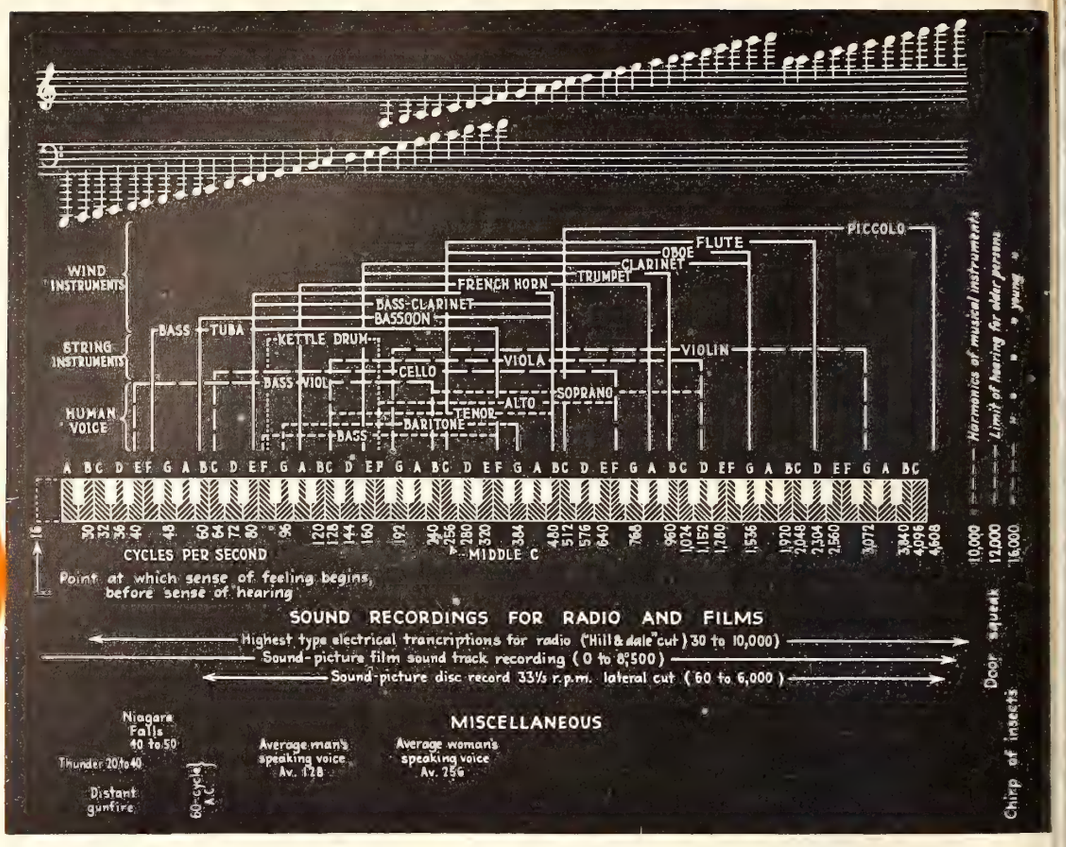
Again, in the gear train, Simplex E-7 design features hunting-tooth gearing—which means simply that the same two teeth do not mesh at every revolution. If they did, high spots would inevitably develop, and every time a high spot came around the picture would jump a little on the screen. With hunting-tooth gearing a given tooth on one gear meshes with a different tooth on the mating gear at each revolution. High spots can't appear.

Another small but vital detail is the cushioning of the gear train against the unavoidable vibration resulting from the start-stop-start-stop nature of the intermittent action. For this purpose, Simplex E-7 designers introduced a shockproof gear, composed partly of resilient material. This material takes up and cushions the vibration from the intermittent movement, minimizing the chance that this vibration will appear on the screen as picture jump.

Steadier screen image is insured by adjustable cone-shaped pad springs.

Steadier screen image is insured by microscopically placed studio type film guides.

If the picture is to be steady, it is also necessary to hold and position the film very accurately while it is in the gate. But film sometimes varies in thickness. Therefore best results can be obtained if the gate pad tension is adjustable. In the Simplex E-7, cone-shaped springs apply equal tension to the pads bearing against both edges of the film; this pressure can be adjusted at any time, in a second or so, without tools, and while the film is running. Each adjustment will apply, automatically and inherently, to both edges of the film alike; and when it is completed it can be locked down without tools.



In their ardent and experience-guided search for the one best way of meeting every mechanical problem related to steadiness of the screen

Know Your Sound

for a Better Understanding of Acoustics

PROJECTION CLINIC

The above is an Electronics' Chart of Sound Frequency Characteristics showing the various cycles per second involved in creating the musical notes of the scale. It is reproduced by permission from Electronics Magazine, New York.

NOTE: This is a continuation of a discussion on the subject of acoustics which began in the December 8th issue of this section.

Here's another word coming up. Amplitude, which is the distance the air particles are pushed on either side of neutral position (A), that is, the distance from (A) to (AA) and from (A) to (BB). Thus the intensity or distance of movement of the air particles next to the diaphragm is spoken of as the amplitude of the sound wave. The wider the amplitude of vibration, the greater the intensity. It requires sound waves of wide amplitude to produce loud tones and waves of short amplitude to deliver soft tones. Similarly it requires vibrations of low frequency to produce low notes on the musical scale and vibrations of high frequency to deliver a high note.

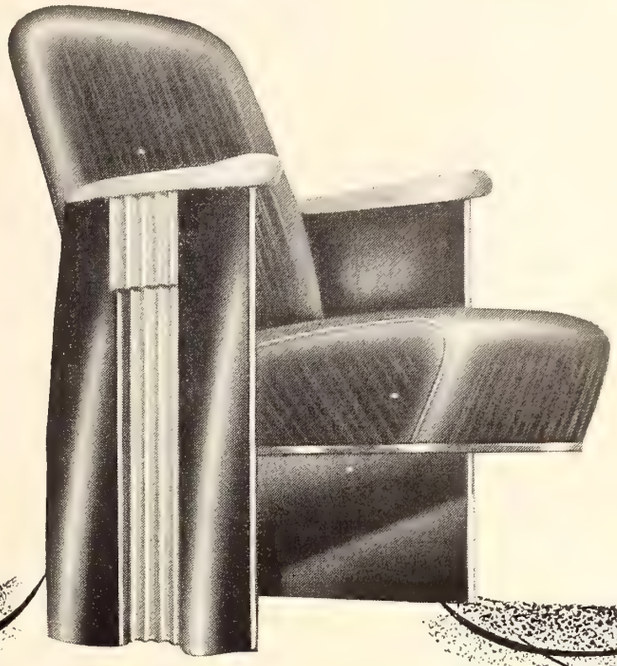
Now let's go back to that base drum to study the meaning of the term acoustic power. If it were possible to manually beat on the drumhead in so regular a manner that the beats were exactly timed, for example: ten perfectly spaced beats per second, we would have a condition similar to the electric bombardment of the loudspeaker diaphragm. Since electricity flows at a fixed speed into the speaker from the amplifier these beats are evenly spaced. But to produce tone and volume some beats or vibrations are quicker and lighter for a soft high note, quicker and harder for a loud high note and conversely, slower and lighter for a soft low note or slower and harder for a loud low note.

The electric power from the amplifier which is converted into sound energy through the vibrations of the diaphragm of the loudspeaker is known as acoustic power of the source. Such power is measured in watts, the same units as we use to measure electric power consumption of an ordinary light bulb. The greater the wattage of the bulb, the greater the amount of light emitted. By the same token, with sound, the greater the wattage of the acoustic power delivered by the diaphragm the greater will be the sound intensity. This increase of acoustic power output is accomplished by advancing the fader setting of the amplifier.

Since sound equipment is built to supply adequate sound quality for different sized auditoriums it is necessary to build the equipment with amplifiers of varying wattage. In a recent article we listed minimum power requirement standards as arrived at through research by the Academy Research Council on the basis of the number of the number of seats to be served in an auditorium. These power requirements are measured in watts and where 10 watts are considered minimum for theatres up to 400 seats, 65 watts is the recommended minimum for 3000 seats. Now from this it is possible to more clearly understand the importance of the function of acoustic power as measured in watts.

While the minimum requirements will suffice, there are the considerations of cubic content or total area of the auditorium which must be taken into account in determining specific wattage requirements for a specific auditorium if perfection in sound quality is desired. For example, the acoustic treatment or characteristics of the walls, seat covering, drapery fabrics, sound reflecting surfaces, each have a bearing on the amount of power needed to do a good job of sound reproduction with life-like quality. Often, due to the lay out of an auditorium the seat spacing will be extremely generous for the sake of comfort.

In such an auditorium the cubic content will be considerably greater than in a compact room where the seats are narrow, closely spaced and where the ceiling may be low to boot. Under such variable conditions it is important that the minimum requirements be considered but not necessarily accepted as the criterion for perfection in sound quality.



In discussing frequencies we noted that low speed vibrations deliver a low tone or note and high speed vibration creates a high note. In order to give the reader a better understanding of what frequencies produce the various notes of the musical scale we are reproducing an electronics chart of sound frequency characteristics developed and published by Electronics' magazine. Since all sounds are of a certain musical value, the keyboard of the piano provides a perfect method of demonstrating the notes delivered at various vibrations of the loud speaker diaphragm. It will be noted that audibility begins below the lowest note of the scale on the keyboard and goes far above the frequency limit of the highest note, thus the rumble of thunder in a base tone is audible at a frequency of twenty cycles and the limit of hearing of the highest notes above the keyboards 4,608 cycle peak goes to 16,000 for young people with sensitive ears. The limit of hearing for older people is about 12,000 cycles.

To understand frequencies and their relation to the notes of the musical scale, we find the musical term, octave, defined as the interval between any two sounds having a frequency ratio of two to one. In acoustic analysis and measurement, the sequence of frequencies (or octaves) most commonly used start with 128 cycles (one octave below middle C on the musical scale, 256 cycles (middle C), 512 cycles (one octave above middle C), 1024 cycles (two octaves above mdidle C), 2048 cycles (three octaves above middle C), and 4096 cycles (four octaves above middle C and the top note of the piano). This series covers the range of the majority of frequencies involved in speech and music.

While frequency is measured in cycles to determine the note on the musical scale it is equally important to have a standard by which intensity (or the degree of loudness) can be measured. In order to create such a standard

The World's Finest Theater Chair

The Only Theater Chair That Combines

LOUNGE-CHAIR COMFORT with PUSH-BACK CONVENIENCES

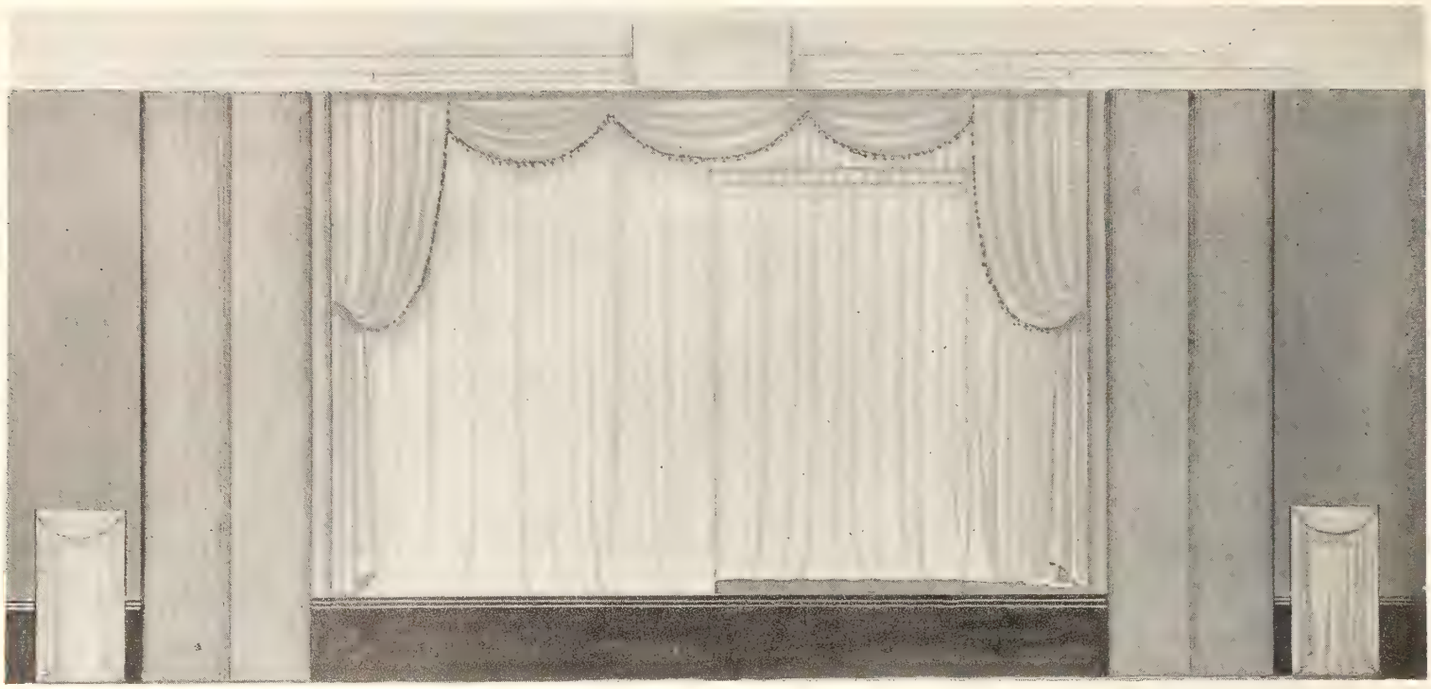
Here's the normal, comfortable, lounge-chair position of the Push-Back Theater Seat. Then, when a patron enters or leaves—

Seated patrons are not disturbed—a gentle movement of the body slides the seat back providing adequate passing space.

Relax, and the chair slides back to its normal comfortable position. There's been no standing up, no interrupted vision, and no inconvenience.



SINCE the introduction of the amazing, new Kroehler Push-Back Theater Seat, no theater can be truly modern without it! This revolutionary seating improvement eliminates standing to let others pass, affords constant screen visibility with luxurious lounge-chair comfort.

Authentic surveys prove it's a real box-office attraction. Let our consulting engineers explain how easily you can modernize your theaters with the new Kroehler Push-Back Theater Seat.

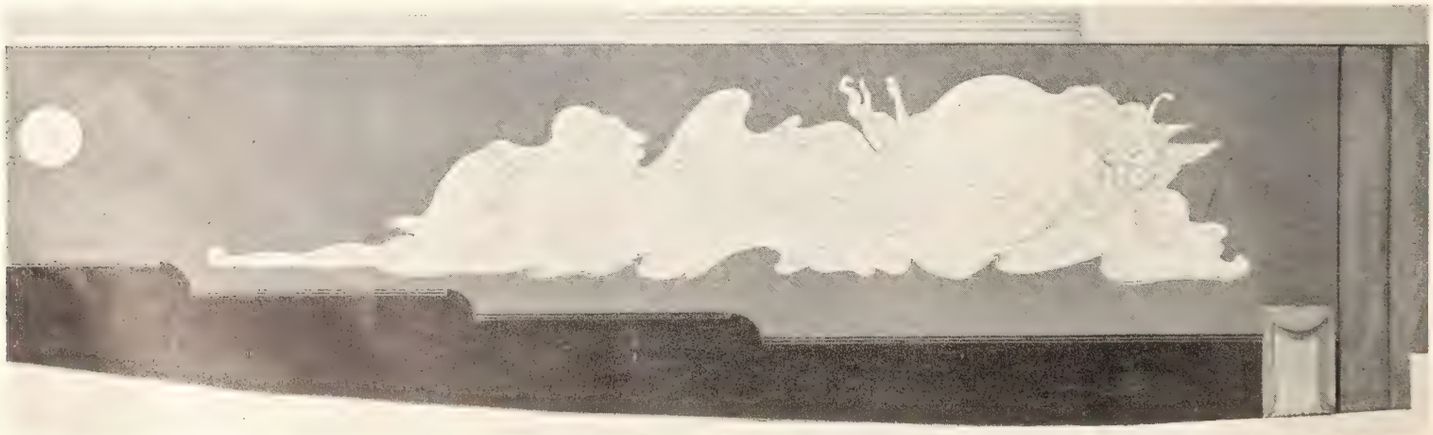
RENOVATION and REPAIRS

Modern Murals Can Solve Your Problems of Wall Decoration

Problem No. 7

These original designs for theatre redecoration have been prepared exclusively for Showmen's Trade Review by Mr. A. I. Kessler, Novelty Scenic Studios, New York. Mr. Kessler, a specialist in theatre decoration, has worked in close collaboration with architects and theatre owners for many years in the modernization of existing theatres and the decorating of new showplaces. His organization's craftsmanship has glamorized many of the outstanding theatres.

We present via illustration and explanatory test this suggested treatment of an average theatre interior in the hope that the general scheme may provide at least the germ of an idea for our many theatre owner-readers who have modernization on their minds. By confining the decorative scheme to complete simplicity, the cost of such a renovation should fall well within the budget of the average theatre owner. While the design has been drawn for an audiorium with walls which curve in toward the stage near the front of the house the treatment would be equally attractive in a completely square or oblong room.



Since stage drapes are just as vital to a renovation job as the wall treatment, Mr. Kessler, head of Novelty Scenic Studio, has shown the stage with the main close-in curtain drawn back to reveal the entire setting. The master drape is suggested in bright pink with gold trim, the main close-in in ecru, the legs in light pink with border of the same shade, the screen curtain in a light shade of yellow. The exit door drapes are similarly suggested in pink with an ecru backing. The motif which caps the columns and frames the main drape could be constructed of fireproof material to mask any existing ornamental arch. By using the device in this manner, the entire contour of the proscenium arch can be changed.

The powder blue sidewall carries up to the gold columns with the maroon wainscot running to the columns and then continuing through at the same height on the face of the stage, or orchestra pit wall. Maroon curtains could be used in case of the need to retain an existing orchestra pit railing.

The sidewall detail reproduced shows the large suggested mural which has as its central motif a large plaster disc or wheel which stands out from the flat wall surface to conceal

New Reel-End Signal Removes All Chance of Damage to Film

A completely mechanical reel-end signal for all types and makes of projectors has been developed by Larry Strong's Essannay Electric Manufacturing Co., Chicago. This new device requires no batteries, no transformers or governors. Pre-setting by the projectionist is not necessary and another advantage attributed to the improved design by Essannay organization is the fact that it touches neither the film nor reel thus eliminating all danger of scratching film.

In operation, it is not dependent upon any change in the normal smooth running projector and can be installed in five minutes time without drilling. One and one half minutes before the end of a reel this reel end signal gives a clear signal of 15 seconds and then shuts off automatically. It is adjustable to either four or five inch standard reels. Of simple though sturdy construction the new Essanny Reel End Signal will deliver at $9.75.

American Mat Corp. Acquires New Plant

The American Mat Corp., manufacturer of floor matting which is widely used in theatres, has purchased a new building at 2018 Adams Street, Toledo, Ohio and is moving into the larger quarters. Announcement of the move was made recently by E. M. Belknap, president, and D. W. Moor, Jr. secretary-treasurer of the company and the American Distributors Company, a subsidiary. 10,000 square feet of floor space in the new headquarters will be devoted to executive offices and showrooms.

Wartime restrictions on rubber products forced curtailment of the company's prewar production and many of the 96 salesmen who handled the national distribution of mat products entered the military services or essential war industries. Now that rubber is again available, many of these men are returning to American Mat and manufacture of the company's products for civilian use has been resumed. Present backlog of orders, it is reported, will keep production at a high level through 1946.

Heat Absorbing Glass Holds Promise For Projection Uses

Improved Color Transmission and Greater Safety Claimed for New Product of Research

Research has produced another great refinement of better projection, film conservation and improved working conditions for studio technicians and artists in the motion picture and television fields, according to Dr. E. D. Tillyer, research director of the American Optical Co. A new heat-absorbing, color-transmitting glass, when used as a heat screen in a projector, permits the projection of motion or still pictures in their original colors onto the screen exactly as they were taken.

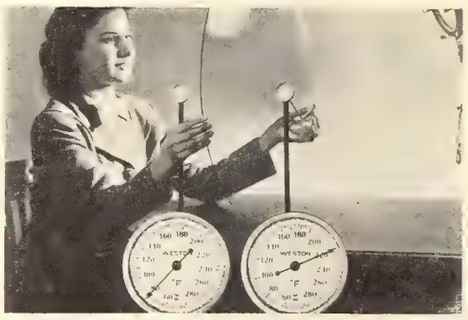
At the same time, Dr. Tillyer said, the glass absorbs heat emitted by the light source so that films and slides are protected against damage or burning. This insulating property enables film editors and educators to study a specific projected scene by stopping the projector and relying on the glass to protect the film. The glass, he further announced, can also be used in spotlights and floodlights as a heat screen to protect movie and television actors against scorching heat generated by the powerful lights. Approximately 90 per cent of the present almost unendurable heat is absorbed by the glass.

Development of the glass, Dr. Tillyer added, makes possible improved, safe color projection on an extended scale in homes, schools, theatres and stores.

"The new glass," he said, "absorbs approximately 90 per cent of infrared (heat) radiations and transmits approximately 85 per cent of light out of a possible 92 per cent (eight per cent is always lost by reflections). If reflections are reduced by glare-removing methods, light transmission can be increased from 85 to 90 per cent."

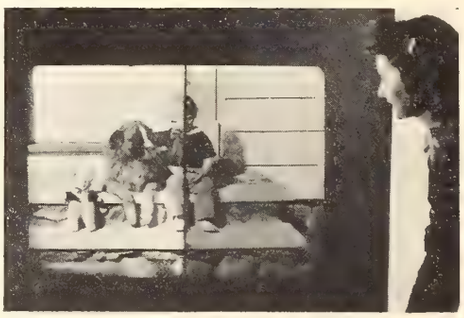
The glass, he said, transmits colors accurately, is chemically stable, resists weathering without requiring a surfacing treatment, and can be molded, ground and polished, and fabricated like ordinary glass. It is formed from carefully balanced proportions of phosphorus, aluminum and silicon oxides, supplemented by various conditioning ingredients together with ferrous iron as the heat-absorbing agent.

Story behind the new glass, as revealed by Dr. Tillyer, is another example of American scientific ingenuity triumphing over reputed German superiority in glass development.



Prior to the war, heat screens for color picture projectors were generally imported from Germany. Although relatively efficient light transmitters, they were chemically unstable and had to be given a special surfacing treatment by their manufacturers to make them resist weathering. Furthermore, they could not be worked like conventional glass.

At the outbreak of the war it became impossible to continue importations of the glass. In view of its importance, American Optical glass technologists intensified their development of a new heat screen based on earlier research and finally perfected a composition that is superior to the German glass.



Just what application will be made of this new product in the 35mm field for theatre projection machines remains to be seen but it would seem that if the heat of the arc striking the film were measurably reduced the film would not dry out nearly so quickly as it does under present conditions.

The new glass can also be used as a heat screen in spotlights and floodlights to protect movie and television actors from scorching heat generated by the powerful lights. This picture demonstrates how the glass absorbs heat emited by the floodlight (upper right). Thermometer placed before the glass registers 220 degrees F., whereas the temperature behind the heat-absorbing glass registers only 80 degrees F.

This picture, a reproduction of a scene projected in color, demonstrates how the glass, when used as a heat screen in a projector, permits the projection of motion and still pictures in their original colors. Left half of the scene was projected through the new glass and the right half through a previously developed, less efficient glass. Note improved transmission permitted by the new glass.

Further commenting on the part that visual education has played in science and industry, particularly during the war effort, Shaw said: "It is an honor to present the Museum Certificate of Merit to the thirty-seven year old chief executive of the three decade old DeVry Corporation, under whose capable and far--sighted leadership, his organization was awarded five consecutive Army-Navy "E" Flags, the only company so honored for excellence in the manufacture of motion picture equipment."

The DeVry display, captioned, "Vision-unlimited," includes a working model of the original Volatrope, a model of Edison's first studio for motion picture production, nicknamed "the Black Maria," because of its black tar paper covering, which was built on a turntable so that the building could be turned to permit the sunlight to enter the building through a roof trapdoor throughout the day. The new DeVry '12000' 35-mm. theatre projector which DeVry described as the culmination of engineering research and development to meet and better the Army's and Navy's exacting requirements, is on display in its cream colored and Chinese red finish. Views of the DeVry plant and other of the companys' motion picture equipment round out the display. This is the first occasion of a Merit award by the museum to a manufacturer of motion picture equipment. The presentation ceremony was followed by an informal luncheon for the press and museum officials in the Executives Club atop the 67 story RCA Building. Museum Director Shaw presided as host. Conover cover girl, Kyle MacDonnell, added a touch of glamor to the event and Clinton Thomas, museum public relations director handled the details.

Relating the history of the physical theatre through elaborate art work and interesting text a new book, "Stages Through the Ages," is now being distributed to theatremen by The Strong Electric Corp. Edited by Harry H. Strong and embellished by an able architectural designer, this 80 page book contains 38 full pages of illustrations and descriptions of the world's outstanding examples of theatre architecture dating back to that of Dionysus in Athens, Greece. The research covering a span from the Sixth Century, B. C. up to the present day includes a double page spread illustrating a suggested multiple enterprise amusement center of the future.

Harry H. Strong

Mr. Strong, in handling the research and text has numbered among the notable structures covered: The Globe in Southwark, England (1599), managed by Shakespeare; the Southwark of Philadelphia (1766), the first permanent American theatre; Niblo's Garden, New York (1823); Astley's Amphitheatre, London (1815; the French Opera House, New Orleans (1860, one of the first "multiple enterprises"; Booth's Theatre, New York (1869); the electric lighted Lyceum, New York (1885), with its ventilating system, ozone machines, pit elevator, and folding chairs; and Warners' Cascade Theatre, New Castle, Pennsylvania (1903).

Other books authored by Strong for theatremen in recent years include The Theatreman's Wartime Guide; Light; Then and Now, a History of the Motion Picture; Lamplight and the canopy is a 'V' type attraction sign, well lighted behind the glass with neon tubing set on about four inch centers. It should have neon animation on the front, with the soffit (ceiling or under surface) finished in warm-colored porcelain with lighting of white neon with a bit of color to kill the dead white appearance." Other members concurring or reserving their comment until further lighting experiments are complete, we passed on to another canopy question which is quite a topic of conversation among theatre owners and architects.

Do you believe canopy lighting should be kept as a separate feature of the facade or should it tie into the lighting of the entire facade for decorative effect?

On this we found rather emphatic difference of opinion. The majority, however, seemed to favor tieing the canopy into the decorative scheme of the facade. Here's how the opinion on both sides stacks up:

"The facade decorative scheme is very effective when carried down and under the soffit and to the building line, but, the facade lighting scheme should be of a different design than the lighting of the balance of the soffit." "We believe the canopy should be of the brightest illumination. We also believe that some type of flasher action near the attraction panel is effective. As far as lighting the entire facade, we believe that the general theme should be carried out throughout if the architectural features blend in with the marquee. In planning new theatres we believe the same architectural features should embrace both facade and canopy with the lighting carried out with maximum brilliance."

"The marquee should not tie into the facade," says one member. "The facing of the canopy lighting should be kept as a separate feature with the facade lighted by means of floods or strip lighting for decorative effect," says another. "By all means, tie the canopy into the facade and do a good job of unit designing," is the advice of still another member. It looks as though your personal taste will have to determine your side on this controversial subject.

Theatres Lighting Needs Cited

The Council was just getting warmed up to the topic of discussion when we discovered that we could not hope to cover the subject completely in one session, so for the sake of polishing off this preliminary bout on lighting and with plenty more to come in a later report, we tossed out this question for the temporary pay-off: "Have you any comment on the outlook for new lighting development theatrewise or any type of existing lighting which you believe the engineers should attempt to improve?"

Here are the answers to that fast one over the plate:

"We feel there is great room for development in the field of fluorescent fixtures and lighting. We believe the big electrical and fixture manufacturers should make the improvements immediately." (2) "We believe we are on the threshold of a new mode of lighting but feel it is too early to pedict the form it will take." (3) "Fluorescent murals, illuminated floors and panel lighting are my interests." (4) "It would seem to me that all lighting engineers would attempt to develop tubes which will provide different colored lights out of the same tube controlled by the voltage and amperage used. This type of light would be of tremendous value to theatres and commercial sign illumination." (5) "It is apparent that cold cathode tube lighting is one of the most practical methods of lighting and warrants further development and improvement for theatre purposes." (6) "We feel that indirect lighting in the ceiling of the theatre will give more uniform illumination and pleasing effect. Consequently, we are working this type of lighting into all of our new theatre projects."

We will let another member sum up for us on this subject to close the session:

"We believe that lighting development in the theatres, from the front of the lobby to the auditorium have unlimited possibilities in creating new interior effects. The surface has barely been scratched in this regard and we think lighting is a definite architectural feature which should be treated as such and not as the usual practice of picking out and hanging a fixture. In our opinion a rather high degree of illumination can be utilized in the auditorium to protect public safety, enhance the setting for motion picture presentation and without permitting the light source to disturb or predominate. This can apply to all parts of the theatre."

Cincinnati To Have Drive-In

Cincinnati, Ohio, Robt. Tusch, William and Harry H. Shafer will construct a drive-in theatre accommodating 900 cars on a 20 acre tract just outside the city on Compton Road in the Mt. Healthy area.

quests for new uniforms often reveal that the old ones needed only minor repairs like new braid, sleeve and collar facings. Economy is important for every penny saved is a penny earned.

Realize the importance of full compliance when you are asked to systematize and personally supervise complete and regular maintenance and that you check your theatre before opening each day. Inspect it from the basement to roof once a week and condition it completely once a year.

Developing the Assistant

The most important link in the Manager's staff is his Assistant Manager. A Manager should take his assistant into his confidence on all matters. There are still some Managers, who through lack of knowledge themselves or in their anxiety to gain individual glory, fail in this respect. Most Assistants know the usual routine systems. Managers should coach and teach the young fellow who is under his supervision showmanship problems so that he will be able to step into a Manager's position when the opportunity presents itself.

Two heads are always better than one and consultations with Assistants will be found very beneficial in most cases. They are in closer contact with the house staff and the patrons, due to the fact that they spend more time on the floor than do the Managers who are occupied with other duties that require their personal attention. If your Assistant makes a mistake, correct him and show him where he is wrong. Likewise, if he offers a suggestion welcome it and encourage him to keep thinking on showmanship lines. No one is too old to learn and we must be able to accept suggestions, not only from the Assistant, but also from the house staff—down to the usher on the aisle.

The successful manager who has won his position will undoubtedly reflect an efficient assistant and house staff. Managers should look back to the days when they were striving to be advanced from assistant and realize how much it means to an assistant to get proper schooling in practical theatre operation. Successful personnel development is just as important as showmanship in the day-to-day duties of the manager. Most managers take pride in the team work such a policy engenders.

THE DOORMAN

responsibility to sell the theatre as one restful retreat where worry is forgotten and where perfect diversion may always be had at a price within the reach of all.

Some of the requirements or factors for your success are: Enthusiasm, initiative, loyalty and honesty. These are important factors of character, and if these requirements are present, you will find yourself easier to train for greater responsibility.

There is something new to learn every day and none of us, from the highest executive down, should be under the impression that we know it all and there is nothing to learn about theatre operation.

One thing to bear in mind at all times, if

To The Entire Staff Courtesy Our Creed

We believe in courtesy, in generosity, in good cheer and in friendship. But most of all—we believe in COURTESY.

Therefore, it behooves every man here employed to remember this always, and to treat all patrons with COURTESY and careful consideration.

Impress upon the patron through your COURTESY the fine goodfellowship of the place; the "no-trouble-to-help-you" spirit. Never be grouchy, surly or impatient—remember, the patron pays your salary; without him your salary stops, and you are out of a job. Any member of our force lacking the intelligence to interpret the feeling of Good-Will that this theatre holds towards all patrons cannot stay here very long.

First, last and always, your job is to render the sort of service you, yourself, would like to receive. You can do it if you try—and we're expecting you to try.

your purpose is to become a success in theatre operation, is to distinguish yourself above the other men. In your position if you have ambition and initiative, you have an excellent opportunity to bring it to the attention of the manager with whom you work.

Never hesitate to go out of your way to do some little deed for a patron when the opportunity presents itself, no matter how small in detail it is. You will be surprised how patrons will always remain loyal to your theatre because of some small kindness shown to them at some time in your theatre.

Showmanship cannot be taught from books. You can only learn and acquire it by observation and putting into practice all the ideas and suggestions conveyed to you in the daily operation of the theatre.

Some Good Rules to Remember

1. Stand erect, be polite, thank patrons for their tickets and SMILE when you say it.

2. Be familiar with coming attractions, remind the manager if show schedules are not on time, be quick to answer questions on running time of attractions.

3. Don't watch the screen or stand in a position which blocks the entrance doors.

4. Don't get into an argument with a patron. If you can't settle a dispute politely always summon the assistant and turn the problem over with dignity.

5. Be alert to give clear cut instructions or directions on transportation or points in question. Don't confuse a patron with hap-hazard advice. If you don't know the answer, find some one who does or simply admit that you don't know the answer.

6. Be neat in the appearance of your uniform or street clothes at all times.

7. Sell your theatre to your friends and contacts by always seeming to relish your position when speaking of your job. Don't go around panning some employee, the manager or the theatres policy.

8. Exert a little extra effort in the interest of pleasing patrons by doing small favors whenever possible. Reach for tickets without grabbing and if the policy is to return a stub, hand it to the patron promptly. They are always anxious to get inside so as not to miss anything.

9. In calling or speaking to the other members of the staff, don't yell! Speak softly or politely, avoid hand clapping or finger snapping and keep conversation brief.

10. Don't smoke, chew or present the patron with an alcoholic breath. Make your job more exciting by being on your toes every minute.

MATRONS

The duties of a matron run according to the size of the theatre in which the matron is employed. Her chief responsibilities are as follows:

1. Matron should present herself in the manner of a hostess, helping with packages and outer clothing, also offering matches and trying to make patrons comfortable.

2. Matron must have schedule of show and acquaint herself with show as to story, stars, etc. . . . She must know the coming attractions and be able to talk about them.

3. Matron must never argue with patrons. She should speak only when spoken to . . . in a quiet and gentle manner. She should refer all complaints to Chief-of-Service.

4. Matron must know all first-aid instructions and also where to go for supplies. She should keep a needle and spool of thread on hand at all times.

5. Matron should have a supply of change for telephone and candy machines. She should see that the towel containers are kept filled, soap containers filled, waste receptacles are empty, drinking fountain is in proper working condition, mirrors are clean, lounge chairs are tidy, and all bulbs lit and fixtures in order. Any irregularity should be reported to the Manager at once. She should always be in ladies' room at breaks.

6. Matron should not engage in lengthy conversations with other employes, particularly Cashier. She should always address other employes as Mr., Miss, or Mrs.

7. If patron enters ladies' room with small boy, matron must use discretion in handling the situation. If necessary, offer to have an usher take boy to men's room.

THE USHER

Service to the public, to those who spend their money for food, on clothing, or amusement is one sure way to make any kind of business establishment safe from the assault of competition. Many big commercial institutions have long recognized the full value of cheerful, smiling service—giving even more than the money expended calls for. Here is a fine New Year pledge for the usher seeking promotion:

I will to the very best of my ability, try: To conduct myself as a gentleman (or lady) at all times. . . . To render 100 per cent service. . . . To be courteous to patrons and to fellow employes. . . . To work willingly and cheerfully. . . . To be pleasant and wear a smile. . . . To be alert, to anticipate patrons' desires and to surprise them with services and attentions they do not expect. . . . To speak pleasantly: to say "Yes sir," and "No sir," and "I Thank You," and "Please," in a pleasant voice. . . . To obey our rules because I realize that rules are necessary in a business organization. . . . To practice headwork and heartwork because I know that these virtues are indispensible to success. . . . To keep my temper. . . . To avoid arguing with a patron. . . . To make every patron satisfied and happy. . . . To be tidy in my personal appearance.

Rules to Remember

Be neat. Be on time. Do not talk loud. Do not chew gum.

Be dignified. Avoid unnecessary conversations.

Do not encourage flirtations with patrons.

Never give short or flippant answers.

Avoid listlessness. Stand erect at your post.

Keep cool. Do not lose your temper.

Never argue when anything is beyond you, refer to your superior.

Maintain quiet during the performance.

Make a special effort to comfort elderly people.

Report anyone changing seats more than once during the performance.

Never be discourteous. Grouchy people can't stand up under kindness.

Always meet rudeness with tact and kindness.

Don't grouch . . . sell good service just as we do good pictures.

Always wear a cheerful smile.

Strive to please and satisfy every patron as if you owned the theatre yourself.

Do not say "yes" and "no," but "yes, Sir" and "no, Sir," or "Ma'am" as the case may be.

"This way, please" . . . "Thank you" . . . "Kindly remove your arm please" are magic phrases.

Always use them when speaking to patrons.

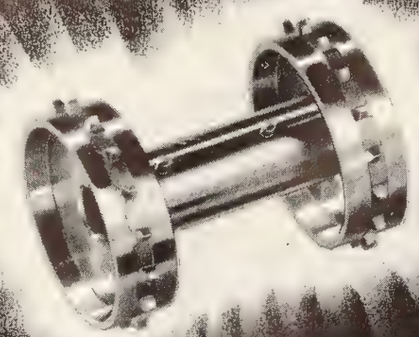
Mothers with crying babies should be asked to step to the foyer until the baby becomes quiet

Remember that business, like friendship, is sensitive. It goes where it is best treated and stays where it is best served.

You, by your conduct, can make or break your theatre. It may take a hundred dollars worth of advertising to coax a new patron into the theatre and you, with surly manner or sulky word, can drive them away, never to return.

Learning the "Ropes"

Ropes have become part of the equipment in use around theatres in lobby and inside to hold people clear of all aisles and exits. Everybody on the staff must be particularly cheerful when house is full and people are standing in rear and in lobby. The staff should wear a broad smile thus helping to create good-will, and they should say pleasant things to those standing, for instance "It won't be long now," or jokingly saying, "Only a few hours more." In this way you can hold your patrons.



"Stand inside the ropes, please, thank you" is a term suitable for this kind of work. Never speak crossly to any patron any time—but particularly in a crowd. The reason for this is that too many people hear you and take sides . . . not with you, but with the patron. Never pull ropes roughly around patron or patrons. Just simply say, "step in a little further, please" or "Sorry, sir (or madam or miss), but will you please move up?" Never accept tips—NEVER.

Aisles and exits should always be clear for your own and customers' protection. You will find people willing to co-operate with you on this. The law insists on it too, and rightly. The return of a lost glove, cap, hat, umbrella, pocketbook or anything in fact, makes friends. Let the public know you are with them and want their business.

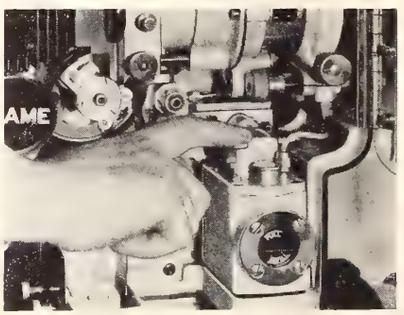
image, Simplex E-7 designers believe they have been successful, and very proudly point to the proof—a vertical jump of less than ⅛ inch per 12-foot screen picture.



Horizontal unsteadiness, or weaving, presents a less difficult problem, but of course also must be controlled. Simplex designers here drew on their very extensive experience with Hollywood equipment and fitted the E-7 with studio-type guides of the same nature as those used in the camera.

Screen Brightness

The picture must be bright as well as steady. Simplex was the first manufacturer to introduce double shutters. Twenty-four frames, or stills, are projected per second; each one is exposed twice, making 48 exposures per second; each exposure involves one transition from a darkened to an illuminated screen and one from illumination to darkness—96 transitions between light and darkness in each second of operation. Use of double shutters, pioneered by Simplex, causes the area of light to appear first at the center of the screen and spread toward top and bottom; similarly regions of darkness appear at top and bottom and meet at the center. Not only is this "dissolving effect" more pleasing to the eye, but the 96 transitions per second take only half as long to complete. The shutter blades can therefore be made narrower; 70° instead of 90°. The period of total screen illumination is lengthened accordingly; the increase in the illumination and therefore in the brightness of the picture is 20 per cent.

Cleanliness of the Picture

One important cause of dullness in the screen image may be the presence of a layer of lubricating oil on film or lenses. The one-shot lubricating system of the E-7 has a number of striking advantages; among them, that oil doesn't get on film or lenses. It is confined to a system that is completely closed, so far as the film side of the projector is concerned; it is applied under pressure to each bearing in the exact quantity that bearing needs, with no excess. Cleanliness of the image is further enhanced by provisions against dirt, and these provisions also reduce the possibility of the film being scratched by dirt.

Screen brightness is protected and maintained by one-shot oiling system.

Among other protections against a dirty picture are, for example, the ease with which both film gate and film trap can be removed. The gate can be taken out without tools, and in a few seconds. It can be replaced as readily. The trap is also removable in a few seconds, with only a screwdriver and the loosening of two screws. The film, of course, passes between gate and trap. Loose dirt in that location can get into the light path and be projected as shadows on the screen. This also is one of the places in the mechanism where the film is most likely to be scratched by dirt if there is any. The construction of the Simplex E-7 makes it extremely easy for the projectionist to keep this region immaculately clean. He can very quickly and without difficulty remove trap and gate both in order to clean them completely; and he could do it between reels without taking any appreciable amount of time from his other between-reel duties.

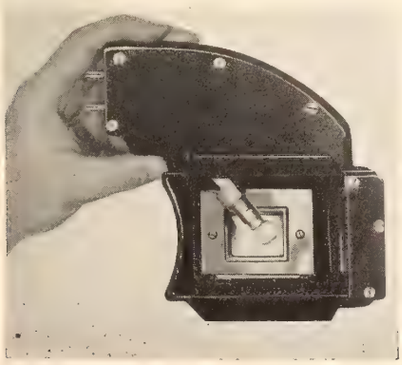
The white-enameled illuminated interior of the operating side of the mechanism is another provision against dirt. Dirt could hide and accumulate far more easily in a dark and obscurely lighted film compartment.

Maintaining sharpness of focus on the screen is largely a matter of keeping the film flat at the point where it is being projected. If the film is corrugated (buckled), or if the little still picture undergoing projection swells out like a sail in the wind, every part of the film image will not be at the same distance from the lens. Then it will be an optical impossibility to secure a screen image in sharp focus at every point. Under such circumstances some areas of the picture that the audience sees will be blurred, often very badly blurred.

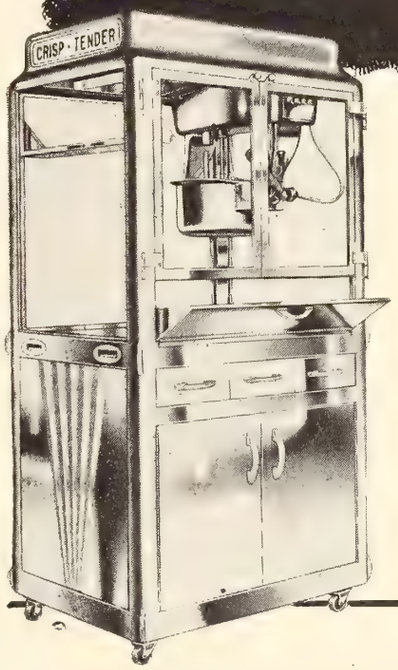
At the instant when a given film image comes before the aperture to be projected, it comes into a region of higher temperature, and therefore expands. Since the film is very rigidly held in the aperture (to insure that the picture on the screen will be steady) the only way the film image can expand is by swelling like a sail. This is called "breathing" of the film. It impairs the accuracy of the focus. It must therefore be kept to a minimum.



Sometimes, especially with high intensity light sources, the heat at the aperture may become great enough so that the film is partly dehydrated, and wrinkles or "buckles" in consequence. This is a permanent injury, not a temporary condition like "breathing." When that print is run next show, it will give a blurred image, and nothing can be done about it. It will never give a sharp picture again.

Buckling must be prevented and breathing minimized. For these purposes the Simplex E-7 is equipped with a highly efficient cooling system. Cooling air, however, is not blown into the film compartment—it might carry dirt or carbon particles with it to soil or scratch the film. Instead, a sight box, through which the light must pass, is cooled, and thus a great deal of heat is taken out of the light beam before it reaches the projector. This ribbed sight box, located between aperture and rear shutter, intercepts and disperses heat so efficiently that at the end of a full day's operation it is not even warm to touch. The sight box, in turn, is cooled by powerful vanes mounted on the rear shutter, which act like a strong suction fan, drawing air backward from the aperture.

The physical design of the mechanism, further, minimizes the effect of buckling. The film does not run free between gate and intermittent, but is firmly held in position by the intermittent film guide at the point where it leaves the gate. The result is that faults in focus caused by breathing of the film, and any possibility that the next show and future shows will be marred by buckling, are substantially eliminated.



Micrometer-type lens adjustment also assists materially in securing and maintaining the utmost sharpness of focus on the screen.

Space does not permit describing the many other devices and mechanical contrivances incorporated into the Simplex E-7 mechanism for the purpose of giving ideal screen results, nor the sometimes elaborate considerations that govern the exact choice of materials to be used at every point. In each small detail the designers, guided by a background that reaches back to the earliest pioneer days, have sought to find the "one BEST way" and to build the projector accordingly.

Sharpness of focus is protected by air-cooled sight box, which keeps the gate cool to touch even after a full day's uninterrupted operation.

Monthly Maintenance Memos

Keep constant check on fuel supply. Have boilerman drain boiler and refill with fresh water frequently unless water treating fluid is used. Check fuel consumption chart.

Check your projection and sound with the projectionists and service man. Look for equalized light and sound between both projectors. Check light intensity, focus, screen masking.

Make it a regular policy to inspect the house, panic bolts, exit area, aisle and stairway lights, carpet on stairs, aisles, exits, entrances, etc., before opening every day.

Make a weekly house inspection with the cleaning staff to insure against rubbish accumulation in danger spots. Be sure fire extinguishers in good working order are placed strategically to cope with any emergency.

Check outside exit lights, sign lighting and marquee copy regularly. Where overhead signs are suspended, check the anchorage regularly to avoid pedestrian injury. Marquee sign letters which could blow out of their slots could cause serious damage.

Check the marquee roof and theatre attic monthly for waste accumulation. Is boiler room kept free of refuse? Is the box-office kept free of lost and found articles, scrap paper, etc.?

Be certain cleaners air out the theatre for a short time daily even in cold weather. Stale air wastes heat and discourages patronage. Disease germs thrive in foul air.

Make a complete seat check weekly examining each seat for rough surfaces or sharp projections which could tear clothing. Oil or repair hinges where necessary. Have standards secured firmly to floor.

In winter, make certain a staff member scatters sand or sawdust on highly polished terrazzo lobby floors to prevent accidents as a result of slipping. Snow should be removed from sidewalks promptly with special attention to heavy snow on roof or marquee.

Protect carpet from grit and grime in bad weather by using matting at entrance doors. Rubber matting must be handled with care in removing from recesses for cleaning. Dry recess and mats before replacing after scrubbing.

Keep service staff alerted to the importance of keeping dressing rooms tidy. Uniforms should be hung up when not in use, kept neatly pressed and repaired at all times.

Keep rest rooms spic and span, soap containers filled, paper holders loaded, ash trays emptied, odor of disinfectants to a minimum. Rooms should be well ventilated but never freezing cold in winter.

The Cover

With much attention focused upon Projection in this issue we turn to this striking view of "The Star Projected" on the screen of New York's famous Roxy Theatre. This picture, taken from the "Roxy Box" (which is reserved for honored guests) dramatizes the contention of all advocates of better projection that the appeal of motion picture stars and the pictures in which they appear depends to a very considerable degree upon the quality and manner with their images are presented to the public. Bad projection can play hob with even the best photography, story or direction.

it was necessary to establish a fixed base close to the threshold of average audibility of sound. The standard has been set on the basis of an electrical energy flow of one ten-quadrillionth of one watt. Although this would seem extremely minute, a human ear of a little above normal sensitivity can hear a sound of that infinitesimal intensity. This having been set as a base for sound intensity, it is written for the purpose of mathematical calculations as '0 Decibels'. Sound intensity being acoustic power, all measurements are referred to in terms of decibels (db's).

We hear sound engineers speak of noise level or intensity level. This is a reference to the intensity or degree of loudness measured in decibels. For example the noise in an average auditorium may be referred to as having an intenisty level of 30 db. It is also important to know just how the decibel scale is marked off figuratively. Since the threshold of audibility is considered as zero decibels, each one decibel increase in acoustic power amounts to approximately a 26 per cent increase in the loudness or intensity level of the sound. If the intensity of a sound is doubled it will represent about a three db increase on the decibel scale.

Since the ability to hear through the human ear is a physical sensation which reacts through the brain it is possible for a sound to be heard so loudly as to cause pain. The point on the decibel scale at which the sensation of pain becomes noticeable is referred to as the threshold of feeling or 120 dbs. The roar of a cannon or crash of thunder are examples of sound intensity which approach or exceed this point on the db scale, depending upon proximity to the source of the sound.

Without going into the more technical or mathmetical procedures involved in determining the decibel measure of a sound intensity, here are some average decibel levels of common sounds:

Deafening	120 db	Threshold of Feeling
		Thunder, Artillery
		Nearby riveter
	110 db	Elevated train
		Boiler factory
Very Loud	100 db	Loud street noise
		Noisy factory
	90 db	Truck unmuffled
		Police whistle
Loud	80 db	Noisy office
		Average street noise
	70 db	Average radio
		Average factory
Moderate	60 db	Noisy home
		Average office
	50 db	Average conversation
		Quiet radio
Faint	40 db	Quiet home
		Private office
	30 db	Average auditorium
		Quiet conversation
Very faint	20 db	Rustle of leaves
		Whisper
	10 db	Sound proof room
	0 db	Threshold of audibility

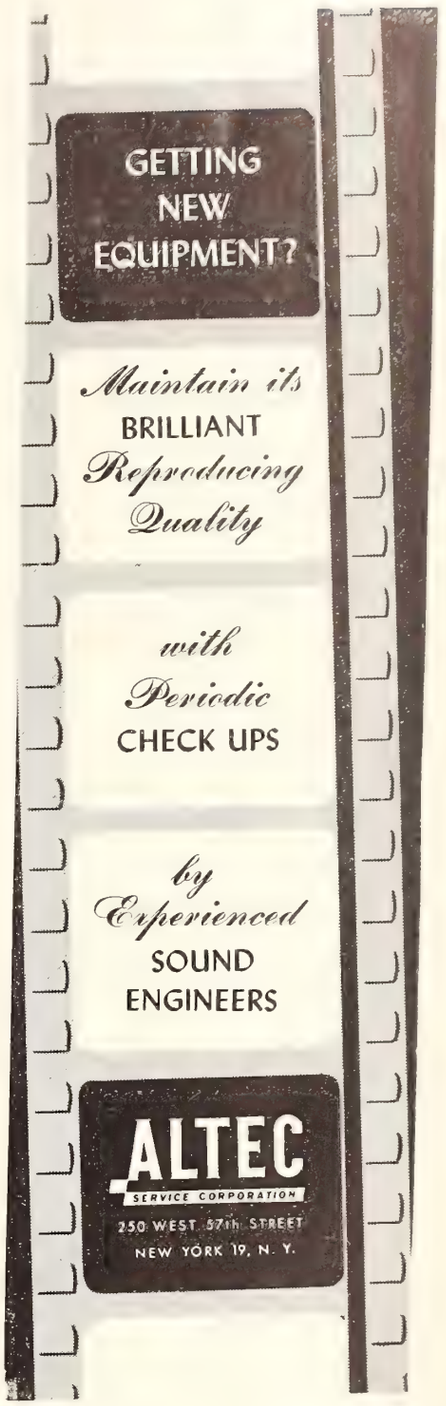
The Human Ear

As we have previously shown, frequency produces the sensation of pitch and intensity the sensation of loudness. The method by which the human ear receives the vibrations of a sound wave and converts it into sensations of hearing is extremely complex. Rather than attempt complete coverage of the subject let's examine the more important workings. Looking at the musical keyboard chart, you will note that high pitched sounds such as door squeaks or the chirp of insects appear at the top of the frequency range. Low pitched sounds such as the rumble of thunder, distant gunfire or bass notes are of very low frequency. The ear may hear two sounds of identical intensity or loudness but if they are of different frequencies they may not sound equally loud. Similarly, where different frequencies are involved, sound having double the intensity of another sound will not necessarily appear twice as loud.

Here are some general facts bearing on the characteristics of how the ear reacts to various frequencies and intensities:

(a) At a low intensity level, a tone of high frequency will sound louder than a low frequency tone of the same intensity.

(b) At a high intensity level, all tones of the same intensity will sound about equally loud, regardless of their frequency.



(c) At low intensity levels, a limited increase in intensity level will induce a larger change of loudness in sounds of low frequency than in those of high frequency.

(d) At high intensity levels, a limited increase in intensity level will induce about the same change in loudness irrespective of the frequency of the sound.

We have described the manner in which the vibrating diaphragm sets up a sound wave of moving air particles. In addition to this single frequency or tone (which is referred to as a pure tone) many sounds are composed of two or more frequencies or simultaneous vibrations (Such sounds are called complex tones). Most of the sounds we hear are comprised of a number of frequencies. When a musical instrument is played, the string or reed or the lips of the player will vibrate at several frequencies simultaneously. The lowest or predominant frequency which the ear identifies as the pitch of the note is called the fundamental. All the other component frequencies which go to make up the complex sound are referred to as overtones or harmonics. The combination of the frequencies of a single sound when heard as a single sensation are spoken of as the quality of the sound. It is this difference in the overtones or harmonics of a sound which make it possible for the ear to distinguish between sounds.

In contrast, suppose middle 'C' of the musical scale is played on a violin and the same note is played on a flute. The note would be exactly the same, with the same base frequency, but the component vibrations above this common base will differ and in this way we are able to distinguish between the instruments being used to play the same note. Similarly the understanding of speech depends on the ears ability to distinguish between the various overtones and interpret them on the basis of their vowel or consonant qualities. The shape of the human mouth determines the overtone frequencies and as a result each vowel sound has a characteristic set of overtones which range from 200 to 3,000 cycles. Consonant sounds, such as 's' and 'sh' can contain frequencies ranging as high as 10,000 cycles.

The voice, or speech sounds contain a fundamental pitch which is created by the vocal cords. The frequency is determined by the individual and his manner of speaking. A man's voice in a normal conversation has a fundamental frequency of about 125 cycles. The female voice registers around 250 cycles. Understanding does not depend upon hearing this fundamental frequency but the vowel and consonant overtones are essential.

THE BOX OFFICE SLANT

Colorado Pioneers

Republic Western 58 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Those who like westerns will enjoy this one, for it has the customary ingredients that please them.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: One of the better of the Red Ryder series, this should do well for action theatres.

Cast: Bill Elliott, Bobby Blake, Alice Fleming, Roy Barcroft, Bud Geary, Billy Cummings, Freddie Chapman, Frank Jaquet, Tom London, Monte Hale, Buckwheat Thomas, George Chesebro, Emmett Vogan, Tom Chatterton. Credits: Produced by Sidney Picker. Directed by R. G. Springsteen. Screenplay by Erle Snell. Original story by Peter Whitehead, based on Fred Harman's NEA strip, by special arrangement with Stephen Slesinger. Photography, Bud Thackery.

Plot: While in Chicago selling herd, Wild Bill Elliott runs across a group of orphans working for a crook, and he arranges for them to be sent to his ranch for a vacation and a chance to learn to live right. When he gets back there, he runs into some crooked work being done by a gang trying to steal his ranch from him and his aunt. He saves the children from danger while they're learning to herd cattle, and eventually nabs the crooks doing all the nefarious deeds.

Comment: As complete a western as any addict could want from the usual action, fist-fights and just plain skulduggery, to the addition of a group of young orphan children who are taught the ways of outdoor life. It's the latest in the Red Ryder adventure series and as such, has Wild Bill Elliott doing his usual very capable work in the leading role, Bobby Blake as Little Beaver and Alice Fleming, as the Duchess, playing the role of a relative of Wild Bill's. Frank Jaquet and Bill Geary make the villains worthy of the justice meted out to them. R. G. Springsteen gets credit for the smoothly paced direction, and Sidney Picker for the production as a whole.

PRC Horror 59 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) The horror addicts will get their share of chills, thrills and eerie atmosphere in this tale of a ghost who sought vengeance.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A satisfactory offering for the "horror" houses, this picture should also serve as a good filler where the customers like scarey, weird entertainment.

Cast: Rosemary La Planche, Robert Barratt, Blake Edwards, Charles Middleton, Effie Parnell, Nolan Leary, Frank Conlan, Therese Lyon, Virginia Farmer. Credits: Produced by Raoul Pagel. Directed by Frank Wisbar. Original story by Frank Wisbar and Leo McCarthy. Screenplay by Frank Wisbar. Photography, James S. Brown.

Plot: A man hanged for a crime he did not commit comes back to seek vengeance on the people who were responsible for his death. His image appears in the swamps, where he gradually eliminates the male members of the different families involved. The small ferry he owned, which was being run by the man responsible for his hanging, is taken over by the man's granddaughter when he also dies in the swamp. Her love for one of the young men sought by the ghost kills the apparition's powers.

Comment: Theatres which cater to the horror trade will find this picture a very satisfactory offering for their clientele. It will give their patrons their fill of spooks and eerie atmosphere, with ample suspense, chills and thrills. In average houses, it will serve its best purpose as a filler where the business draw includes people who like scarey, weird atmosphere pictures. The acting is good and the direction by Frank Wisbar from an original story by himself and Leo McCarthy makes the story as believable as possible for this type of fare. Rosemary La Planche and Blake Edwards satisfactorily enact the romantic leads, while Robert Barratt, Effie Parnell and Nolan Leary, as members of the supporting cast, are adequate in their performances. Production chores were handled by Raoul Pagel.

SUITABLE FOR ADULTS ONLY

OBJECTIONABLE IN PART

Scarlet Street

Up Goes Maisie

MGM Comedy 89 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Excellent show for average audience, especially those who follow Maisie and her adventures.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Up-to-date story on a reconverted Maisie, plus the draw of George Murphy, should bring in satisfactory returns.

Plot: Four young men, working on a secret new-type helicopter, hire Maisie as a secretary, and let her in on their plans. The man who is financing the invention really plans to steal it and is being helped by a double-crossing member of the firm. When the helicopter is completed and ready for demonstration, they make away with it, but Maisie, who has become suspicious, follows them and locates it. She takes off and succeeds in landing the machine in the Rose Bowl.

Comment: The combination of smart dialog, good acting and tasteful photography gives this latest of the Maisie series the same excellent ingredients which have been standard since the series' inception. This time MGM has surrounded Ann Sothern with a fine supporting cast, but the little blonde temptress carries the bulk of the work on her very capable shoulders. A war-time reconversion casualty in the film, she handles the role of a sexy job-seeking secretary, who finally lands a position as a combination office worker-helicopter welder, with the ease and ability which her fans expect of her. George Murphy gives a likable performance and the added attraction of his name should do much in bringing in satisfactory returns. Hillary Brooke, Horace McNally, Ray Collins and Murray Alper also turn in workmanlike portrayals. Fast-paced direction is a credit to Harry Beaumont. George Haight produced.

I Ring Doorbells

PRC Comedy-Mystery 67 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Oft-told story is lacking in action, but amusing situations and suspenseful spots should provide enough interest for murder-mystery fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for a berth on any double-feature set-up. Might be exploited to good returns in average communities.

Cast: Ann Gwynne, Robert Shayne, Roscoe Karns, Pierre Watkin, Harry Shannon, John Eldredge, Harry Tyler, Doria Caron, Jan Wiley, Joel McGinnis, Charles Wilson, Hank Patterson, Eugene Stutenroth, Roy Darmour. Credits: Screenplay by Dick Irving Hyland. Based on a book by Russell Birdwell. Directed by Frank Strayer. Associate Producer, Martin Mooney. Produced by Leon Fromkess. Photography, Benjamin H. Kline.

Plot: Reporter Robert Shayne returns to his paper after a trip to New York, and on his first assignment mets another reporter, Ann Gwynne, with whom he falls in love. But his editor unwittingly kills the romance by putting Shayne on the trail of his son's fiance, whom he suspects of being a gold-digger. Shayne plays up to the fiance's maid in order to unearth some evidence on the gold digger; this makes his reporter girl friend angry and gets them both involved in the murder of the gold-digger. But a camera placed in the dead girl's home by a news photographer turn up evidence which convicts the real killer and frees Shayne and Gwynne.

Comment: Following the customary mystery formula of the newspaper reporter who aids the police, finds the murderer and gets his girl, "I Ring Doorbells" has enough suspense and entertainment to please audiences in average communities, and should provide good support for a stronger feature. In some situations it might top a western on a week-end action bill. While the film is nearly always interesting, it falls short of being logical; yet only discriminating moviegoers will be concerned with this defect. Ann Gwynne and Robert Shayne essay engaging performances, assisted by Roscoe Karns (who displays his usual fine instinct for comedy as Shayne's sidekick), Harry Shannon, Doria Caron and Harry Tyler. From the production standpoint, the settings are attractive and the photography good. Extra exploitation in small towns and neighborhoods should help to boost grosses.

I Know Where I'm Going

(Reviewed in London)

GFD-The Archers 91 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Off the beaten track and strangely charming story of a girl who believed that only money can bring happiness.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: May get by with better class audiences.

Cast: Wendy Hiller, Roger Livesey, Pamela Brown, Nancy Price, John Laurie, Petula Clark, George Carney and others. Credits: Written, directed and produced by Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger. An Archers Production.

Plot: Wendy, daughter of a bank manager, believes that money is the one key to happiness and becomes engaged to a middle-aged millionaire who, though making riches out of the war, seeks the safety of one of the wild Western Isles of Scotland. She goes to marry him but cannot cross to the island because of a storm. Livesey, a laird, befriends her and offers her hospitality until the weather improves. She despises these Scottish folk and refuses to accept their assurance that it would be dangerous to cross to the island. She bribes a boy to take her and the boat is all but swept into a whirlpool. The sincerity of these people gradually wins her and she realizes that she loves Livesey.

Comment: This picture may appeal to better class audiences. The storm and whirlpool scenes are terrific and the shots of the Western Isles are breathtakingly beautiful. Producers Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger have strived hard to get off the beaten track and many of the incidents introducing local color and character are excellent. The main trouble is that they have a sermon rather than a plot, and the film could be improved by cutting. There are sequences which seem to have no reason to exist. The heroine is an unsympathetic character and as played by the self-assured Wendy Hiller, the audience is almost sorry when she is saved from the whirlpool. Roger Livesey is pleasing as the laird, while the small parts are uniformly well played, particularly those of Nancy Price and Pamela Brown. Erwin Hiller's photography is worthy of special note. Despite its shortcomings, the film has charm and character and will be discussed by those who see it.

The Strange Mr. Gregory

Monogram Drama 62 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Black magic, hypnotism, etc., for the entertainment of the amateur magicians and other moviegoers who like this type of fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Satisfactory secondary feature.

Cast: Edmund Lowe, Jean Rogers, Don Douglas, Marjorie Hoshelle, Jonathan Hale, Frank Reicher, Robert Emmett Keane, Frank Mayo, Fred A. Kelsey, Anita Turner. Credits: Directed by Phil Rosen. Original story by Myles Connolly. Screenplay by Charles S. Belden. Photography, Ira Morgan. Produced by Louis Berkoff.

Plot: A professional magician, experimenting with a death trance, succeeds in putting himself into a state of suspended animation. In this way, when he falls in love with a young woman, he is able to frame his own "murder" so that it looks as though the woman's husband is guilty. His death trance fools the authorities, and the husband is convicted and ready to pay the penalty when the entire thing is exposed by a friend.

Comment: As a secondary feature, this picture about black magic, hypnotism, voodooism and such, will entertain those moviegoers who are interested in this type of fare, mainly the amateur magicians. One could call the film a horror offering, for coffins, killings and other legerdemain art which tends to scare and frighten people are there. But in this case it wouldn't be correct to classify it as such, for though it contains the above mentioned heinous deeds, it lacks the suspense, eerie atmosphere and thrills usually found in horror pictures. Properly, it is a melodrama. Edmund Lowe does a good job as "The Strange Mr. Gregory," though his hynotism lacks conviction, for he doesn't seem to carry the power one attributes to hypnotists. Jean Rogers makes believable the girl he's trying to control, and Marjorie Hoshelle and Frank Reicher give satisfactory supporting performances. Direction by Phil Rosen, though good in handling the players, doesn't add anything to a script that misses its target. Production was handled by Louis Berkoff.

Girl on the Spot

Universal Drama-with-Music 75 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A mixture of Gilbert and Sullivan music with melodrama that should please the not-too-discriminating.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should serve as a satisfactory second feature.

Cast: Lois Collier, Jess Barker, George Dolenz, Fuzzy Knight, Ludwig Stossel, Richard Lane, Donald MacBride, Edward S. Brophy, Billy Newell, Ralph Sanford, Delos Jewkes, Russell Horton, Carol Hughes, Joseph Crehan. Credits: Directed by William Beaudine. Produced by George Blake. Screenplay by Dorcas Cochran and Jerry Warner. Original story by George Blake and Jack Hartfield. Photography, Maury Gertsman.

Plot: Seeking an audition for a spot in a night club, a young singer is an unsuspecting witness to a murder. The gangsters responsible for the crime are hot on her trail when the police and an ace crime photographer start following up clues. Things become pretty hectic when the murderers slip through a police cordon in order to reach the girl before she can talk, but the police nab them in time.

Comment: This is neither one thing nor the other. It starts out being a melodrama, with the opening scene showing someone committing a murder, and then goes on to a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. The two are combined, but not too smoothly, for the melodramatics just don't fit in with the beautiful music and one never knows what to expect in the next scene: music or shooting! As a filler, it will take care of the seventy-five minutes of its allotted time, with sufficient enjoyment for those not too discriminating audiences who can enjoy Gilbert & Sullivan in spite of its surroundings. Lois Collier in the leading role does a very satisfactory job both vocally and dramatically. In the romantic lead is Jess Barker and with him, handling what comedy the picture carries, is Fuzzy Knight. Supporting cast has such capable performers as Ludwig Stossel, Edward S. Brophy and Richard Lane. Direction by William Beaudine spots the musical sequences well, but the story is too confused for him to turn out a smooth-running job. Producer was George Blake.

The Spiral Staircase

RKO Radio Mystery-Drama 83 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A thrilling, eerie mystery about a woman-killing maniac. Excellent entertainment.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Sure-fire money maker, with word-of-mouth comment certain to multiply the grosses. Will lead in any situation and particularly good for a long run in class houses.

Cast: Dorothy McGuire, George Brent, Ethel Barrymore, Kent Smith, Rhonda Fleming, Gordon Oliver, Elsa Lanchester, Sara Allgood, Rhys Williams, James Bell. Credits: Directed by Robert Siodmak. Screenplay by Mel Dinelli. Based on the novel, "Some Must Watch," by Ethel Lina White. Photography, Nicholas Musuraca. Produced by Dore Schary.

Plot: Several murders of women with minor afflictions have occurred in a small town, so that everybody becomes worried about a young girl who has been unable to speak since childhood. The people for whom she works—a professor, his mother and his brother—and the young doctor in the town, who is in love with her, all make plans for her safety. Strange happenings occur in the professor's home and finally his secretary is found murdered. The speechless girl uncovers the murderer and in the terror and excitement brings back her voice by calling to the man she loves for help.

Comment: Spooky, nerve-tingling atmosphere, dark shadowy figures with a maniacal murderer on the loose (not to mention the horror-stricken faces and screams of his victims), combined with a smooth direction that builds to a terrifically exciting climax, make this picture a really first-rate mystery. It is sure-fire thrill entertainment that will pack them in, especially after word-of-mouth spreads, for it is filled with the kind of suspense and absorbing terror that grows as the film unwinds. That it is definitely not a picture for persons who cannot stand frightening or eerie situations, thus keeping some out, is a factor which will also serve as excellent exploitation and draw many more in. Name draw and quality of the production makes it a leader in any situation and particularly good for long runs in class houses. Dorothy McGuire as the "speechless" girl is excellent. She hasn't a line of dialog to speak throughout the entire film, yet she performs so well that one feels with, and for, her, the terror and frightening atmosphere around her. George Brent, Rhonda Fleming, Kent Smith and Gordon Oliver are all very good, but special notice will be taken of Ethel Barrymore and Elsa Lanchester who turn in outstanding supporting jobs. Production by Dore Schary and direction by Robert Siodmak are responsible for the excellence of the picture which, as an indication of their teamwork, should create a following for them in the field.

ADVANCE DOPE

SHE-WOLF OF LONDON (Univ.) Mystery-Drama. Principals: June Lockhart, Sara Haden, Una O'Connor, Don Porter. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Plot: A young English girl fears she has inherited the curse of her family, said to be haunted by the spirits of wolves. A Monthly Feature Dealing With Practical Ideas for Booking And Exploiting

The Short Subject

Official Mascot

After viewing the MGM Color Cartoon, "Wild and Woolfy," Marines stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif., have requested the Culver City studio for permission to use the leading character, a little dog in a ten-gallon hat, as their official mascot. The studio is now working up an insignia featuring the pup for the Marine outfit.

Human Interest Angle Plugs MOT Subject

Just before a March of Time exploitation screening on "Justice Comes to Germany," MOT received a call from 1st Lt. Burke W. Jay of Palmyra, N. J. He had heard that MOT had made a film in connection with the death of a U. S. flyer, Lt. Woodruff E. Warren, one of five airmen shot down with him over Germany, and was anxious to see it.

With the details of his death affirmed by Phil Williams, MOT publicity head, Jay obviously moved, revealed that the deceased flyer had been his buddy. He was accordingly invited to the MOT studios for the advance screening.

Upon being informed, news chiefs were so enthusiastic over this new human interest angle, that they dispatched a writer-layout team to cover the story. Picture syndicates were tipped off on the added news value and interviewed Jay after the screening. Arrangements were made with MOT to supply exclusive scenes from the film for newspaper reproduction. As a result, the picture story broke papers throughout the U. S., reaching an estimated audience of well over 20 million readers.

RKO Completes Six Two-Reelers, Sends 4 More Into Production

Producer George Bilson has disclosed, that having completed half of its 12 two-reel comedies scheduled on the 1945-46 program, RKO is preparing to send four more into production this month. Three Edgar Kennedy and an equal number of Leon Errol comedy shorts, have been shipped and the four set for next month will include two each for Kennedy and Errol.

Plans for an expanded shorts program, to include six musical shorts, are under discussion and is expected to be announced on the 1946-47 schedule. The plans at present call for the use of name bands as the feature of the musical two-reelers.

Local Boy Angle

Al Bennett, who lives in Ashland, Ohio, appears in a United Artists short, "Wingmen of Tomorrow." W. S. Eckard, manager of the Ashland Theatre, found this out and by means of the local pride angle induced the Junior Chamber of Commerce to sponsor the showing of the picture as part of its campaign for a new airport. The neighbors turned out en masse to see Al.

Angles in Paramount Shorts Exploited in Diversified Campaigns Across the Nation

Publicity and exploitation campaigns staged in connection with Paramount shorts, prove the box-office values in those short subjects which contain some local or national angle that can be exploited.

Successful campaigns, taking advantage of the aforementioned angles, have been put across on nearly every "Popular Science" and "Unusual Occupation" short. Produced by Jerry Fairbanks for Paramount release, the films are geared to deal with postwar activities and unusual occupations of lesser known people throughout the country.

Premieres of the first "Popular Science," on the new schedule's lineup, were held in Seattle and Toledo, while openings of the second in the series, which features the Institutum Divi Thomae's expedition into the Florida Everglades, were held at Cincinnati. Accounts of the expedition and the filming were carried throughout the country in 150 leading Catholic schools and newspapers.

"Unusual Occupations" which is now being set for release, has tied into the nationwide campaign being conducted by the Braille Institute for the Blind. Chicago's State-Lake Theatre presented the "Mad-Hatter-of-Chicago" in his unusual occupation of designing odd hats, in connection with the showing of the film at a cocktail preview for 150 Chicago socialites.

Another of the Fairbanks short series, "Speaking of Animals," has been made the subject of a forthcoming spread in Look magazine. The publication's Hollywood photographer spent two days shooting "A Day in the Life of a Dog Star" featured in Fairbanks' new release, "Hillbillies."

Premiere of Grantland Rice's Sportlight "Running the Team" at Notre Dame, South Bend, cornered considerable national publicity and exhibitor recognition.

Paramount Puppetoon Producer George Pal has prepared a mobile display, which at present is on exhibition at the University of Princeton, to publicize his Puppetoon series nationally. This exhibit not only shows the completed subject, but depicts the puppets in their various forms of preparation. After the exhibit at Princeton, plans call for the spectacle to be routed into big cities throughout the country.

Two picture books on the Pal characters are now on sale in the book stores, and several recording companies are negotiating with Pal for a children's album on his "Jasper" and "Punchy and Judy" puppets.

BACK TO WORK. Back in civilian clothes again after serving in the Navy as a WAVE since 1943, Loia Cheaney (right) is again in charge of exploitation of shorts as assistant to Besa Short (left), head of Interstate Circuits short subjects booking department at the company's home office in Dallas.

Warners Set 'Star in Night' As Annual Christmas Release

"Star in the Night," Warner short subject released last week as a special Christmas attraction, will be reissued annually as a holiday featurette, according to Norman H. Moray, short subject sales manager.

Decision to make the subject a yearly special was made Wednesday as a result of reactions from exhibitors and audiences who saw the picture the past week and in its pre-release engagements.

"Star in the Night" is said to be the costliest two-reeler ever made by Warners, due chiefly to its strong cast including Donald Woods, J. Carroll Naish, Dick Erdman, Rosina Galli.

Veteran Cartoon Unit Set Up at MGM By Producer Fred Quimby

MGM Producer Fred Quimby has organized a new cartoon unit staffed entirely with returning service personnel. Included in the group are Bill Williams and Ralph Tiller (AAF); Jack Cosgriff and Chuck Couch (U. S. Navy); Vonda Bronson Wise and Kathleen Coyle (Waves). They have been assigned to the Barney Bear unit under the supervision of William Hanna and Joseph Barbara, co-directors of the Tom and Jerry series.

A second unit is also in the process of being organized for a musical series of cartoons, the first of which will be "Tales of Vienna Woods."

May Shows Short Subjects at Saturday Matinee Kid Shows

Saturday matinee shows are being held regularly at the Rosetta Theatre, Miami, Fla., by Ed May, manager, for boy and girl members of the theatre's Kiddie Club.

Besides the regular feature, May is giving the youngsters a diversified program of short subjects including serials, comedies, cartoons and newsreels.

SHORT SUBJECT REVIEWS

Hitler Lives? (Excellent)

WB (2105) Featurette 20 mins.

At a time when one of America's great problems is the handling of Germany, this highly topical short, narrated by Knox Manning, shouts again and again to be firm with the ex-master race, to watch the seemingly docile burghers and to make sure another Fuehrer does not rise from the dregs of beaten Germany. It goes on to point out that we must sear the warlike attitude from the German mind and stamp out his "super-race" complex before the peace can be assured. Showing scenes of Bismarck, Kaiser Wilhelm and Hitler in their thwarted attempts to conquer the world, the picture asks if there will be another. For, as Manning explains, German history has mapped out a blueprint of world conquest which every German leader believes he must follow. Keynoting the big rehabilitation job ahead in Germany, there is also the danger of our own native-born fascists to disrupt it, as even now they speak of World War III. With the indecision over Germany, critical world political affairs and the growing menace of religious and race prejudices, this is a short which is a 'must' and one that should provoke considerable comment.

Challenge to Hollywood (Interesting)

20th-Fox March of Time No. 5 18 Mins.

Giving impetus to Britain's revolutionary plans for capturing U. S. and world motion picture audiences, this newest March of Time poses the question: "What's behind the British film industry's new upswing?" Mindful that England is paying out $80 million a year for U. S. films, theatre magnates such as J. Arthur Rank, are attempting to build the once weak British picture industry into a strong organization which will be able not only to compete with the Hollywood import but also to corner a foothold on the American market. For, going directly to the sets of Britain's movieland, MOT cameras show new stars being groomed, spectacular productions being photographed and borrowed American screen talent aiding the Britons in their attempt to produce a product which American audiences will enjoy. The film is timely and should do well to help exploit future English fare, of which we shall soon see much, and it should put an ant in Hollywood's pants.

BLOWS UP BUGS. As though he weren't already blown up enough, what with that Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry top rating, Warners' Bugs Bunny gets another boost here in connection with the Coronet Magazine coverage of last month. The display is in front of the Majestic Theatre, Dallas, and the gentleman at the right is Walter Boroff, assistant manager.

RKO Radio (63,101) This Is America 17 mins.

The bases and routes of the Army's Air Transport Command, shown both on maps and in scenes taken while flying the routes and at the bases bring out the possibilities of global air travel following the army's closing of its various establishments all over the world upon completion of its job. The film depicts the manner in which supplies were hurriedly transported to all corners of the globe and how, at present, wounded veterans by the thousands are being transported by air to general hospitals in this country. It brings out, too, the ground forces and various establishments necessary in the operation of the various services including housing, banks for changing money into various currencies, schools to teach natives how to care for the planes, etc. Excellent subject for any type of program.

Book Revue (Very Good)

WB (1713 Merrie Melodies 7 mins.

Titles of popular books furnish the basis for gags in this Technicolor cartoon directed by Robert Clampett, in which the theme revolves around the efforts of Daffy Duck in a "Danny Kaye" impersonation, trying to persuade Red Riding Hood not to visit grandma, whom Daffy knows is the wolf. Supporting caricatures of Sinatra, Harry James and Benny Goodman are hilarious and of course the wolf gets his due.

Badminton (Good)

MGM (S-756) Pete Smith Specialty 9 mins.

Pete Smith brings the world's badminton champ, Ken Davidson to the fore, explaining the game's finer points and demonstrating the agility and skill required to knock around the feathered shuttlecock so that the opponent can't make a satisfactory return. Smith's delicious sense of comedy is again demonstrated in his comment and in Ben Blue's off-scene interest in the game.

Bus Pests (Funny)

MGM (S-753) Pete Smith Specialty 10 mins.

The delightful part of this Pete Smith short is that so many people have experienced at least one of the episodes with Bus Pests that Smith presents here. Smith's comment on the various episodes points up again that the producer is one of the true wits of the times. Maybe it will cure some of the pests, at that.

13 WB Shorts Set for January, February Release

Warner Bros. will release 13 short subjects in January and February, according to Norman H. Moray, short subject sales manager.

January releases include two Technicolor specials, "In Old Santa Fe" and "Forest Commandos"; two Technicolor cartoons, "Book Revue" and "Good Egg"; a Technicolor Sports Parade, "Cavalcade of Archery"; a Melody Master Band, "Headline Bands," and a Vitaphone Variety, "Peeks at Hollywood."

In the February list are three Technicolor cartoons, "Holiday for Shoestring," "Trial of Mr. Wolf" and Bugs Bunny in "Baseball Bugs"; two Technicolor Sports Parades, "Holiday on Horseback" and "Michigan Skidaddle," and a Featurette, "Meet Your Navy."

NEWS EDITOR. Lt. Col. John D. Le Vien (above), of New York, has succeeded Alfred Butterfield as news editor of Pathe News. Butterfield was recently appointed editorial director. Le Vien served for nearly five years in the U. S. Army.

5 Paramount Shorts in January

Paramount has scheduled five shorts for release in January. Beginning with Jerry Fairbanks' second "Unusual Occupations" of the current series on January 4, the schedule includes "Bargain Counter Attack," Little Lulu cartoon, January 11, a Grantland Rice Sportlight, "Good Dog," January 18; Fairbanks' "Speaking of Animals" titled "Hillbillies," January 18, and a George Pal puppetoon, "Olio for Jasper," January 25.

Army Selects RKO Sportscope

The Army Motion Picture Service will use RKO's Sportscope No. 5 "Ski Master," nationally. The picture will be shown beginning January 12.

Comet Set to Make Nine in 18 Months

Comet Productions, Inc., newly-formed producing company headed by Mary Pickford, Buddy Rogers and Edward Peskay, will produce nine films in the next 18 months for release through United Artists, it was announced last week in Hollywood by Miss Pickford, president of the company. Six pictures are scheduled to go into production this year.

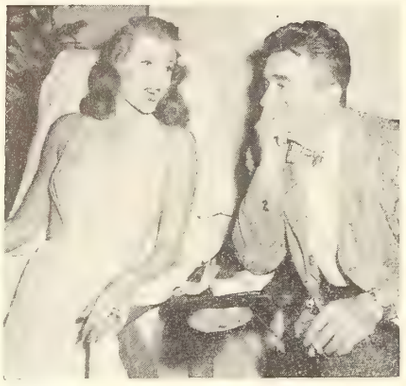
Rogers will be co-producer with Ralph Cohn on four of these and will co-produce two others with Hugh Harman. The Harman-Rogers pictures, patented under the title of Anim-Action, will combine animated cartoons with live talent and will be filmed in color. In this group, "Joe Miracle" and "Haunted Horse" have been set for production early this year.

The four Rogers-Cohn productions will be "Singing Village," "Fighting Irishman," "Little Iodine" and "Adventures of Don Coyote." Miss Pickford pointed out that all Comet productions will be directed toward "whatever will be the best quality and the best length on the screen."

Four writers and two directors have already been signed, according to Miss Pickford, to work out of the United Artists Studio on the Goldwyn lot, producing quarters for Comet productions. Other pictures listed for production are "Widow from Frisco," "The Bat" and "One Rainy Afternoon," also several of the renowned films in which Miss Pickford once starred.

RKO Producing Eight Pictures During January and February

RKO will put four feature pictures into production this month and another four in February, according to the schedules announced by the studio. Due to go this month are: "Christabel Caine," starring Joan Fontaine, Henry Fonda and Alan Marshal, with William Pereira producing; "A Likely Story," co-starring Barbara Hale and Bill Williams, with Richard Berger producing; and "Double Trouble," starring Jack Haley, with Sid Rogell in charge of production.



The February list includes the Technicolor feature, "The Strange Adventure of Sinbad," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maureen O'Hara and Walter Slezak, with Stephen Ames as producer; "Deadlier Than the Male," with Lawrence Tierney; "The Falcon in Reno," with Tom Conway; and "Child of Divorce," with eight-year-old Sharyn Moffett in the title role. Sid Rogell will be the producer on the latter three productions.

Paramount Renews Brackett

Charles Brackett, who joined Paramount as a writer in 1934 and was made a producer three years ago, has renewed his contract with the studio. His past productions include "The Lost Weekend" and "To Each His Own."

Newcomer in Wallis Production

Hal Wallis's newest find, Douglas Dick, has ben tendered a leading role in "The Searching Wind," now in production at Paramount with Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney and Ann Richards starring. Fred Gierman and Henry Rowland have been added to the cast.

SHE TALKS, HE LISTENS. Usually the director talks and the star listens, but that procedure is reversed in the photo above which shows Rita Hayworth voicing a suggestion or two while Director Charles Vidor listens, between scenes of "Gilda" at the Columbia studios.

MGM Describes Atomic Film As Its 'Most Important Picture'

Announcing early 1946 releases, some of which are already completed and have been tradeshown, MGM describes its projected atomic bomb feature, "The Beginning of the End," as "the most important picture the company has ever undertaken." The picture is scheduled to go before the cameras in the immediate future following the completion of conferences between Producer Samuel Marx and scientists, Washington leaders and President Truman, which tied in with the finishing of the story draft by Bob Considine.

Other films announced for 1946 release are "Adventure," "They Were Expendable," "Yolanda and the Thief," "Easy to Wed," "The Harvey Girls," "Holiday in Mexico," "Till the Clouds Roll By," "Ziegfeld Follies," "Vacation From Marriage," "The Green Years," "The Postman Always Rings Twice," "The Hoodlum Saint," "Hold High the Torch," "The Yearling," "Two Sisters From Boston," "No Leave, No Love," "Bad Bascomb" and "What Next, Corporal Hargrove."

Stevens Joins Liberty Films As a Producer-Director

George Stevens has joined Liberty Films, Inc., to become the third top flight producer-director and fourth member of this major production unit at RKO Radio. He thus becomes associated with Frank Capra, William Wyler and Samuel Briskin in what is said to be one of the strongest combinations of production talent to be formed in postwar Hollywood.

Stevens, now in Hollywood on terminal leave, served for two years with the U. S. Army Signal Corps with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Stahl to Assist Espy at PRC

Reeves Espy, vice-president in charge of production at PRC Studios, has announced the appointment of Marvin D. Stahl as his executive assistant.

Service Men Resume RKO Acting Careers

With the new year, the first peaceful one in five years, RKO has welcomed home a group of actors, who have to their credit a distinguished studded record of war service behind them. The ex-combatants include: James Stewart, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Gene Raymond, Henry Fonda, Jack Briggs, Guy Madison, Robert Ryan, Tim Holt, Lee Bonnell and Walter Reed. For the most part, many of them have become active in films again.

James Stewart, who served with the Air Force from August 1942 to September 1945, and discharged with the rank of lieutenant colonel, will star in "It's a Wonderful Life," first of the Liberty Films for RKO release.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who rose to the rank of commander, will be co-starred in the Technicolor special "The Strange Adventures of Sinbad."

Gene Raymond, who enlisted immediately after Pearl Harbor, attended OCS and received a commission, reached the rank of major, when he was placed on the inactive list.

Henry Fonda, who served with the Navy for three years and discharged with the rank of lieutenant, returns to the screen in "Christabel Caine."

Jack Briggs participated in some of the bitterest fighting in Okinawa with the Marines.

Guy Madison, who co-stars in 'Till the End of Time," received a medical discharge for injuries sustained in a surf-boat accident.

Robert Ryan, last seen in films in "Tender Comrade," served two years with the Marines.

Bemedaled Tim Holt, visited the studio recently while on terminal leave. He completed 22 missions over Japan.

Lee Bonnel served in the Coast Guard.

Kent Smith, discharged after serving three years with the Army, has a leading role in "The Spiral Staircase."

Robert Mitchum recently returned from 10 months of Army service, went into a top role in "Till the End of Time."

Walter Reed went into the Air Force in 1942 and was drafted for the service show, "Winged Victory." He returned to RKO last November.

Riskin Budget For 3 Films To Be $5 Million in 1946

Robert Riskin Productions announced a production budget of $5 million and a diversified program ranging from drawing room to desert in background for the three films which the company will place before the cameras during 1946.

Riskin is now completing the final script of "The Magic City," a modern romantic comedy, and is about to begin casting. In addition he will make an outdoor action drama based on the folklore legend, "Johnny Appleseed," the fighting father of the American orchard.

His next production will be an action melodrama, "Impact," based on a sociological study of the effect of modern industry on present-day American society.

Schaefer to Produce Five Films

Republic Producer Armand Schaefer has received five new picture properties from Vice-President Allen Wilson for further preparation and production. "Lonely Hearts Club," starring Jane Withers, is the first vehicle scheduled, to be followed by "Miss Androcles and the Lion," "Companion Wanted," "Major Muscle" and an as yet untitled screenplay.

Lederman to Direct 'Blackie'

Columbia has assigned D. Ross Lederman to direct "Boston Blackie's Private Ghost."

William O'Sullivan to Produce 12 Films in 1946 for Republic

Allen Wilson, Republic vice-president, has delegated William J. O'Sullivan, to the production assignment on twelve forthcoming films including the million-dollar production, "The Fabulous Texan," story of the Texas outlaw, Sam Bass, which is scheduled to be one of the studio's highest-budgeted pictures for 1946.

Other films on O'Sullivan's schedule includes: "Passkey to Danger," which is set for an early January starting date, "The Invisible Informer," "The Twisted Circle," "The Inner Circle," "The Gentlemen from Missouri," "Down Tahiti Way." "Move Over, Dear," "Rose of Avenue A," "Baby Face Nelson," "Puzzle for Puppets," and "Cheers Are Not Enough."

Bernerd's First for '46 Changed

Jeffrey Bernerd's initial production for Monogram in 1946 will be "Don't Gamble With Strangers," which George Wallace Sayre is adapting from his own story. The originally scheduled "Wife Wanted" has been set back because of the absence of Kay Francis, who is now touring the east in a stage play.

MGM Purchases 'Aweigh' Sequel

MGM has purchased "Our Navy," an original story by Robert Taplinger, as a sequel to "Anchors Aweigh," which starred Frank Sinatra, Gene Kelly and Kathryn Grayson. Joe Pasternak, who intends to use the same cast, will produce with George Sidney directing.

Monogram Picks Up Louie Option

Monogram will take up its option on Ducky Louie, 13-yearold Chinese actor, when it falls due on January 20.

Saville Signs New MGM Pact

Victor Saville, who after signing a new long-term contract, was assigned to direct the forthcoming MGM production of "Green Dolphin Street," will start preparation on the Elizabeth Goudge novel upon return from a trip to England. Carey Wilson will produce.

Monogram Renews Belita Option

Monogram has renewed its option on the services of Belita, who recently completed "Suspense." Her current option does not expire until next month.

Lang to Direct 'Cloak, Dagger'

Fritz Lang reported to Warners last week to start preparations on "Cloak and Dagger," which he will direct for United States Pictures. The Gary Cooper starrer is slated to go before the cameras the latter part of January. Lang recently directed "Scarlet Street" for Universal release.

Join 'Lonely Hearts' Cast

Grant Withers and Helen Wallace go into the cast of Republic's "Lonely Hearts Club," starring Jane Withers with Jimmy Lydon, which will go into production this month with George Blair directing and Armand Schaefer as associate producer.

Daves to Direct 'Dealer's'

Delmer Daves, who directed "Pride of the Marines," has been assigned to direct "The Dealer's Name Was George," scheduled as a Humphrey Bogart starrer. The drama, an original by Ketti Frings, will be produced by Arnold Albert for Warners. Gertrude Walker is doing the screenplay.

Completes 'Sunset' Screenplay

Barry Shimpan has finished the screenplay at Republic on "Santa Fe Sunset" for Associate Producer Lou Gray. This will be another color musical western to co-star Monte Hale and Adrian Booth, the third in the series of four.

Sparks Joins RKO in Production Realignment

RKO, in a general reshuffle of producers and a revised production alignment, signed Robert Sparks, who recently resigned as an executive member of the Advisory Board at Universal, as an executive producer, Charles W. Koerner, vice-president in charge of production announced. Sparks will report to the studio on January 7.

Under the revamped setup, Sparks will supervise the films handled by Producers Adrian Scott, William Pereira, Warren Duff and Alfred Bloomingdale. Similarly, Executive Producer Jack J. Gross will oversee the productions assigned to Val Lewton, Harriet Parsons, Joan Harrison, Bert Granet, Richard Berger, Nat Holt and Eddie Cantor.

These two groups will turn out a total of 23 top-budget pictures in 1946. In addition, one top-budget film will be produced annually by John Houseman, Stephen Ames and Dudley Nichols, all of whom will operate under the direct supervision of Koerner and his general production aide, William Dozier.

Balance of the studio's product scheduled for 1946, consisting of an additional 20 features, will be guided by Executive Producer Sid Rogell, who will supervise Producers Herman Schlom, Martin Mooney, Leslie Goodwins and Short Subjects Producer George Bilson.

Quinn Set for 'California'

Anthony Quinn, who recently completed an important role in Paramount's "The Imperfect Lady," has been signed for the part of Don Luis Rivera Y Hernandez in "California," Technicolor drama starring Ray Milland, Barbara Stanwyck and Barry Fitzgerald.

Columbia Names Platt for Role

Columbia has chosen dancing star Marc Platt, who made his debut in "Tonight and Every Night," to be the male dancing lead opposite Rita Hayworth in the Technicolor musical fantasy, "Down to Earth." Don Hartman will produce and Al Hall will direct.

MGM Signs Patricia Marshall

Patricia Marshall, who scored in "The Day Before Spring," the new Broadway musical hit, has been signed to a long-term contract by MGM. Miss Marshall, however, will probably not go to the studio until September due to her theatrical contract.

'Dark Corner' for Miss Collier

Constance Collier is 20th Century-Fox's latest addition to the cast of "Dark Corner," the psychological murder mystery which Fred Kohlmar is producing. Also in the cast are Clifton Webb, William Bendix, Mark Stevens, Lucille Ball and Kurt Kreuger.

Levey Plans Next Film

Jules Levey will arrive in Hollywood late this week to make final arrangements for casting his next production, "Conspiracy in Jazz," a musical for United Artists release. The picture, his most ambitious undertaking to date, will go into production early in 1946.

Hepburn, Taylor to Co-Star

Katharine Hepburn will be co-starred with Robert Taylor in MGM's "You Were There," slated to go before the cameras shortly with Pandro S. Berman producing.

Gleason in 'Lucky Baldwin'

MGM has signed Jimmy Gleason, who recently completed "The Hoodlum Saint," for a role in the forthcoming Clark Gable starrer, "Lucky Baldwin."

New Recording System Soon to Be Available from Western Electric

A new recording system which will enable producers to record any of the standard original or release type of sound tracks on either 16-mm. or 35-mm. film, has been announced by the Electrical Research Products Division of the Western Electric Company.

Scheduled for availability within the next few months, the new design features simplicity of mechanical parts and freedom from critical adjustments, more rapid threading of film, adaptability to either variable area or density recording, and the reduction of flutter to extraordinarily low volume. Its unit assembly type of construction and the introduction of various innovations permit flexibility in meeting a variety of recording requirements, including changing from 35-mm. to 16-mm. in a matter of minutes by the use of a screw driver. Another feature of the new device is its small size and weight, which represents a marked departure in design from present-day equipment.

RKO Signs Dorothy Lamour to 5-Year Pact Starting in 1948

Dorothy Lamour this week signed a contract in Hollywood with RKO for one picture a year for five years starting in June, 1948.

The 30-month lapse between the signing of the contract and the time it takes effect, is caused by the fact that the actress is under Paramount contract until June, 1948.

Temple-Madison Romantic Team

Shirley Temple and Guy Madison have been set as a new romantic team by David O. Selznick and will make their co-starring debut in an untitled production which will begin shooting in February. The Temple-Madison combination was the result of Shirley's performance in Columbia's "Kiss and Tell," coupled with Madison's showing in Dore Schary's "Till the End of Time" at RKO.

Murphy Elected 'U' Studio V-P

Martin Murphy, formerly studio and production manager at Universal Studios was elected vice-president and general manager in charge of studio operations at a recent meeting of the board of directors. Morrie Weiner, Murphy's former assistant in the production office, becomes general production manager of the studio.

Tuttle Named Lieutenant-Colonel

Bert Tuttle, head of the art department at the Warner Bros. studio, now on terminal leave pending his discharge from the Army on February 12, has received notice from the War Department that he has been promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

Olivia Gets Stellar Lead

Olivia de Havilland has been chosen for the stellar lead in "The Dark Mirror," the Nunnally Johnson production which starts shooting shortly. Screenplay was written by Nunnally Johnson from the short story by Vladimir Pozner, and Robert Siodmak, who was borrowed from Universal, will direct.

Buys 'Bride Saw Red'

Purchase of "The Bride Saw Red," a story by Robert Carson which was published in the Saturday Evening Post, has been announced by Paramount. Leonard Fields will produce the film and Lawrence Hazard will write the screenplay.

The Drive With a Heart! MARCH OF DIMES (Jan. 24-30)

FLASH!...

"THE BELLS OF ST. MARY'S," in its fourth week at Radio City Music Hall, has set a new all-time high box-office record. Never before have such tremendous crowds tried to get into the world's largest theatre, which broke all precedent by opening its doors at 7.30 A. M. All week long squads of police were kept busy forming double and triple lines, which at times stretched as much as FOUR BLOCKS from the entrance to the theatre. Thousands upon thousands were turned away in a week that has made new theatre history!

TAC

The second phase of the organization of the Theatre Activities Committee, sometimes referred to as the new national exhibitors' group, was held in New York last Monday.

From all indications the idea is progressing smoothly and heading for the goal for which it is intended. Following this second meeting there will be regional meetings to select delegates to the first national convention to be held early in April in St. Louis.

It is our honest belief that independent exhibitors may find in this new organization something highly important to them and the very least they can do is to attend the local meeting and ascertain everything they should know about what this group intends doing and if and how it can be useful and valuable to all exhibitors.

The only investment necessary is the time required to attend meeting in the area. If, after attending, you do not believe you want to be a part of this organization, naturally there is no compulsion for you to associate yourself with it, and it then will remain for time and the accomplishments, or lack of them, by the TAC to prove or disprove the contention that this movement as presently planned is something vitally necessary to all exhibitors—big, little, affiliated or independent.

The plan, in our opinion, is one upon which every exhibitor should form his own estimate based on personal acquaintance of its aims and its organization as gained at area meetings and we think it would be regrettable indeed were any considerable number of theatremen to stand aside from this projected "united front" of exhibitors merely because some groups or individuals voice opposition without even considering the merits of the idea. The Theatre Activities Committee will have to accomplish great results for the exhibition field or it will fall of its own weight.

Team Work Wins

During the recent Victory Loan Drive this writer was privileged to serve as National Campaign Coordinator, and in all of his contacts with the field units made a strong plea for close team work between all the elements of the drive.

No one will deny that the last bond drive was a tough one for all concerned. Nor will anyone deny that such success as was achieved went well beyond the expectations of even the Treasury Department.

If ever the necessity for team work existed, it was during that drive, and we wish to take this means of expressing our thanks and appreciation to every one of the men and women throughout the country who helped make up the industry team that put over the Victory Loan Drive.

The Victory Loan Drive as in the cases of all of the other war-connected campaigns by the industry stands as a monument that repudiates the idea that the various branches of our industry cannot work together as a smooth-running team.

Names In The News

Joe Unger's promotion to sales manager for UA is a well deserved tribute to an able sales executive whose experience and background well equip him for the top spot. We are confident that Joe will weld a smooth-working organization.

Harry Thomas, another "oldtimer" who has been consistently climbing the ladder in distribution circles, is gradually ironing out the kinks in the old PRC machine and giving it plenty of lubrication for efficient operation and better organization spirit.

Ted Gamble's ears still must be ringing with the accolade of praise that was tendered to him at that super-colossal banquet they threw for him the other night here in New York. We were not sure which gave us the bigger thrill, the things said about Ted, or the beaming faces of his wife and three kiddies.

Bob O'Donnell has been handling a three-point program these past few days: (a) Running the Interstate Circuit, (b) Fighting the flu, and (c) Completing plans for the Variety Club's Tenth Convention which will be held in New York in May. We are happy to report that he's doing well with all three. But he'd better keep his desk clear for the preliminaries for the convention.

At the pace he is setting, J. Arthur Rank, may soon start to crowd many domestic bigwig names off the front pages. If the batting average of his pictures runs as high as his publicity you'd better start saving some playing time.

Co-incidental with the beginning of their Silver Anniversary, Harry and Jack Cohn are two names you will be reading often in the news during the months to come. None can deny that from their early and small beginnings they have built up a remarkable company. Columbia Pictures has made tremendous strides since the days when it all started with CBC Pictures. And, brother, twenty-five years is a long time.

Claim Trust Charges Collapsed at Trial

Joining together on the legal aspects of the case and to present the legal background of their trade practices, the five distributor defendants with affiliated circuits—Paramount, RKO Radio, Loew's, Warners and 20th Century-Fox—declare in briefs filed in New York's film anti-trust suit this week that the "basic fallacy in the plaintiff's case, as we see it, is the presumption in which it indulges from the outset of its brief that the five producer-exhibitors are to be treated 'collectively' in determining whether there exists a Sherman Act violation."

Besides the joint brief on the law, six of the eight defendants filed separate briefs, while United Artists and Universal submitted a combined brief. Oral arguments before the three-judge court, comprised of Judges Augustus N. Hand, Henry W. Goddard and John Bright, are scheduled to begin January 15.

Pointing out that they are not big enough in and of themselves to ever acquire a monopoly, the distributor-defendants with theatre affiliates declare that "cross-licensing, as used in this case, is but an empty catchword, not establishing 'collective' action."

"Take this word 'collectively' away and the Government's whole case collapses," the brief contends, pointing out that the "plaintiff's brief concedes that 'individually considered, each distributor-defendant directly controls only a fraction of the entire domestic distribution business' and 'individually considered, each producer-exhibitor directly controls only a fraction of the domestic exhibition business.'"

Denying the Government charges, the joint brief makes two major points; namely, that the license agreements used in the motion picture industry are lawful and that the five producer exhibitors are entitled as a matter of law to own theatres exhibiting pictures to the public.

In an independent brief, Paramount contends that the Government "has failed to show violations of the law which would justify any relief, much less any basis for amputation or divorcement of Paramount from its theatre interests lawfully acquired and operated, which in Paramount's case would affect the interests of many majority and minority stockholders in a large number of autonomous theatre operating companies which are not parties to this action."

Answering Government charges, 20th Century-Fox and National Theatres, in their brief, advocate that a "supplemental decree should not be entered endorsing the decree of November 20, 1940, insofar as it is now extant, and specifically denying the plaintiff's prayer for further relief."

Stating that Government's case against it is but a tissue of fugitive conclusions," Loew's Incorporated denies any evidence of monopoly or restraint of trade in its final brief. In two points Loew's asserts that . . . "Loew's Incorporated has no monopoly either of distribution or exhibition of motion picture films" and "Loew's as a distributor-exhibitor is not a party to any contract or combination to monopolize or restrain trade in the exhibition of motion picture films." Its interpretation of the statistical evidence filed both by the Government and itself are quoted in substantiation of the denials.

The RKO brief contends that the "evidence

Offer Aid in Film Ban

Assistance of the American Civil Liberties Union was this week offered Walter Wanger, vice-president of Diana Productions, an independent producing unit releasing through Universal, in combating the action of the New York State Board of Censors, which banned "Scarlet Street" from exhibition in that State. A screening of the picture for Dr. Irwin A. Conroe, acting director of the motion picture division of the State Education Department, who could sustain or reverse the Board's decision, was scheduled for Thursday afternoon (January 10).

'U' Sets Meetings on Six J. A. Rank Films

A series of regional meetings to fashion a sales policy for the release of six English pictures from J. Arthur Rank was announced this week by W. A. Scully, Universal's vice-president and general sales manager, with the first three-day session scheduled to open Thursday (January 10) in New York. Other meetings will be held in Chicago, January 13-15, and San Francisco, January 18-20.

W. A. Scully

In a statement explaining Universal's decision to release the six English-made pictures ("The Man in Grey," "The Seventh Veil," "Madonna of the Seven Moons," "Wicked Lady," "Rogue's Progress" and "Dead of Night"), Scully declared that "they are very fine pictures and conform to any competitive standard of entertainment," and that "they will be commercially successful" if exhibitors augment the promotion effort Universal is planning to give them. "There is something good in all pictures," Scully declared, adding that "good showmen will find the elements that appeal to the public and point that up accordingly."

In addition to Scully, the New York meeting was to be attended by E. T. Gomersall, assistant general sales manager; Fred Meyers, eastern sales manager, F. J. A. McCarthy, southern sales manager, and Maurice A. Bergman, eastern advertising director. Both Scully and Bergman will attend the Chicago and San Francisco meetings, with A. J. O'Keefe, western sales manager, presiding with Scully. Gomersall will join Scully and O'Keefe in Chicago.

Universal to Hold Foreign Sales Meeting on Coast

The first postwar foreign sales convention of a major motion picture company will be held in Hollywood by Universal International January 15 to 21. Joseph H. Seidelman, president, is now on the coast making final arrangements. Every Universal manager from Latin-America and the British West Indies will attend the sessions, to be held at the Ambassador Hotel.

A group of home office executives including Al Daff, Charles A. Kirby, Louis Foeldes and Fortunat Baronat will join Seiedlman in Los Angeles for the meeting. The representatives from Latin-America who will attend are Monroe Isen, Argentina; Al Szekler, Brazil; E. N. Ferro, Panama and Central America; Jacob Epstein, Mexico; Raul Viancos, Chile; Ramon Pazos, Peru; Alejandro Pettenazza, Uruguay; Carlos Matos, Puerto Rico; Pedro Matos, Venezuela; Ramon Garcia, Cuba and Saul Jacobs, Trinidad.

'Strangers' Release Feb. 16

Warners' "Three Strangers" has been set for February 16 release.

Majors Sue Snider, Charge % Frauds

Charging fraudulent statements on percentage pictures, the eight major companies (RKO, Loew's, Paramount, 20th Century-Fox, United Artists, Columbia, Warner Bros. and Universal) this week filed suit in U. S. District Court, Boston, against Ralph E. Snider and five exhibiting corporations of which he is alleged to be a majority stockholder.

The suit was filed, according to each complaint, after the defendants had permitted a partial audit of theatre records following requests of the plaintiffs on various occasions during the past two years. When the defendants allegedly refused to permit continuance of the audit, it was discontinued. Theatres of the Snider circuit named in the complaint are the Strand and Empire, Portland; Empire and Bijou, Providence, and theatres in various smaller Massachusetts and Rhode Island towns.

"By intentionally furnishing to the plaintiff false and inaccurate statements of the receipts" from percentage pictures, Snider and the exhibiting corporations participated in carrying out a plan designed to defraud, it is charged in each suit. Misrepresentation of the grosses, not only to induce the distributor-plaintiff to ask and accept less than it was entitled to on its percentage pictures, but to obtain at times reductions in rental upon pictures that had already been shown, is also claimed. Checkers, the distributors charge, were induced to join in the falsification of the reports.

Each complaint asks the court to award judgment for the damages sustained by the alleged misrepresentations and to restrain the defendants from destroying or altering their records pending an audit and discovery.

20th-Fox Subscribes to Confidential

Twentieth Century-Fox will officially subscribe to Confidential Reports checking service beginning February 1, Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution, announced this week. Other companies entrusting the checking of their percentage engagements to Confidential include Columbia, Paramount, RKO Radio, Universal and United Artists.

5 in MGM's 15th Block

Five pictures will comprise MGM's 15th block for release during January and February. They are "The Harvey Girls," "Portrait of Maria," "Up Goes Maisie," "A Letter for Evie" and "The Sailor Takes a Wife." No specific release dates are set, since MGM dropped this policy some time ago.

Kalmenson Enroute to Coast

Ben Kalmenson, vice-president and general sales manager of Warner Bros., is enroute to the coast for studio conferences with Jack L. Warner, executive producer. He will make stopovers in Chicago and other key cities.

Program for National VarietyClubMeetSet

A schedule of events for the 10th annual convention of the Variety Clubs of America to be held May 15-18 at the Astor Hotel in New York were announced this week by Robert J. O'Donnell, National Chief Barker.

With the first day devoted to registration of delegates and a meeting of the national officers and delegates, regular business sessions are scheduled for the mornings and afternoons of May 16 and 17. Officers to serve for the ensuing year will be elected on the 17th, and on the evening of the 17th the National Tent will play host to the visiting barkers.

A cocktail party hosted by a major company will precede the banquet at which the recipient of the annual Humanitarian Award will be honored and presented with a silver plaque.

Balloting for the Humanitarian Award recipient is now under way by the committee headed by A. K. "Rosey" Rowswell, and comprised of prominent educators and publicists.

Committees and chairmen to handle the convention will be announced next week, following a meeting of the national officers either in Dallas or New York and presided over by O'Donnell and Big Boss John H. Harris. "Chick" Lewis will represent the national tent in New York and act in an advisory capacity to all committees in planning the convention.

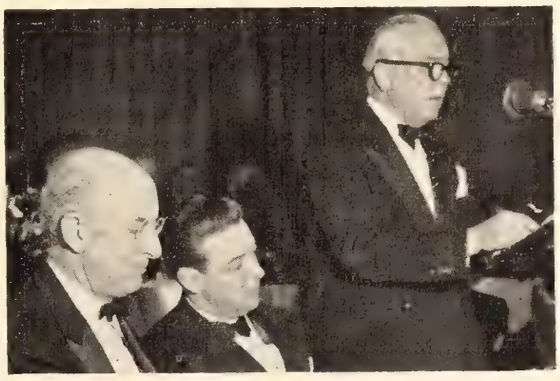
Goldhar, Orr Are Named UA Eastern, Western Sales Managers

Appointment of Jack Goldhar and Maury Orr, respectively, as eastern and western sales manager for United Artists was announced this week by J. J. Unger, general sales manager. Goldhar, former district manager, joined UA as salesman in Detroit in 1924, while Orr, former Cleveland branch manager, became a salesman for the company in New York in 1941 after working for Warners in Boston.

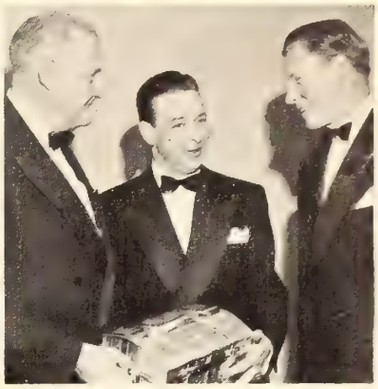
Other executive post changes in UA's sales organization included: C. W. "Ching" Allen, elevated from the branch managership in Atlanta to Prairie district manager in charge of Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis, succeeded as Atlanta branch manager by Henry G. Krumm; M. Dudelson, former Detroit manager, successor to Goldhar as district manager in charge of Detroit, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, succeeded as Detroit branch manager by Sidney J. Bowman; William Shartin, former Pittsburgh branch manager, successor to Orr as Cleveland branch manager. Shartin's successor in the Pittsburgh post will be announced shortly.

Silverstone Joins 20th-Fox Int'l As Home Office Representative

Emanuel D. Silverstone has joined 20th Century-Fox International Corp. as special home office representative, serving under Murray Silverstone, president, it was announced last week by Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox president. Silverstone had been with United Artists for a year in a similar capacity.



The new 20th-Fox executive recently returned from a seven months' trip abroad, during which time he made a survey of the European market for United Artists. He had been with that company 15 years, having joined Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., in 1931 as special sales representative in New York.



AMPA, Publicity Club Luncheon

AMPA and the Publicity Club will hold a joint luncheon at the latter's headquarters February 18. This will be in addition to AMPA's next regular meeting date, which will be announced in the meantime.

Industry Honors Ted Gamble at Testimonial

The film industry paid high compliment to one of its own representatives and in turn the industry received glowing tribute from notables outside its ranks at a dinner held at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, New York, on the night of January 7th to honor Ted R. Gamble, Oregon theatreman who has served as the Treasury Department's National War Finance Director for the past four years. There were some 1,200 persons, among them some of the industry's most prominent figures, in the immense ballroom to pay tribute to Gamble.

The initial address, in which Gamble's achievements were lauded, was given by Spyros P. Skouras, general chairman of the dinner. George Murphy, screen star and president of the Screen Actor's Guild, acted as toast master and introduced a distinguished group of speakers who included Lt. Gen. Alexander Vandergrift, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Gov. Earl Snell of Oregon; Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Oregonian; Frank W. Tripp, chairman of the Allied Newspaper Council; S. H. Fabian, George J. Schaefer and Francis Harmon.

In addition to serving as a memorable tribute by the industry to one of its own members, the event in a secondary sense was a valedictory for the War Activities Committee, which officially passed from the active scene at the end of 1945.

Farewell Luncheon to Hollander

Twentieth Century-Fox associates of Edward Hollander, former ad sales manager of the company and an employe for the past twelve years, tendered him a farewell luncheon Friday at the Castleholm Restaurant. Over one hundred members of 20th-Fox advertising, publicity and exploitation departments attended. Hollander plans to enter business outside of the industry next week.

Named Singapore Representative

Richard F. O'Connell has been named Paramount's representative in Singapore by George Weltner, president of Paramount International. During the past five years O'Connell has been manager of the company's overseas service department.

New Jersey Allied Adopts Resolution Passed by CIE

A resolution declaring the group's decision to refuse to participate in the meeting called by S. H. Fabian to discuss a form of organization to succeed the WAC theatres division, recently passed by the Conference of Independent Exhibitors at a meeting in Washington, was unanimously adopted this week by Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey at a meeting held at the organization's headquarters in New York.

Martin Smith, national president of Allied States Association, who was in New York to attend the Ted Gamble dinner, addressed the members on the checking situation and conditions confronting independent theatre owners throughout the country. He also discussed the Government's anti-trust suit against the eight majors.

Fitzgibbons Cites Industry's War Record

Efforts made by the motion picture industry both in Canada and the United States to ease the burden of servicemen, aid in the war bond campaigns and war charity drives, and sacrifices made by the industry in the fight for peace were cited by J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp., in his yearly statement to the public.

J. J. Fitzgibbons

Noting that filmdom's activities had been directed through the Canadian Motion Picture War Service Committee in Canada and through its larger U. S. ally, the War Activities Committee, Fitzgibbons reported that nearly 200 films had been released for war loan campaigns by these organizations and pointed with pride to the Hollywood Victory Caravan which, he said, climaxed a record of which the industry in both countries could well be proud.

Turning to the 16-mm. gift film program for the armed forces, he revealed that the WAC had delivered 43,306 feature and 33,236 shorts prints representing a cash value of $38,500,000. The Hollywood Victory Committee made possible 53,056 free appearances at over 7000 events. Named as outstanding in the events list were 119 overseas tours in which 174 players gave a total of 12,762 days. The Red Cross, he said, had collected more than $22 million through the industry, and added that other grants from filmdom's charity organizations had benefited the fund by $5 million.

New Exhibitor Organization Sets April Date For National Meet, Gamble Heads Committee

A newly proposed national exhibitor unit moved further toward crystalization in New York this week at a meeting of the interim committee appointed by S. H. Fabian to serve with him in formulating plans discussed at a gathering of exhibitors in Washington last December. Following the meeting, Fabian announced that there will be a national convention in St. Louis next April; that the organization will be known tentatively at the Theatre Activities Committee; that Harry C. Arthur, Jr., head of Fanchon & Marco and St. Louis Amusement Co., had been named head of the Convention Arrangements Committee, and that Ted R. Gamble, former National War Finance Director of the Treasury Department and head of a circuit in the Northwest, would serve as chairman of the Organization Committee for the new national exhibitor movement.

Fabian also announced the appointment of Jay Emanuel to head another committee composed of William Crockett, Arthur Mayer, Robert Wilby, Leonard Goldenson and Harry Brandt to draft the proposed constitution and by-laws of the organization to be submitted at the St. Louis meeting.

Local WAC heads in each state are being asked to organize delegations, and each delegation is asked to represent as many exhibitors in each territory as possible. Fabian stressed that organizations cannot and do not belong to the new group; only individual theatre owners are eligible.

Until permanent officers are elected, Fabian will preside as temporary chairman at the convention. Although as many delegations as desire may attend, the number for each state will depend, basically, on the number of exchange centers in that state. Voting power of delegates and delegations will also be considered at the meeting. The organization's goal is a total membership equaling that of the WAC, which had 16,660 pledges from theatres.

Attending the meeting this week besides Fabian were Harry Arthur, Harry Brandt, William F. Crockett, Jay Emanuel, Ted R. Gamble, M. A. Silver, Arthur L. Mayer, Fred Schwartz, Charles Skouras, J. R. Vogel, R. B. Wilby, Max Yellen and Max Cohen.

Knox, Bergman, Garson

Alexander Knox, Ingrid Bergman and Greer Garson were selected by press and radio critics for the top performances of 1945 in Film Daily's Famous Fives of 1945 poll. Knox was cited for his performance in 20th-Fox's "Wilson," while Miss Bergman and Miss Garson tied for stellar honors through their portrayals in David O. Selznick-UA's "Spellbound" and MGM's "Valley of Decision," respectively. Male runners-up were Gregory Peck, Burgess Meredith, Joseph Cotten, James Dunn and Cary Grant, while those behind the Misses Bergman and Garson were Joan Crawford and Bette Davis.

Republic Holds Sales Meets In New York and Chicago

A regional sales meeting at the Blackstone, Chicago, closed a sales gathering of Republic executives who met on a discussion of the company's forthcoming product. James R. Grainger, executive vice-president and general sales manager, conducted the Chicago sessions which were attended by Midwestern District Sales Manager Will Baker; Max Mazur, Chicago; E. H. Brauer, Indianapolis; J. G. Frackman, Milwaukee and William M. Grant, Minneapolis. Grainger flew to the coast following the meeting to confer with Herbert J. Yates, company president.

Earlier in the week, Grainger presided over a two-day meeting at the home office, New York, attended by Edward L. Walton, assistant general sales manager; Walter L. Titus, Jr., in charge of branch operations; Maxwell Gillis, eastern district sales manager; Joseph Engel, Philadelphia; William P. Murphy, New York; Jake Flax, Washington; Arthur Newman, Albany; Leon A. Herman, Buffalo; Jerome Lewis, New Haven and Frank Dervin, Boston.

Crown Joins Goldwyn Productions

Alfred Crown has been engaged by Samuel Goldwyn Productions as a special representative in the foreign market, it has been announced by James A. Mulvey, president. Crown had previously served in a similar capacity for MGM in South America and for Grand National in Europe. Recently discharged from the Army, he was engaged in the organization of Film Classics. His first trip for Goldwyn will probably be to South America.

Claim Trust Charges Collapsed at Trial

establishes that RKO has not discriminated in favor of affiliated theatres in selecting the theatres which play its pictures on first run" and that there is no evidence to support the claim that RKO has combined to restrain the freedom of any exhibitor to negotiate for features distributed by other distributors.

Lack of proof of conspiracy or combination to monopolize or restrain trade is also charged in the Warner brief, which claims that the plaintiff's case on conspiracy and combination "rests on baseless inferences and invalid legal speculations."

Business practices of Universal and United Artists are defended in their joint brief as being legal and without violation of the Sherman Act.

Pointing out that the Government has contended that the defendants usually favor and sell affiliated theatres where they are in competition with independents, the Columbia brief declares that the activities of Columbia demonstrate that the company invariably sells to independents in these situations.

Reagan Sets Four Paramount Divisional Sales Meetings

Four divisional sales meetings to discuss current conditions and forthcoming product have been set for January and early February by Charles M. Reagan, Paramount vice-president in charge of sales. The meetings will start January 21 to 23 with the western division in Denver, continue with the central division on January 24 to 25 in Chicago, the eastern division on January 28 to 30 in Washington and the New York and southern division on January 31, February 1 and 2 at the Pierre in New York.

Attending the meetings at the respective divisional centers will be a home office contingent headed by Reagan and including Claude Lee director of public relations; Oscar Morgan, short subjects and newsreel sales head; Curtis Mitchell, national director of advertising and publicity; C. J. Scollard, executive assistant to Reagan; Joseph Walsh, in charge of exchange accounting and Fred Leroy, home office representative.

Divisional managers present will be George A. Smith, western and Lester Coleman, assistant; James J. Donahue, central, and Arthur Dunne, assistant; William Erbb, eastern and H. J. Lorber, assistant; Hugh Owen, New York and southern and Jack Roper, assistant. Branch and district managers will attend from exchanges.

Rites Held for Frank Vreeland

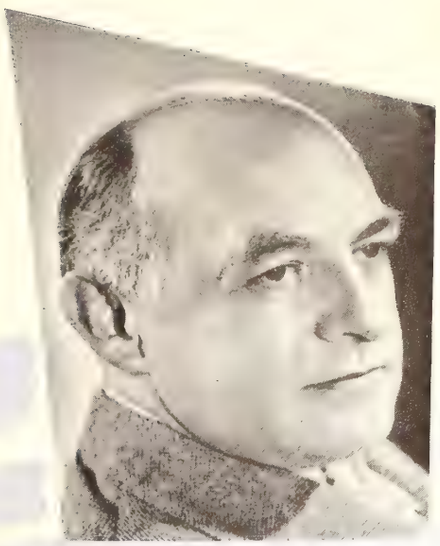
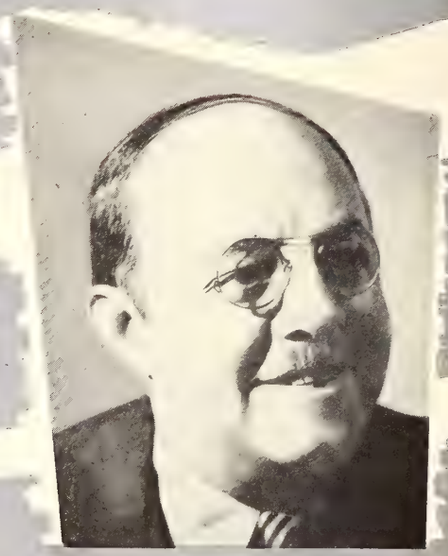
Baremore Announces Resignation

R. W. Baremore has resigned as associate editor of The Independent. Baremore, who is a veteran in the trade paper branch of the industry, will announce his future plans in a short time.



Feminine 'Scalper'

Leaving her seat in a crowded theatre, a University City, Mo., school teacher discovered, upon reaching the lobby, a man's toupee dangling from a button on the front of her coat. The woman unfastened the headpiece, dropped it carefully, then hurried out.



Announcing

COLUMBIA'S SILVER ANNIVERSARY 1946

HARRY COHN
President

JACK COHN
Executive Vice-President

Those of us who have pioneered in the motion picture business have seen a miracle come to pass. We have seen this business, which started so humbly, achieve a position of unique international stature and, more importantly . . . responsibility. Not only has the entertainment level of our pictures risen steadily, but also, we have learned that Americanism and good pictures can be synonymous. Today we stand at the threshold of a new era. The mighty economic and industrial forces of our nation are being mobilized to insure an era of unprecedented prosperity and lasting peace. The motion picture industry will make important contributions to this effort. I am proud of the role which Columbia Pictures has been privileged to play in our industry during the past twenty-five years; and it is with a keen awareness of our responsibilities as motion picture producers and citizens that we in Columbia embark on our plans for the future.

The Silver Anniversary of a motion picture company, which has grown steadily from its inception through 25 years, reflects a real accomplishment.

As a newcomer to the industry, I marvel at the talent and ingenuity of the individuals who made the American motion picture what it is today. They did something more than build a business; they combined an art and an industry into a universal medium of entertainment which has brought untold joy and happiness to the earth's humble people.

The motion picture has found its voice, clothed itself in color, and has become a chief provider of information, entertainment and inspiration for millions who crowd the great houses that it has built. To this progress, Columbia has made worthy contributions.

The horizons of tomorrow for the motion picture industry are far wider than the horizons of today. They are wider because of the vision and the enterprise of the men who built so well during the past quarter of a century.

On those future pages of motion picture history may Columbia's achievements continue to be many and its record of service be ever bright.

20th-Fox International Opens Training School

Organized to train young men in all phases of the corporation's foreign operations prior to assigning them to posts abroad, a Student's Training School was opened this week by 20th Century-Fox International Corporation as one of the major phases of the company's postwar plans instituted by Spyros Skouras, head of 20th-Fox's worldwide organization. Leslie Whelan, foreign director of advertising and publicity, will act as coordinating director of training.

Murray Silverstone

In announcing the new school, Murray Silverstone, president of 20th-Fox International, pointed out that long before the war ended, Skouras foresaw the need for drawing up plans to develop new manpower for responsible positions abroad. Accordingly preliminary activities for the project began several months ago.

Eighteen servicemen comprised the school's opening-day students. Their 12-month training will encompass the entire field of motion picture selling, merchandising and theatre operations, with special emphasis on methods that obtain in the various world markets. Following this period, each student will be assigned to specific tasks at the home office under a rotating system which will familiarize him with actual operations in all departments, including administration, publicity and advertising, sales control, service, prints and foreign versions.

Kupper Reveals Six Changes in 20th-Fox Exchange Personnel

Six exchange personnel changes were announced this week by William J. Kupper, 20th-Fox general sales manager. Bryan D. Stoner was promoted to district manager under Herman Wobber, western sales manager, with headquarters in San Francisco. Harold L. Beecroft, formerly manager of the Milwaukee exchange, has been appointed manager of the Dallas exchange.

Vincent J. Dugan, former Salt Lake City salesman, has been promoted to the management of the Denver exchange replacing Arthur Abeles, resigned and J. M. Podoloff, manager of the Minneapolis exchange before entering the U. S. Navy, and recently discharged, has been made San Francisco exchange manager.

James M. Connolly has been appointed manager of the Boston exchange, succeeding M. N. Grassgreen who has been transferred to the home office sales department for special assignment. Joe R. Neger, formerly sales and office manager of the Indianapolis exchange, has been appointed manager of the Milwaukee branch, replacing H. L. Beecroft who was recently named manager of the Dallas exchange.

9 New England Houses to Hold 'My Reputation' Premieres Jan. 16

Warners' "My Reputation" will have its world premiere January 16 in nine New England theatres simultaneously.

Houses are the Warner, Worcester; Capitol, Springfield; Roger Sherman, New Haven; Strand, Hartford; Warner and Merritt, Bridgeport; Palace, South Norwalk; Palace, Norwich, and Strand, Albany.

The Broadway opening is scheduled for January 25 at the New York Strand.

20th Sets 5 for February

"Colonel Effingham's Raid," "Shock," "Behind Green Lights" and two re-releases, "Jesse James" and "The Return of Frank James" have been set by 20th Century-Fox for release during February.

Censor Lauds 'Weekend'

Despite the fact that he censored two lines from "The Lost Weekend," Dr. Clyde Hissong, chief film censor of Ohio, declared that the film was the best picture of 1945 and that although he had seen it four times, he planned to see it again. Paramount and Dr. Hissong carried on quite a battle last month over the deleted lines, but the censor remained adamant and the company finally dropped the fight.

Benjamin Named Head Of Rank Affiliate

Eagle Lion Films, Inc., the American company of the J. Arthur Rank group, had its named changed last week to The J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., in order to make the name of Eagle Lion available to the Robert J. Young interests of Pathe Industries, Inc., which recently entered a new world-wide reciprocal film distribution agreement with the Rank group.

Robert S. Benjamin, New York attorney, has been elected president of the J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., with Rank retaining his board chairmanship. Benjamin will act as vice-chairman in Rank's absence. Other officers are Harold Auten, executive vice-president; J. B. L. Lawrence, vice-president and Ralph R. Reynolds, secretary. Reginald Allen was recently announced as Hollywood representative.

The J. Arthur Rank Organization, Inc., will act as the coordinating and liaison office in the United States for the Rank group film interests.

Industry Problems on Agenda at Ohio ITO Meet January 22-23

Industry problems, including film rentals, manpower situation in theatres, use of local checkers, 15-mm. competition, audience collections and repeal of the state admissions tax, will be given a thorough airing at the 12th annual state convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, to be held January 22-23 at the Neil House, Columbus.

Preceded by a Board of Directors dinner meeting January 21, the convention will begin Tuesday with registration of delegates. First business session will be held at 1 p.m. Tuesday in the junior ballroom. President Martin G. Smith will open it, followed by committee reports, talks on industry matters and introduction of visiting guests. The second business session will begin at 1 p.m. Wednesday in the junior ballroom, with election of officers scheduled for the concluding session. It is expected that Governor Frank J. Lausche will be principal speaker at the banquet.

Former Employes Now Members of Cosmo-Sileo Photography Firm

Formation of a partnership with two of his employes was announced this week by Jimmy Sileo, founder of Cosmo-Sileo, photographers to the industry and chief photographers of Radio City Music Hall. The new members are Henry Rapisarda, who has been with Sileo 15 years, and Ben Mancuso, a 12-year employe up to the time he joined the Navy. Mancuso was recently discharged from the Navy after having recived many decorations and distinguishing himself as Chief Photographer's Mate in the South Pacific.

In announcing the partnership, Sileo also revealed that the studio will be expanded and enlarged to accommodate additional advertising photography, as well as publicity work.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management

Radio—It's Big, Learn How To Use It

By Jack Jackson

Theatremen have a new, very potent force with which to influence public opinion in the radio station that is nearby their own showhouse. The rich and tremendous force for winning friends and influencing people in behalf of the enjoyment to be had at movies is the receiver over which people in their own homes receive radio programs. The value of this new medium to the picture theatre showman is the subject of the article which is presented here as a feature in an exclusive series offered by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

"There are ten firms in the United States spending in excess of $10,000,000 each for radio advertising every year."

That statement, made by Conrad Brady, radio executive of Interstate Theatres, at the recent meeting of that company's city managers, was as astounding to me—and darn near as paralyzing—as Joe Louis' slap on the kidneys was to Max Schmeling back in '38. Brady followed it up with so many punch-packed arguments that I came reeling back to my corner and ever since have been dousing my head in great buckets of facts about this diapered giant of the advertising arena.

A few hours spent browsing through the pages of the Broadcasting Year Book for 1945 lends credulity to the fairy tale about Jack and the Beanstalk. I encountered so much amazing information to support Brady's contention that radio efficiently handled, could do a master job of loosening the tightest pocketbooks that I hasten to slip you the lowdown on how to get customers via the air lanes. Of course there are a few hazards to be avoided, but careful planning will bypass these and guarantee an exciting, interesting, inexpensive and profitable business maneuver.

To me—and I believe to most of you—radio bears striking resemblance to Topsy of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who "just grew up." Twenty-three years ago there were only 30 radio stations in the United States. In 1944 there were 943 and it is safe to say that 1945 has seen the field grow to well over a thousand outlets. The amount of money spent by some pretty smart advertising experts is conclusive evidence of the high returns that are possible through this new medium. In 1927 the gross billings were slightly in excess of 4 million dollars and in 1944 the staggering total of 392 million was toted to the cash boxes. I have always figured department stores as having an advertising problem akin to the theatre, in that they, also, considered everybody as a prospect. I was surprised to find that these astute merchandisers devote more than 10 per cent of their appropriation—which includes window displays, newspapers, direct mail, outdoor and inside decorations—to radio. It is also interesting to note that local use of broadcasting has been increasing by leaps and bounds and that the little corner store owners spent 29 per cent more for air time in 1944 than they did in '43. Any unit of public approach that can show such strides in 23 years is deserving of careful consideration in every advertising effort.

Checking a few states shows that there are approximately four home radios to every five families and if you use the standard measure of four members in a family as a yardstick you can quickly figure how many people in your community can be smacked right in the ear with a well placed radio message.

To me it stands to reason that any instrument so potent that clocks are set by it, meals cooked by it, politicians get in or out of office by it, wars are waged by it, and your smoking habits, as well as your habits in keeping "regular" are influenced by it, certainly has great possibilities as a theatre ticket salesman. Even so, that doesn't mean that it's good business to call up the radio station and say: "Charlie, I have $200 to spend. Pick out some spots for me." It would be smarter for you to cultivate Charlie a bit and prevail upon him to set your message at the times of day when you will be reaching the greatest body of listeners. Following are a few facts about the listening habits of the tuner-inners:

A recent survey shows that the peak hours for women listeners are from 10 A.M. to 2 P.M. and from 5 to 6 P.M. Nine out of every ten women turn on the radio at some time during the day up to 6 P.M., and 89 per cent of these women are listening, to either soap operas or news programs. (Ergo, if you want the ladies, get your radio pal Charlie to spot your announcement during the breaks between these programs.)

During the evening hours 96 per cent of radios are in use. 81 per cent keep their sets going for at least an hour, and 21 per cent listen for as long as four hours. You can count on a good available listening audience at any hour of the evening up to 10:30. If you can get mention during a chain break of the big network shows, you are a cinch to reach the great bulk of listeners in your community. If you have a sport picture to sell, change your time so that it will occur before or behind a sportscast. Use good judgment in spending your radio money. You're going to tell me—just as I did Conrad Brady—that the preferred time is already sold. Perhaps you are right, but it will be open sometime and you can keep trying for the best places. If there is no preferred time of spots available save your money, since you will be wasting most of it if you accept off-time (late at night or early in the morning.)

Radio has grown so tremendously and occupies such an important place in public thinking, the home-life of the average American and public buying that the smart showman will start right now to make friends with the local radio man just as he always has done with the newspapermen. None of us—if we amount to anything—ever contented ourselves with anything less than fast friendships with every man around a newspaper who could help in getting us more readers, better position for ads, better type setups, etc., etc. We all see that the newspaper men get annual or trip passes. So, go after the radio gang the same way and get those preferred spots away from the shoe merchant or the carpet cleaner who has been smarter than many of us up to now.

Set a Schedule

Special duties of janitors and other members of the cleaning staff should be placed on a definite schedule of work to be done on certain days of the week when regular duties have been completed. When the staff is not large enough to have everything done every day scheduling chandelier cleaning, polishing seats and furniture, washing lipstick and marks from rest room walls and other special duties will prevent having such work pile up to the extent that extra help may be required later to put the house back in first class condition.

Famous Players Club Honors 23 Employes

Following its inauguration last year on the 25th anniversary of the founding of the company, the 25-Year Club of Famous Players-Canadian Corporation is again honoring members this month in Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver for "the service they have given to the public."

In newspaper ads announcing birthday dinner parties to mark their membership in the 25-Year Club, Famous Players points out that "practically all branches of the company are represented in the group of employes who are being honored this month. . .managers, projectionists, cleaners, assistant managers, cashiers, check-room attendants and executives."

Pointing out the 23 employes as having "won many friends among our patrons who, we feel sure, will join us in congratulating them upon the service they have given to the public through Famous Players," the ads identify the "Honored 23" as:

Ivor F. W. Ackery, Orpheum Theatre, Vancouver; Victor Armand, western division office; Christina Aulseybrook, Capitol, Brantford; Frederick P. Broadbent, Capitol, Edmondton; Wallace Brown, Palace, Toronto; Thomas M. Callendar, head office, Toronto; Norman W. Code, Capitol, Winnipeg; William Dineen, Tivoli, Toronto; Harry R. Gordon, Capitol, Regina; Mrs. Florence Ginn, Capitol, Brantford; Stanley R. Grigg, Strand, Hamilton; Walter Hoffmann, Loew's Theatre, Montreal; Thomas W. Johnston, Capitol, Brantford; Richard A. Jones, Dominion, Victoria; Robert E. Knevels, Capitol, Windsor; Mrs. Jessie Latus, Capitol, Calgary; Samuel R. Mantle, Royal, Guelph; Ernest Moule, Capitol, Brantford; Robert G. Pollock, Capitol, Vancouver; Charles L. Querrie, Palace, Toronto; Howard O. Rennebohm, Capitol, Regina; Frederick G. Tickell, Capitol, Fort Williams; Alfred J. Wishart, Capitol, Winnipeg.

Avoid Possibility of Robbery of Theatre

Forewarned is forearmed! This adage is rapidly taking form in precise movements as exhibitors throughout New York City and vicinity aghast at the recent holdup of the Astor Theatre on Broadway and the Victory Theatre on 42nd Street, are taking strong measures to combat such future episodes. Holding less money on hand all through the day at the box-office and the establishing of burglar alarm or buzzer systems are among the first steps. The Brandt circuit has notified its managers not to have more than $50 in the box-office at any one time.

The past few weeks have brought to light various other bold robberies at film theatres in the downtown New York area and on the upper west side; also in Brooklyn and in the Bronx.

The New York Paramount, ever since a robbery years ago, has installed a practically burglar proof-system, with pneumatic tubes transporting the money, as the cashier takes it in, through special tubes to the treasurer's office, where it is placed in a safe.

With theatre robberies mounting on a national scale, managers should use every precaution to prevent them.

Is That Pass Necessary?

Season passes are a necessary evil in some communities. But now, with the approach of the new year, it is advisable for theatre manager to scrutinize very closely his list of names with the idea of revising it carefully. No chance of offending anyone important enough to do any harm should be taken, yet admissions should not be given away when it is not necessary. Consultation of the opposition before taking any steps in this matter might be advisable.

Hometown Movies Getting New Twist

Not exactly new in show business, hometown movies are, nonetheless, getting a new twist in Fox Intermountain theatres in the Montana District, over which Hall Baetz presides. Baetz and his two managers, Charlie Moorehead and Bob Anderson, decided to test Ogden, Utah and Pocatello, Idaho and give hometown movies the real Hollywood touch with screen tests, audience vote and then the final showings of "see yourself on the screen."

Local merchants defray the entire expense because they realize that the publicity accorded them through clever and discreet insertions in the shooting script, is worth more than the cost.

"Screen Test Nights," depending on the town's size, can take two or three days, and the stunt assumes stage show proportions as families and friends turn out to see their favorite talent. The curiosity of the average person to see his image on film is a terrific selling point.

Preparations for Emergency Insurance Urged Against the Loss of Property and Freedom

There are so many emergencies that might arise in any theatre of any type, no matter what precautions have been taken to prevent them, that it well behooves any theatre manager to be prepared to prevent loss of life, property and the inevitably resulting damage suits—and in possible cases—trials for criminal negligence.

When such an emergency comes—whether it be a fire, an explosion, a burst water pipe, a short circuit, or whatever it may be—the theatreman should be prepared to get his patrons out of the theatre without panic and no loss of life or injury. Unless he is ready to meet the authorities of law, and his maker, with the right answer, the theatreman had better get ready immediately.

As an ease to the conscience, a periodic checkup should be made. The following points are worth careful consideration:

Every one on the theatre staff, even the newest employe, should be familiar with the nature and workings of the alarm system of buzzers and flashers that warn of emergency. If there is no such system, then it should be installed as soon as possible.

The condition of batteries, connections, lamps, possible shorts or broken wires of the emergency lighting system should be carefully checked.

The theatreman should be prepared to get up on the stage quickly and calmly to tell his patrons that something is wrong—nothing serious of course—but that he wishes them to leave quietly, just in case something more serious might develop. A rehearsal of the speech that may be necessary some day, with the service staff participating, is insurance toward doing the kind of job that will prevent panic. Such a rehearsal makes possible the knowledge of how to direct patrons to the nearest exits. Each of the service personnel will know his station and his job. Included in the rehearsal should be the inspection of every exit door to see that they are in perfect working order.

Asbestos curtain trials should be held at frequent intervals. It might stick from disuse. The fire hose should be in good working order and racked properly. Staff members should be trained in the use of the extinguishers, and they should know the location of the nearest fire alarm box and how to use it. Someone should be assigned to call the fire department in case of emergency.

The manager whose conscience is clear concerning the foregoing matters will have nothing to worry about. But he who has neglected any single one of them should begin right now to rectify matters. No one knows at what hour of the day or night an emergency may come. It is best to be prepared.

MANAGEMENT OBSERVATIONS

The flagrant violation of law and of his responsibility for the safety of his patrons observed just this week at a prize deluxe theatre operated by a famous chain of theatres in Flatbush, Brooklyn, does the manager of the theatre no credit, to state it mildly, and if permitted to continue may be the cause of loss of life or serious injury to the patrons.

On a sunny Saturday afternoon seven baby carriages, in charge of young mothers placidly sunning their offspring, were observed standing against the theatre's fire emergency exit doors on one side of the theatre and four other carriages blocking exits on the other side. The danger of their positions were not apparent, of course, to the young mothers, but the box-office man of the theatre, not more than 25 feet from the side where the seven carriages stood, could see that the exit was completely blocked. Either he had not been instructed by the theatre manager to keep the exits clear or he was neglecting his own duty, which in any case, should have been investigated by the manager or his assistant.

The manager of this theatre has won several prizes for his ability as a show merchandiser and his theatre is clean with peak crowds well handled. But Heaven alone knows what will aid him if an emergency should occur that would require a fast emptying of his theatre on a crowded Saturday afternoon with the theatre full of children!

Projectionist's Daily Duty

A projectionist should be required to make a daily check of the entire booth apparatus including tubes, sprockets, soundheads, shafts, tension, electrical connections, shoes, guide rollers, etc., to prevent the possibility of shutdowns. Elimination of accumulated dirt and oil will prevent primary causes of distortion in sound reproduction.

Eiliminate Excess Scenery

For the theatre with an unused stage a search might reveal the presence of excess scenery that might be sold or otherwise stored to eliminate its presence as a fire hazard.

UNIVERSAL'S BIG LITTLE SHOW

Here's what the Majestic Theatre, Dallas, thinks of Universal's big little show, "Melody Stampede," the two-reeler that rated a special ad in Dallas.

"Melody Stampede" is the best short in ten years, according to Besa Short, who books them for the Interstate Circuit.

Screen this one and see for yourself.

You will agree with the Majestic Theatre that here's a movie that is better than a stage show.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Management: Radio—It's Big, Learn How to Use It be content with just knowing the solicitor. Meet and make friends with the station manager, the program arranger, the commentators, the engineers. Each and every one of them can help you at some time or other.

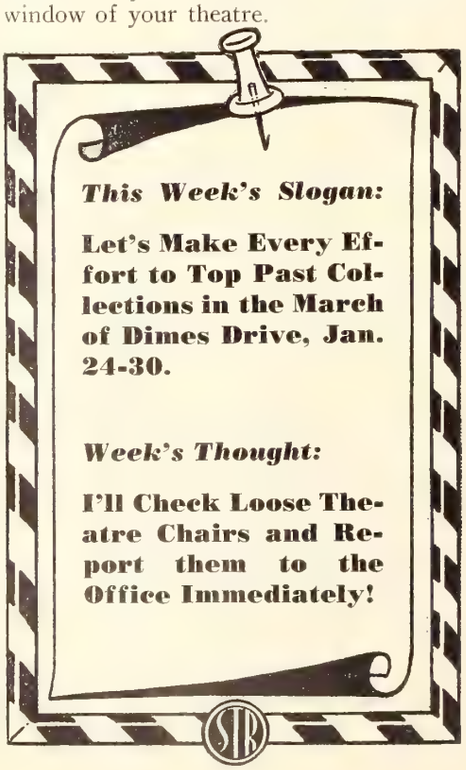
Radio deserves a high position in your advertising budget and in time should be used regularly and consistently. By setting up a plan of regular use of the local station and making friends of the chaps who set the programs, you'll soon have as many of the desired spots for announcing your theatre attractions as you want. Just keep picking up the preferred availabilities as other merchants drop off the station roster. Use the same care in preparing radio copy as you do in the newspaper ads. Dig out the most effective selling messages about your picture, keep your announcements as brief as possible, and hold frequent chats with the announcers to make sure that they give the correct vocal inflections and emphasis. Be sure that every word spoken is delivered with the kind of enthusiasm that is irresistible to the listener. Remember, you can only accomplish this if you are genuine pals with the fellows who actually do the work. The engineer or panel-board operator can ruin the best efforts of an announcer and an announcer can ruin the best efforts of an engineer. Get the whole gang on your team and you'll find priceless tieups and other favors coming your way so fast and often that you'll have trouble handling them all. And, this kind of cooperation is for free.

If you play your cards right there is no reason why you can't get as good, if not better, cooperation from the radio station than you ever did from the newspapers. After all, the newspapers have given theatres quite a little pushing around during the war, and we may find it difficult to again get the boys in line so that they give us an amusement page which carries only amusement ads and news. If they fail us our best alternative most certainly is the radio station, and you'll be playing very smart by having all lines laid—or even having both of them working for you.

Scanning back over this copy I notice that all the attention has been given to spot announcements. Don't, by any means, overlook the possibility of using five, fifteen or even thirty-minute programs if they are within the scope of your budget. The listeners are interested in entertainment and you can do a swell job of whetting their appetite to see your show by giving them an earful of the popular tunes your pictures contain. If possible, arrange a regular weekly period for the presentation. Choose an off-night at the theatre and use either one of the records from the distributor—most pictures have one or more platters available—or get a record of the most popular song from your local dealer. Also, several excellent transcribed shows generally are available at small cost. These transcriptions feature nationally known entertainers with space left for three or four picture plugs.



Why not examine that advertising budget today?

See where you can reduce in some of the activities now in practice and get a sizable allowance for radio.

Have a good long chat with the station manager and get his help in planning a regular schedule. Then meet his entire crew and invite them all and their families to your theatre as guests. Give them the attentions and courtesies they deserve. They are among the most valuable contacts you can establish for overall coverage of your patronage pattern.

One closing thought. When the time comes (and it is certain to come) when retrenchment is necessary in advertising expense, don't kick radio around. It is a powerful medium that has become part and parcel of the daily lives of most of your customers and should be treated as such. If you carefully analyze your situation and intelligently plan for the proper and most effective use of radio day to day—not just occasionally—you can depend on it to do a grand job of pulling the people right up to your box-office with their pocketbooks already open.

Don't sell radio short! It's the most potent, indeed, it seems the only sure-fire magnet at your disposal for pulling prospective customers off their comfortable sofas or easy chairs at home to the ticket window of your theatre.

Doctor Advises on Theatreman's Health

We don't want to get too personal or influence any imaginary ills, but how is your health? Perhaps it's good, but a visit to the doctor occasionally won't do any harm and it might do a lot of good. All this is by way of leading up to a discussion we got into not long ago with a highly rated medical friend who, during the course of the evening, remarked that many theatremen he knew (and he is physician to many theatremen), worried that a combination of late hours, midnight snacks, indoor work without exercise and the worries that occasionally beset the best theatre manager might result eventually in a breakdown.

The doctor was philosophical rather than strictly medical in telling about his advice, following examination of these men. He said that, despite the sedentary nature of their work, they really need not concern themselves with the condition of their health provided they exercise common sense in daily habits and follow a few simple rules in safeguarding the well-being of their minds and bodies.

The average manager's hours, the doctor went on to say, permit him to get seven or eight solid sleeping hours each day, even though he works late at night. And midnight snacks, within reason, are not harmful to the man who is used to them, provided he doesn't load up on highly indigestible foods. If he limits himself to foods such as toast and milk, a light sandwich, soup or fruit the perfectly natural hunger of a man who stays up long after his evening meal will, in most cases, be satisfied.

The doctor stressed the fact that everyone needs a certain amount of mild exercise to stimulate the body, aid digestion and other organic functions. He suggested a physical examination first and then participation in the activities of the local Y.M.C.A. or other places where gymnastic routines would permit him to go through a course of calisthenics, play handball or volleyball fairly often. Golf is another form of light exercise recommended. And if none of these are practical, there is always the setting up exercise which can be performed in one's own home, before an open window. Ten or fifteen minutes each day will suffice to make one feel a hundred per cent better both physically and mentally and able to work with greater zest, the doctor said.

For men who think they are susceptible to "colds" the doctor advised avoiding running in and out of air-conditioned theatres, thus subjecting the body to sudden changes of temperature which make it susceptible to possible infection.

The doctor concluded his discussion by stating that the theatreman need not fear that the exigencies of his job is ruining his health. Of course he should see his physician at intervals and undergo regular physical examinations. But if he uses common sense and a few simple rules of health he has, in general, an excellent chance of living to a ripe old age.

Clean Fans Carefully

When cleaning fans of any type in a theatre, particularly the large type ventilating fans and the air ducts connected with them, the cleaning crew should be carefully cautioned to see that no loose dirt remains in the fan housing or ducts that might result in damaged furniture, patrons' clothing, etc., when the fans are again turned on.

Inspect Surroundings

An inspection of the property surrounding a theatre will reveal what ever hazards exist to which the theatre building may be exposed in case of fire in adjacent buildings. A good place from which to make the inspection or survey is from the theatre roof.

"HELP ME FIGHT INFANTILE PARALYSIS!"

Here's how to do it:

1. COLLECTIONS AT EVERY PERFORMANCE

Be sure to show the Greer Garson trailer at every performance and have an adequate number of volunteers on hand so that collections may be taken up speedily.

2. BOOK STRONGEST POSSIBLE ATTRACTION

The bigger your attendance during the March of Dimes week, the greater your collections.

3. HOUSE LIGHTS FULL UP

Experience has proven that collections are larger in fully lighted auditoriums than in darkened ones.

4. USE OPEN COLLECTION CONTAINERS

It is difficult to put folding money in a tiny slot. Most theatres use Quart Ice-Cream containers, wicker baskets or decorated one-roll film cans.

5. OUTSIDE EFFORTS CAN BOOST YOUR COLLECTIONS

The showmanship campaign book is full of practical suggestions on how to get extra dimes donations outside your theatre.

6. NEVER TOO LATE TO HELP!

If you are one of the theatres which has not yet pledged, write today to Nicholas M. Schenck, National Chairman, Motion Pictures' March of Dimes, Suite 188, Hotel Astor, New York City

MOTION PICTURES' MARCH OF DIMES JANUARY 24 Thru 30

Theatres Lining Up For 1946 Dimes Drive

URGE BIG SHOW IN DIMES DRIVE

Film Industry Relying On Trailer and Other Success Ideas of Past to Score Again in 1946

For the first time since its inception in 1938, the annual March of Dimes appeal for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis will be conducted this year without the presence of the man who founded the organization "to lead, direct and unify the fight against infantile paralysis." But the campaign will be conducted under the sponsorship of President Harry S. Truman—and the drive again will be spearheaded by the motion picture industry.

March of Dimes Week in the nation's theatres begins January 24th and continues through the 30th. Experience gained in numerous drives—not only for the fight against disease but from all the many war-time campaigns—will be utilized in this new round in the continuing battle against polio.

National Chairman Nicholas M. Schenck carries out an assignment given him by President Truman to urge all theatremen again to aid the March of Dimes Drive.

Distributor Chairman Tom Connors has lined up cooperation of all company exchanges to assist in collections for the 1946 appeal.

Publicity Director Ernest Emerling has prepared press book and accessories for use in the organization and execution of campaigns the organization and execution of campaigns.

That showmen are veterans at special appeals is evident in the whole approach to the Dimes campaign, as organized by the executive staff headed by National Chairman Nicholas M. Schenck. Particularly is it evident in the pressbook, which contains nothing except successful activities—stunts that are not typewriter dreams, but which actually have been worked either in 1945 or earlier.

From the mass of experience also comes a check-list for the drive, with the number one point the necessity for lights-up, full-coverage, every-show collections in every auditorium. There's no substitute for this effort, with plenty of pretty collectors to extract the maximum contribution in the minimum length of time.

Stunts Boost Total

The book points out, however, that enthusiastic showmen often can double their dimes collections by lively lobby stunts and by making added efforts away from the theatre itself—on the sidewalk, in stores, in the town square.

The trailer for the 1946 drive again stars Greer Garson. It's her third such contribution. Last year's trailer, called a $5,000,000 subject by the committee, turned out to be a $6,000,000 short, for that's the amount collected in the theatres of the nation. Prints of the trailer (enough for all of the 17,000 theatres in the country) make the most effective appeal in the campaign.

Trailers also are the most expensive, but even with the cost of raw stock, etc., overall expenses of the drive amount to only 1.98 per cent—an amazing figure. Most fund-raising appeals cost from 10 to 25 per cent. Only whole-hearted cooperation and contribution of materials and services within the industry makes it possible to operate such a vast appeal on so small a budget.

Local Appeal Angle

Half of all contributions made remain in the county where they were collected; the other half goes to the work of the National Foundation. The local half provides direct aid to infantile paralysis sufferers—medical and nursing care, hospitalization, physical therapy treatments, orthopedic surgery, if necessary; orthopedic equipment and appliances, and all the other services necessary for the complete care of poliomyelitis patients.

The other half is used by the National Foundation for emergency aid in epidemic areas, for training professional personnel in care and treatment methods, for education and the vital program of scientific research which is the only hope of finally wiping out this dread disease.

The March of Dimes has been called "the greatest voluntary humanitarian movement in history." It had enlisted the personal interest and contributions of a majority of America's adult population. And the participation of the motion picture industry has made this widespread appeal successful.

Familiar Face on Poster

Again this year, as in the past two years, the little girl whose face keys the appeal of posters, displays, lobbies, etc., is the work of Lucile Patterson Marsh, well-known New York artist. Mrs. Marsh has made the covers for many national magazines, has illustrated dozens of children's stories, and drawn hundreds of her "children" for national advertisements.

Her March of Dimes girl is her own contribution to the drive. This year's little girl is the same as the one who appeared last year—but she's a full year older, and she's well!

The drawing also includes a small reproduction of last year's poster, but it's just a picture on the wall of a healthy little girl's room. The child is saying, 'Thanks, Mister, for what you did!" And she speaks for the thousands of children who owe their health—and their very lives—to the contributions made to the March of Dimes.

Many American theatremen know personally little girls and boys who, in real life, have been helped just as the child drawn by Mrs. Marsh. Many have heard their thanks.

And that's another reason why showmen are not giving up this fight, but are staging this year's March of Dimes campaign with all of the enthusiasm—the hard work—and the showmanship of which they are capable!

1945 Record In Brief

Briefly, here is the statistical summary of the 1945 March of Dimes campaign in the nation's theatres, as reported by National Chairman Nicholas M. Schenck:

14,000 theatres participated.

75,000,000 individual contributions were received.

Collections broke all records: $5,978,939.34.

Cost of the campaign: 1.984 per cent.

Of this cost, the 14,000 appeal trailers were the largest item. Beyond them, the cost was only .812 per cent.

The only item missing from the report is the number of lives that were spared, the number of children who were returned to happy childhood through those dimes. But that is an item which needs no statistic. That is the story "between the lines" of this glowing financial report.

Showmanship Will Aid War On Polio

Trailer Assured Big Circulation as Drive Pledges Top 9,000

More than 9,000 theatres have thus far pledged to show the Greer Garson appeal trailer and make audience collections for the 1946 March of Dimes during the week of January 24-30, according to Harry Brandt of the national executive committee.

Lessees of a number of Broadway 'spectacular' signs have agreed to carry 'March of Dimes' slogans and displays starting January 14th. Outstanding among these are the "Wondersign" on the Palace Theatre building and Douglas Leigh's famous animated cartoon sign at 46th Street and Broadway.

Enthusiastic wires and letters are being received from state chairmen and exhibitors who have seen the new Garson trailer, "Keep Them Playing." Consensus is that it tops Miss Garson's three earlier appeal trailers.

I.A.T.S.E. Cooperation

Cooperating with the motion picture campaign for the 1946 March of Dimes, Richard Walsh, international president of the I.A.T.S.E. and a member of the "Dimes" executive committee, has pledged the full support of his organization. In previous years, member locals have waived overtime charges that were caused by the time devoted to the showing of the appeal trailer and the making of audience collections.

Henry Herzig Named Manager of Ansco Binghamton Camera Plant

Henry A. Herzig has been appointed manager of Ansco's Camera Plant in Binghamton, New York, it was announced this week by E. Allan Williford, vice-president of General Aniline & Film Corporation in charge of the Ansco Division.

Herzig's duties will consist of directing production of the division's postwar line of cameras, of which the first 1946 series has already been announced. During the war, he served as manufacturing manager of Sperry Gyroscope Company's Marine Division.

Republic's Altschuler on Tour of South America

Richard W. Altschuler, Republic's foreign sales manager, is en route to Havana on the first leg of a 10-week sales trip through Central and South America. His stopovers will include San Juan, Puerto Rico; Port of Spain, Trinidad; Rio de Janiero, Brazil; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Santiago, Chile; Lima, Peru; Bogota, Colombia; Colon, Panama and Mexico City, Mexico.

During Altschuler's absence, James Vincent O'Gara, assistant foreign manager, will be in charge at the home office.

D. C. 1945 Champ

In the 1945 March of Dimes, highest per seat collection was registered by the District of Columbia, with $2,462 for each of the 51,590 seats in the area.

Next highest was Delaware, with 88.3 for its 25,865 seats, while Washington (83.2) and California (81.9) were close behind.

THE MARCH OF DIMES

When theatremen have been successfully executing campaigns for so worthy a project and converting their campaigns into substantial collections for the drive, then it seems a bit silly to tell those theatremen how to put over a good campaign.

As a matter of fact, they should be telling us! And, thank goodness, many of them do. Which enables us to report on their activities.

Sufficient to say that you all know this is a vitally important drive and it is our honest belief that each and every one of you will do your utmost to equal or exceed previous collections in your theatre.

Our army of theatremen has not been disbanded nor discharged. They are still on the firing line and doing their job for humanity.

Add to your service ribbons one more star for helping to win the battle of infantile paralysis.

—"CHICK" LEWIS.

Dimes Amassed by Theatre Collections Help Pay Nation's Bill for 'Costliest Disease'

The chief reason for appeals to theatremen for their utmost cooperation in the March of Dimes Campaign of 1946 is the knowledge by the heads of all committees that there is every reason to expect far heavier demands for relief to victims of the dread infantile paralysis in the year ahead than in past years. This is based on reports from 24 states of the Union showing an increase in 1945 of polio cases over those reported in 1944.

Two Big Questions

In making its fight on polio, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is constantly faced with these two questions:

1. Can polio be controlled?
2. Can polio be cured?

Aim to Disarm Enemy Disease

While the resources of the Foundation are constantly fighting the enemy when it strikes—through the skills of doctors, nurses, physical therapists and socal workers as well as with the best equipment available—the organization also seeks the way to disarm the enemy so that there may be no future attacks. In doing this work the mountain of dimes which has amassed in motion picture theatres, through the unselfish work of showmen throughout the country, makes possible an expansion of both of these programs.

More Than $6,500,000 Spent

The nation's bill for treatment of infantile paralysis in 1945 will exceed $6,500,000, exclusive of expenditures of individuals, according to a statement by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation.

The Foundation, according to this statement, and its local chapters throughout the nation already have disbursed $6,500,000 in March of Dimes funds, and comparisons of medical costs show that the treatment of poliomyelitis is one of the most expensive in medicine. Hospitalization of a polio patient costs an average of $2,500 a year.

Accounting records of the National Foundation show that treatment of a polio patient requiring an artificial respirator or "iron lung" costs $40 to $52 a day, depending on hospital location and other factors.

Iron Lung Treatment Costly

Iron-lung patients require special nursing attention 24 hours a day. In a metropolitan area, the daily costs would run approximately $15 each for two day nurses, $12 for a night nurse and $10 hospital charge.

Orthopedic surgery, required by many polio patients, is very expensive because the average operation is prolonged and "follow-up" treatment is usually extensive.

Facts Prove Need of Aid

One operation, known as a spinal fissure and employed to counter--act spinal curvature resulting from polio, requires eight weeks of hospitalization before the operation and eight weeks more after it—and costs a total of about $1,620.

"Costs such as these, greatly multiplied when polio epidemics strike," Mr. O'Connor said, "explain why the National Foundation and its chapters have found it necessary to expend millions of dollars this year on care and treatment of patients alone."

Prophecy Out!

That last year's March of Dimes campaign book made an error amounting to $1,000,000 is frankly admitted in this year's book, which notes that last year's Dimes appeal trailer—"The Miracle of Hickory"—was described as a $5,000,000 trailer.

It turned out to be a $6,000,000 trailer instead!

Greer Garson is making the appeal again this year, and after noting that 55,000,000 men, women and children responded to Miss Garson's appeal in 1944, and an estimated 75,000,000 in 1945, the press book editor merely says about 1946:

"You show the trailer . . . pass the basket . . . and Miss Garson will do the rest!"

Cast: George Raft, Ava Gardner, Victor McLaglen, Tom Conway, Jorja Curtwright, Jane Nigh, Florence Bates, Charles Drake, Charles Judels, Carmel Myers, Jimmy Conlin. Credits: Screenplay by Philip Yordan. From the novel by Maritta M. Wolff. Directed by Leonide Moguy. Photography, Russell Metty. Associate Producer, Philip Yordan. Produced by Seymour Nebenzal.

Plot: This is the story of a young girl who is in love with a wastrel. She goes away from him again and again, but is always drawn back by her love for him. When she suspects that he is working hand-in-hand with a bartender friend to dispose of his rival for her hand, she decides to leave him permanently. The rival frames him and then accuses him of robbery, so he runs away; but he comes back to straighten everything out for himself and the girl he loves.

Comment: Adapted from a best-seller of several seasons ago "Whistle Stop" is for the entertainment of the many readers who have an advance knowledge of what to expect in the screen version and for those who enjoy a drama with unrequited love as its main theme. The story centers around the doings of a shiftless young man living in a small American town and, except for his parents and other incidental characters, deals mainly with people who are different than the average small-towner, as most of us know them. Because of the tightness of space in which the action takes place, the film has little movement, (except for one automobile chase) but many may find this lack compensated for by the splendid characterizations turned in by Victor McLaglen, as a wastrel bartender and Raft's crony; Florence Bates as Raft's mother and a new discovery, Jorja Curtwright, as a girl suffering from unrequited love. The other players, starting with George Raft, Ava Gardner, Tom Conway down to Jimmy Conlin as a barker, satisfactorily fill their roles. For the houses that have a Raft following, this can be used as a topper; in others it will make better-than-average supporting fare. Direction by Leonide Moguy is good in that he gets the most out of his players with his understanding handling of the characterizations. Production credit goes to Seymour Nebenzal.

My Reputation

Warner Bros. Drama 94 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Deeply moving, emotional aspects will appeal particularly to women, but the sincerity and great skill of Miss Stanwyck's performance will be recognized and appreciated by all types of audiences. Likely to be selected for all lists of great pictures.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should turn out to be one of the top box-office films of this or any season. The star draw with certain word of mouth advertising will be good enough to make the ticket machines ring a merry tune.

Cast: Barbara Stanwyck, George Brent, Warner Anderson, Lucile Watson, John Ridgely, Eve Arden, Robert Shayne, Esther Dale, Jerome Cowan, Scotty Beckett, Bobby Cooper, Leona Maricle, Mary Servoss, Cecil Cunningham, Mancy Evans, Ann Todd, Janis Wilson, Darwood Kaye. Credits: Directed by Curtis Bernhardt. Screenplay by Catherine Turney from the novel "Instruct My Sorrows" by Clare Jaynes. Music by Max Steiner. Produced by Henry Blanke. Photography, James Wong Howe.

Plot: Recently widowed Barbara Stanwyck resists the kindly but determined efforts of her widowed mother, Lucile Watson, to make her follow the conventional life of a widow. Barbara determined to live her own life for the sake of her two boys, Scotty Beckett and Bobby Cooper, goes away for a rest and meets George Brent, an army major on leave. Brent presses his attentions on the bewildered but vulnerable Barbara, who then becomes the aggressor. Brent, recognizing the change to be the result of an emotional upset, pursues her along more conventional lines. Vicious gossip brings on a misunderstanding with the two boys who accuse their mother of misconduct and leave home. Following a reconciliation Barabara goes to meet Brent just as he is to leave for embarkation. He promises to return when she assures him that she will be waiting.

Comment: From beginning to end, there is not one single dull moment in this superb film, which probably will be selected for all lists of really great pictures. The direction of Curtis Bernhardt is so beautifully handled that the excellent cast seem to have been lifted above their heretofore demonstrated abilities as players so that all, without exception, seem to be giving the best performances of their careers. Miss Stanwyck, as the bewildered, frightened and grief-stricken young widow has, without any doubt, achieved the heights as a great dramatic actress. And George Brent, as an amiable lone wolf army officer about to go overseas, whose technique changes from straight aggression to one of understanding and tenderness, also is superb. Lucile Watson, Eve Arden and the two youngsters, Scotty Beckett and newcomer Bobby Cooper are also outstanding in supporting roles. "My Reputation" is one of the very few motion pictures that can be placed in the "great" category; if it isn't that good, no other one ever was. It should make a barrel of money for exhibitors and for Warner Bros.

Texas Panhandle

Columbia Western 58 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Routine western with the excitement and action the fans demand.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: On a par with other Charles Starrett offerings.

Cast: Charles Starrett, Tex Harding, Walter Taylor, Nanette Parks, Forrest Taylor, George Chesebro, Ted Mapes, Ed M. Howard, Jody Gilbert, William Gould, Jack Kirk, Budd Buster, Hugh Hooker, Carolina Cotton and Spade Cooley. Credits: Produced by Colbert Clark. Directed by Ray Nazarro. Original screenplay by Ed Earl Repp. Photography, Paul Borofsky.

Plot: A crooked gang which has gained control of the will which left most of the land in the territory to Nanette Parks is doing its utmost to scare the homesteaders away in order to grab all the land. Starrett, as the Durango Kid and a Federal officer, has been suspended by the secret service because of his strange actions, so he joins the crooked gang to straighten out the mess. In this he succeeds, and then becomes reinstated to his old job.

Comment: With little to distinguish it from any of its predecessors, except that Spade Cooley, the King of Western Swing, replaces the music of Jimmy Wakely or Bob Wills, this latest Charles Starrett "Durango Kid" picture stacks up on a par with the routine western offering for the market. The gun-totin,' rootin,' shootin' action and excitement are there to meet the demands of the trade, who will find the addition of some comedy by Jody Gilbert, an Amazon of a woman. Dub Taylor handles his usual brand of funning and Tex Harding renders one song. Nannette Parks has the feminine lead and George Chesebro and Forrest Taylor are the heavies. Direction is by Ray Nazarro and the production was handled by Colbert Clark.

Because of Him

Universal Comedy With Music 87 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Slow-moving comedy with occasionally interspersed delightful musical moments. Fairly entertaining for the whole family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do as well as past Deanna Durbin films. The names of Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone should help.

Cast: Deanna Durbin, Franchot Tone, Charles Laughton, Helen Broderick, Stanley Ridges, Donald Meek, Charles Halton, Regina Wallace, Douglas Wood, Lynn Whitney. Credits: Screenplay by Edmund Beloin from an original story by Edmund Beloin and Sig Herzig. Directed by Richard Wallace. Associate producer, Howard Christie. Produced by Felix Jackson. Photography, Hal Mohr.

Plot: Deanna Durbin, a stage-struck waitress, obtains a fradulent introduction to Producer Stanley Ridges, apparently with the indorsement of famous actor Charles Laughton. Away on a vacation Laughton knows nothing of the conspiracy but playwright Franchot Tone refuses to have Miss Durbin in his new play even if she is the "hobby" of Laughton. In spite of mixups Laughton befriends Miss Durbin, coaches her as his new leading lady. The play opens, Miss Durbin is a success and Tone and Deanna finally agree, in more ways than one.

Comment: In spite of good production, Miss Durbin's delightful singing, and good acting on the part of the star, Franchot Tone and, of course, Charles Laughton, this picture is slow-moving and apparently written with little inspiration with the result that it provides but few moments of real entertainment. Direction by Richard Wallace is also apparently uninspired, but this too probably can be attributed to the faulty script with which he and the players have been provided. The comedy throughout the action seems forced, lacks the feeling of spontaneity and imparts a mood of restlessness to audiences. Miss Durbin sings Lover, Danny Boy and Tosti's Goodbye beautifully, as highlights of the film. Where her last two films have been successful at the box-office, there is no reason to believe that this one will not achieve equal success. The names of Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone should add marquee appeal in some situations.

Tars and Spars

Columbia Comedy With Music 88 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Sprightly, enjoyable entertainment for all members of the family.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do fairly well on its own and its chances will be increased due to the top-drawer national exploitation campaign now being essayed.

Cast: Janet Blair, Alfred Drake, Marc Platt, Jeff Donnell, Sid Caesar, Ray Walker, James Flavin. Credits: Screenplay by John Jacoby, Sarett Tobias and Decla Dunning from a story by Barry Trivers. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Produced by Milton H. Bren, Lt. Comdr. USCGR, with the cooperation of the United States Coast Guard.

Plot: Sailor Alfred Drake wants to go to sea, but his wishes are frustrated by his superiors who use him as a "guinea pig" for life-saving devices. Spar Janet Blair falls for him and after a series of quarrels and making up Drake finally goes to sea, becomes the real hero Miss Blair had thought him, and all ends well.

Comment: This is a sprightly comedy with music, built around a familiar, but nevertheless entertaining story. Miss Blair looks as beautiful as ever, has improved in acting ability and delivers a pleasing performance throughout. Alfred Drake, singing star of the stage show "Oklahoma," also does well here, delivering several songs nicely and with an ingratiating personality but with a slight tendency to "mug." Jeff Donnell does well in a light comedy role and Sid Caesar is absolutely terriffc as a comedian of the Danny Kaye school of fun. This player is new to the screen and is a definite find. The musical numbers are capably staged. Taken as a whole "Tars and Spars" is nice, light escapist entertainment that should please everyone. Its box-office chances improve every day as the national exploitation stunts now being essayed by Columbia begin to break front pages of the country's newspapers.

Ziegfeld Follies

(Color)

MGM Musical 110 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Although presented in revue format, this is superb entertainment for all types of audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should do much better than good. The stars, the color, the exploitation are certain to ring a merry tune on the ticket machines.

Cast: Fred Astaire, Lucille Ball, Lucille Bremer, Fanny Brice, Judy Garland, Kathryn Grayson, Lena Horne, Gene Kelly, James Melton, Victor Moore, Red Skelton, Esther Williams, William Powell, Edward Arnold, Marion Bell, Bunin's Puppets, Cyd Charisse, Hume Cronyn, William Frawley, Robert Lewis, Virginia O'Brien, Keenan Wynn. Credits: Produced by Arthur Freed. Directed by Vincente Minnelli. Dance direction, Robert Alton. Songs by Harry Warren and Arthur Freed; George and Ira Gershwin; Ralph Blane and Hugh Martin; Kay Thompson and Roger Edens. Musical direction, Lennie Hayton. Vocal arrangements, Kay Thompson. Photography, George Folsey and Charles Rosher. Technicolor color director, Natalie Kalmus. Associate, Henri Jaffe.

Plot: The late Florenz Ziegfeld (William Powell) looks down from his Heavenly abode and speculates about what he could do to create another Ziegfeld Follies with the wealth of talent available today and MGM's musical, dancing and comedy stars aid him in his dream.

Comment: There is a rumor about that MGM has invested nearly $4 million in this fantastically lavish production. And upon viewing scene after scene as it unfolds upon the screen one becomes more and more convinced that the rumor is not amiss. It is easy to see that every possible thing has been done to make "Ziegfeld Follies" the most fantastically opulent production ever to reach the screen. It is so beautiful that mere words cannot describe the breath-taking scenes. For entertainment in the purest sense, Arthur Freed and Vincente Minnelli have extended themselves. The stars, too, seem to have outdone all previous efforts to entertain. There is no particularly outstanding music, perhaps, but this seeming shortcoming may easily be overlooked considering the wealth of comedy and dancing of all kinds with which the film has been supplied by the talented brigade of stars, each of whom is superb in his field. The fact that the film comprises a series of disconnected episodes may confuse some and perhaps disappoint others, but even those others should be more than pleased with the variety and excellence of the episodes themselves. MGM and the country's exhibitors should do much better than good with this one, but the temptation to let it ride on the strength of its stars should be eschewed. Exploitation is necessary. With a good campaign, it can't miss.

Abilene Town

United Artists Western 89 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Has more than enough of every factor to please the Western fans. And the story and acting are adult enough to also satisfy those whose tastes do not ordinarily run to outdoor film fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Randolph Scott for the marquees and the excellent national publicity and exploitation campaign for the film now in the process of execution would appear to slant this for good business.

Cast: Randolph Scott, Ann Dvorak, Edgar Buchanan, Rhonda Fleming, Lloyd Bridges, Helen Boice, Howard Freeman, Richard Hale, Jack Lambert, Hank Patterson, Dick Curtis, Earl Schenck, Eddie Waller. Credits: Produced by Jules Levy. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Associate producer, Herbert J. Biberman. Screenplay by Harold Shumate from the novel, "Trail Town," by Ernest Haycox. Photography, Archie J. Stout.

Plot: The influx of homesteaders to the vicinity of Abilene, where cattle have been driven for years by Texas cattle ranchers, causes fights and murders until it becomes apparent to the cattlemen that the days of the open range have gone forever.

Comment: Randolph Scott as the marshal of Abilene and Ann Dvorak as the dance hall entertainer have their own private battle making up their minds about each other while the main conflict between homesteaders and cattlemen provide the action so dearly loved by Western fans. And action there is a-plenty. Scott is taciturn, occasionally humorous and always the tough, gun-fighting marshal who can see far enough ahead to realize that the days of the open ranges and the wide-open West are on the way out. Miss Dvorak seems miscast, although she struggles heroically to give her portrayal life, and delivers three song numbers pleasantly enough, one of which, Snap Your Fingers, seems destined to be one of the hit tunes of the day. The others, I Love It Out Here in the West and Every Time I Give You My Heart, also have the elements that lead to popularity. Minor roles by Edgar Buchanan as the timid county sheriff and Rhonda Fleming as a merchant's daughter are nicely done. The production values and direction are good. The film is very much better than the average Western in story, acting, direction and production and should do good business, assisted by the excellent national publicity and exploitation campaign now in process.

Wicked Lady

(Previewed in London)

Universal Costume Drama 100 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Robust, lavishly produced period drama of a lady of good breeding who sought adventure.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Pleasing escapist fare for romance-in-costume addicts.

Cast: Margaret Lockwood, James Mason, Patricia Roc, Griffith Jones, Michael Rennie and others. Directed by Leslie Arliss. Produced by Maurice Ostrer. A Gainsborough picture.

Plot: Margaret, the beautiful, but unscrupulous lady of the manor, vamps Jones away from her demure cousin, Patricia, and marries him. Soon tiring of him, she takes to gambling for excitement and loses her jewels to a guest. Fascinated by the stories of a highwayman in the district and a secret passage which leads from her room, she plans to disguise herself and rob the guests of her jewels on their way back to London. From this start she becomes more ambitious and the mistress of Mason, a highwayman. Finding that he is being unfaithful to her, she plots his arrest and goes to Tyburn to see him hang. He escapes and follows her to the country where she shoots him. While disguised as the highwayman she is shot by Rennie, Patricia's new fiance whom she is trying to woo.

Comment: Set in the picturesque seventeenth century, this is pleasing escapist fare for audiences who enjoy romantic costume pictures even if the story is somewhat exaggerated. Margaret Lockwood's heroine is completely unscrupulous and pulls no punches; indeed, here is a rival for "Amber." James Mason gives a credible characterization of the gentleman who becomes a highwayman while Patricia Roc is charming as the demure cousin. Leslie Arliss has directed competently and the photography of the countryside, old manor houses and lovely dresses is delightful. Much of the humor is in keeping with the period.

Alexander Reports 35% Screen Adv. Business

Home office executives and about fifty field representatives of Alexander Film Co., discussed the company's postwar expansion program at a three-day convention held last week in Colorado Springs, Colorado. It was reported that the company's screen advertising business showed an increase of about 35 per cent in 1945 over the previous record year's volume in 1944.

Those attending the meeting included: C. C. Alexander, Claude Alexander, A. H. Baebler, Ben Bennett, E. L. Blasingame, Ralph Bonar, Al S. Clements, Lamar C. Cochran, J. A. Cody, E. D. Collins, H. D. Connolly, Harry Cotton, Colin Dexter, Larry Dillon, Harry Green, E. L. Harris, George Hickox, James Hickox, Kenneth M. Holland, C. O. Jeffrey, W. G. Kirkscey, D. B. Kizziah, J. V. Lenon, G. H. Likins, J. A. McInaney, W. P. McIntosh, Jack Otten, Ralph Pryce, E. R. Rushing, Art F. Smith, Col. Lorin Solon, Ralph Strudler, James Thompson, F. A. Vayette, David Willis, Ben Winston, Frank Wolf, Jr., Richard Wupperman.

Herald Space Is Sold By Schine Theatremen

The late lamented profession of selling co-operative ads on heralds, once of paramount importance on practically all showmen's exploitation campaigns, has recently been revived by keen-eyed Schine Circuit theatre operators in an effort to lure extra theatre patronage and cover costs of heralds and printing. Reports emanating from theatres in the circuit prove that this once effective advertising medium is far from being totally dead.

For the showing of 20th-Fox's "House on 92nd Street," Manager Tony Anderson, Pontiac Theatre, Saranac Lake, N. Y., sold the back of his heralds to two merchants for $10 which practically paid for itself.

Fred Lentz, manager of the Ravenna, Ravenna, O., sold the reverse side of his tabloid to a dry cleaning establishment to plug Monogram's "China's Little Devils."

The J. J. Newberry department store purchased a co-op herald for their record branch in a tieup with Manager Melvin Gaitskill of the Paris Theatre, Paris, Ky., on WB's "Rhapsody in Blue."

Manager Bud Sommers, Madison Theatre, Richmond, Ky., also sold a record store on a herald tieup for his showing of 20th-Fox's "Dolly Sisters."

Hitting the target twice, Leon Scott, manager of the Margie Grand Theatre, Harlan, Ky., sold the back of RKO's "Wonder Man" heralds to the Ettens Department store for a Victory bond ad, at the same time pushing his bond drive as well; and for the screening of MGM's "Weekend at the Waldorf" the store purchased heralds for the same type of advertising.

20th-Fox's "House on 92nd Street" was sold effectively on the reverse of a herald by Frank Walker, assistant to Charlie Howard at the Avalon Theatre, Easton, Md. The co-op ad publicized the new household machinery to be available soon.

Selling a cooperative herald to a tire-recapping firm, Manager Arnold Feldman, Manring Theatre, Middlesboro, Ky., plugged MGM's "Her Highness and the Bell-boy" successfully.

20th-Fox's "Dolly Sisters" received a royal lay-out in the ad suggested by Manager George Cameron of the Norwalk Theatre, Norwalk, Ohio, in a tieup with a local furniture dealer.

The aforementioned campaigns consistently prove that there is still a lot of life in the herald. Besides being one of the most effective ways of reaching rural patrons, this economical selling feature will aid immensely in attracting patronage—a fact attested to by men who know because they have tried it.

'Abilene Day' Declared in Abilene For Premiere of 'Abilene Town'

Mayor Homer F. Strowig and the City Council of Abilene, Kansas, have passed a resolution declaring January 14 as "Abilene Day" in honor of the world premiere of the Jules Levey film at the Plaza Theatre in that city. Schools will be closed and civic functions will center around the premiere of the United Artists picture.

Among those attending the opening will be Levey and the three stars of the film, Randolph Scott, Ann Dvorak and Rhonda Fleming. Wolfe Kaufman and Bob Cooper, assistant to Levey, are now in Abilene handling arrangements for the premiere.

Personal Endorsement

Utilizing the fact that he had been associated with motion pictures for 15 years, S. L. Sorkin, manager of RKO Keith's, Washington, D. C., plugged his showing of "The Bells of St. Mary's" by using a personal recommendation. Newspaper ads quoted him as saying: "This is the first time in 15 years that I am publicly expressing endorsement for a motion picture. 'The Bells of St. Mary's' is so blended with a cast of important stars, a warm human story and perfect direction, that it deserves my unlimited praise; my wholehearted recommendation. I know you will treasure the joy you will get from seeing this picture."

'Saratoga' Book-Film Poster Available for Window Displays

A special book-film poster on "Saratoga Trunk" for display by book stores, dealers, libraries and the educational field in general has been put out by Warner Bros. as part of a nationwide tieup with Grosset & Dunlap, publishers.

Before being made into a film, the Edna Ferber novel was a national best-seller, and the publishers report a strong revival of demand for the book in the east since the picture opened its pre-release engagement at the Hollywood Theatre, New York.

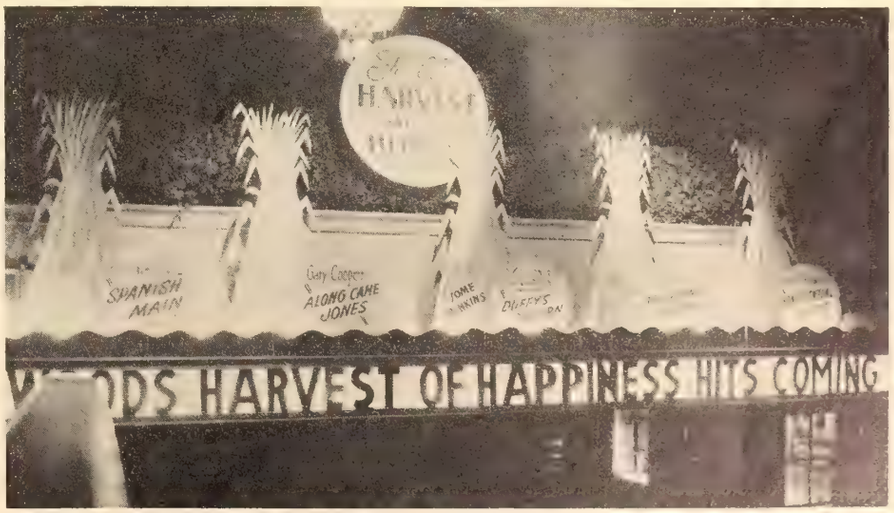
Fabian's Jitterbug Contest

A novel jitterbug contest was arranged last week by Lou Goldberg, general manager of Fabian's Staten Island Theatres and George Kemp, manager of the Paramount. The contest, held on the stage of the Paramount, provided a "battle of the boroughs," with Brooklyn's best three jitterbugs competing against Staten Island's top dancers. Prizes, promoted from local merchants were awarded the winners.

Short Action Trailer Instituted by MGM

Furthering a program to aid small town exhibitors, MGM has instituted the short action trailer designed particularly for multiple-change houses. The new type trailer, produced under the supervision of Howard Dietz, vice-president and director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, and Frank Whitbeck, at the studio, resulted from numerous suggestions by exhibitors for a brief, action-packed announcement giving the highlights of the picture in the shortest possible footage.

Howard Dietz



The short trailer is another arm in a growing list of innovations MGM is instituting to aid the small theatre operator. The first two trailers on "They Were Expendable" and "A Sailor Takes a Wife" supplement the regular trailers, as will also the new short trailers on subsequent pictures.

MGM recently adopted a policy of getting out special action press books to supplement the regular-sized press book. The idea has already met with wide success, according to letters received by the company's branches and home office.

Rosellen Callahan Added to United Artists Publicity Staff

Rosellen Callahan, former news editor and feature writer for NEA, has been appointed to the United Artists publicity staff by Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., advertising and publicity director.

Miss Callahan will handle national publicity under Tom Waller, publicity manager.

REAPS THE HARVEST. Marlowe M. Connor, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Madison, Wis., attractively and effectively advertises his theatre's coming attractions by grouping the outstanding ones into a "Fall Harvest of Hits" over the entrance doors of the theatre where concentrated lighting brings the simulated corn-stalks and titles before the eyes of his patrons. Title cards may be changed as the various pictures are played, adding to the life of the excellent display.

Wild West Invades Cities to Sell 'San Antonio'

Unusual Festivities Mark Engagements in Cleveland, Los Angeles and New York

Echoes of the wild and wooly west! Shades of hard riding cowboys prancing about on handsome sturdy animals! Yes, pardner, the atmosphere of the rootin' tootin' hinterlands was transferred, spurs, stock and saddle to blase, cosmopolitan New York for Gotham's premiere of Warners' "San Antonio," at the N. Y. Strand Theatre—and old man Knickerbocker's city-slickers went for it in a big way. There is no doubt but that the imaginative drumbeaters from the brothers Warner really outdid themselves, magnificently too, on a national-scale with other openings in Los Angeles and Cleveland, in giving the top-budget western, a rollicking, eye-popping promotion campaign all tied up with fancy ribbons . . . of horsehide.

Launching the initial six-guns in the New York campaign, the premiere, which was wisely timed with the 100th Anniversary of Texas' admission to the Union, was coupled with the initiation of a "Deep in the Heart of San Antonio in New York Association," with membership open to both Lone Star Staters and non-Texans, in an effort to incite fan talk about the film. Membership cards were issued to cowboys and wild west fans throughout the Greater New York area.

Miss San Antonio Selected

The Texas Club of New York injected the essence of glamor into the occasion by cooperating in activities which included the selection of a "Miss San Antonio" from a group of Gotham gals, formerly of that city. The winner, Kyle McDonnell, had her face and figure plastered in all New York tabloids, with stories and photographs nationally syndicated by UP and other news services.

The eye-opener, however, was a western parade, which included buckboards, cowboys, horses and cowgirls like the west has never seen (see cut.) Parading down from Central Park, with credit banners streaming from the wagons, on their way to the Strand on opening day, the entourage also paid a call to now ex-Mayor LaGuardia and Mayor Bill O'Dwyer, and presented them with real Texan ten-gallon hats. All of which made for plenty of publicity in plenty of papers.

Winding up the New York campaign, radio took the exploitation initiative. Dave Denny and Denver Darling, popular cowboy radio singers and Peggy Hehman, cowgirl beauty, who took part in the parade, highlighted a 15-minute broadcast publicizing the opening, parade, etc., over station WNEW. Promotional activities were given recognition on the "Gloom Dodgers" program on WHN, local Loew's outlet, and the ceremonies were also discussed on the coast-to-coast ABC network program, "Ladies Be Seated."

Proclaims Theatre Texas Suburb

Three thousand miles away on the west coast, Los Angeles received more than its share of Texas atmosphere with the premiere of the picture at the Hollywood Theatre, to which film luminaries flocked for the occasion of a radio broadcast from the stage. The festivities, said to be one of the most colorful viewed in a long while, were given an unusual distinguished setting by a proclamation from Mayor Gus B. Mauermann of San Antonio, who designated the Hollywood Theatre as a suburb of the Texas city for the event.

The huge audience, bedecked in native Texan dress, received enthusiastically a stage show which was broadcast over KFWB. Program featured the introduction of the Lone Star State's oldest couple, returned Texas servicemen stranded in Los Angeles, and interviews with the stars.

In Cleveland, the opening at the RKO Palace was given a mammoth multiformed campaign, with as well planned a schedule as any picture could possibly receive. Newspaper breaks keynoted the program with practically every Cleveland publication contributing a lion's share. Society, amusement and column editors handed the film huge gobs of space and stories were even planted in sports columns giving the pro and con on the English and Western styles of riding, in which the theme finally led to the way Errol Flynn rides a horse in the film.

An estimated seven radio programs handed the picture a numerous amount of credit a full week in advance of the showing.

Ballyhoo was performed with Barnum-like showmanship with the cooperation of the Metropolitan Horse Association. Features put across in grand style included: riders from local horse academies arriving for the premiere on horseback; having a woman ride horseback into the downtown stores to shop, giving as her excuse, "That's the way we shop in San Antonio!"; having horses with riders dressed in western outfits prance through the shopping districts on opening day, leading a van advertising the picture, and inviting at least 700 members of the Association to attend the opening in riding habits and western costumes to be judged in a costume contest with prizes as an inducement.

Eight leading store windows were employed in tieups, with record shops plugging the hit tune of the film. Five hundred signs were posted on local street car lines.

Co-op trailers were screened at three neighborhood theatres and the Palace ran trailers ten days in advance of opening.

GIT ALONG, LITTLE DOGIE'! That seems to be the sentiment advanced by this group of cowboys and cowgirls who look mighty out of place in this skyscraper setting as they parade down Broadway. The parade was just part of the huge promotional campaign designed by the Warner exploitation staff for the premiere of "San Antonio" at the New York Strand.

WHOA, BOSSY! It wouldn't be nice to kick a pretty milk-maid like the one doing the honors above. This unusual incident attracted huge crowds in front of the New York Strand Theatre where a vigorous campaign was in progress for the opening of Warners' "San Antonio."

Pony Is Given Away in 'San Antonio' Essay Contest

A feature of Warners' "San Antonio" campaign at the Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, was an essay contest for newsboys, with a Shetland pony as the first prize.

A special screening of the picture was given for the paper-toters, who were then asked to write a brief essay dealing with San Antonio during the historical period depicted in the picture.

Another promotion in connection with the film's opening was a 'Frontier Party' at a local night club.

Warners Aid Interstate Circuit In Exploiting 'San Antonio'

Warners are supplying all-out aid to the Interstate Circuit in Dallas concurrent with the showing of "San Antonio" in an effort to exploit the film to its fullest possibilities.

Costumes worn by stars Errol Flynn and Alexis Smith have been sent to the circuit's headquarters in Dallas where they will be distributed throughout the state for display in various promotional campaings. Another feature designed to aid the advance campaign is a transcription cut at the studio in which members of the cast convey special greetings to the Texans. Other publicity aids include: telegram from stars to theatre; telephone interviews broadcast from the stage; and trailers and art-kits containing an unusual number of layouts and exploitation pictures to supplement the regular press book offerings.

Foreign Press Plugs 'Bells'

Foreign language newspapers are being widely used by RKO Radio in publicizing "The Bells of St. Mary's." Greek, Spanish, Russian, Czechoslovakian, Ukrainian, Finnish, Lithuanian, Hungarian and Polish publications, all printed in New York, have carried stories and art.

Story Contest Sells 'Pinocchio' in Buffalo

Spot radio announcements, distribution of 5000 heralds and trailer screenings sparked the innovation of a "Tall Story Contest" staged successfully by Earl B. Hubbard, advertising director of the 20th Century Theatre, Buffalo, for the showing of RKO's "Pinocchio."

Local radio station WEBR flashed announcements three weeks in advance of screening notifying children under 15 that they were eligible to enter the contest which consisted of writing a "tall story" in not more than 150 words. Five thousand heralds, plugging the contest, picture and theatre, were distributed throughout local public schools.

Through a 45-minute direct hook-up with the radio station, winners of the contest were presented from the theatre's stage together with local entertainment. Also featured on this special broadcast was a "Quiz Contest," with cash prizes attracting contestants, while Santa Claus distributed 3000 combination whistles and badges to every youngster who attended.

In connection with the contest, the management also arranged to invite various orphan groups as guests of the theatre. Story and pictures of contest winners broke in all Sunday papers and proceedings were acclaimed as a "terrific success."

Cadillac-Borne Boxers Boost 'Great John L'

An attractive Cadillac sports sedan conveying two young men dressed as boxers, provided the basis for an excellent street stunt staged by Manager Edward May on United Artists' "The Great John L" when that picture played at Wometco's Rosetta Theatre, Miami, Fla.

Pulling up at various busy intersections throughout the town, the two men would emerge and, with the use of professional boxing gloves, proceed to engage in a lively pugilistic battle. (No signs as yet.)

In no time, an enthusiastic crowd had gathered and at that point, a third young man stepped out from the automobile, climbed to the roof and unrolled a cloth banner which read: "These Boys Are Only Playing—If You Want To See Real Action—See 'The Great John L', etc., etc."

O'Donnell Cited on Breneman's 'Breakfast in Hollywood' Program

Robert (Bob) O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit executive, was scheduled to be honored on Friday (January 8) by Tom Breneman on the latter's broadcast from Hollywood, for his outstanding record as a humanitarian. O'Donnell's outstanding services to his fellow men were to be cited by Breneman during the first 15 minutes of the broadcast.

Representatives of the trade press, exhibitors and executives of United Artists assembled at the Normandie Theatre in New York for the trade screening of Golden Productions' "Breakfast in Hollywood" were to listen to the program, with the screening set to follow immediately. Burkett Forms 'Sales Advisory' Company to Merchandise Films

Because of his expanding production activities, James S. Burkett, whose film series are now divided among three releasing companies (Charlie Chan—Monogram; Philo Vance—PRC; Tugboat Annie—Republic) has started formation of a "sales advisory" organization to assist in merchandising his pictures.

TARS AND SPARS SPECIAL! Columbia Pictures was quick to capitalize on the nationally publicized human interest story of cab driver Harry Arisohn, who took six servicemen from Los Angeles to New York just for mutually shared expenses so that they could be home for the Christmas holidays. By the expedient of re-naming the taxicab "Tars And Spars Special," and commissioning Arisohn to carry servicemen through a prescribed route back to California, Columbia's figures to get excellent publicity value for its forthcoming musical, "Tars And Spars." Deal was set originally just to carry U. S. Coast Guardsmen on the trip, but due to holiday season when discharges were frozen, other servicemen will be taken along. Radio broadcasts in New York obtained the three men shown here and other broadcasts in Chicago will add two more men to the cargo, with Columbia's field men whooping things up along the route.

Dream of Showmanship When Star Appears Comes True in Houston with 'Body' Visit

Although it is seldom that an "oomphy," glamorous Hollywood star appears at a local theatre in connection with the opening of her latest film, exhibitors can dream, can't they? They can dream of the reams of publicity that materialize with the coming of a movie queen; they can see the magnitude of contests, entered enthusiastically be eager thousands; they can imagine the radio time, given high, wide, handsomely and freely by air executives who also know a good thing when they see it; they can dream of sock ballyhoo, sensational bond drives and fashion shows, in which everyone helps because of the stars personal appearance.

Such a dream became a reality in Houston recently when, in connection with the showing of United Artists' "Getting Gerties Garter" at Loew's State, blonde, buxom Marie (The Body) McDonald made an appearance which immediately prompted the inauguration of a "Marie McDonald Contest" whereby Houston girls whose measurements most closely conformed to those of the shapely star, were awarded prizes ranging from a $500 Victory bond to nylon hose.

Contestants were able to measure themselves for size by comparing their physical talents with those of Miss McDonald, whose cutout was placed in the theatre's lobby. Houston beauty experts, acting as judges in choosing the winning contestants, also selected the star as "America's Most Beautiful Girl," and presented her with a scroll at the Plantation Night Club. Admission to the party was by Victory bond only.

Front-page newspaper stories widely exploited the contest, which aroused feverish interest among the female populace. The Houston Beauty Culturists contacted more than 8000 women by telephone to advise them of the contest and the bond drive held in conjunction with Marie's appearance at the Plantation Club, which was also the locale of a gigantic fashion show sponsored by a leading department store. The star, along with 12 models, sported the latest in women's wearing apparel.

The day before the fashion show, Marie autographed photographs at the department store to spur the sale of bonds. George Allen, chairman of the Harris Company's War Finance Committee, mailed 3000 letters to beauticians in Houston and surrounding areas reminding them of the drive with name credit to Miss McDonald's nomination as America's most beautiful girl.

Choice radio and newspaper publicity broke with the arrival of the star in the Texas city. Three dailies carried front-page stories on the "Body-Beautiful-Contest." Marie appeared on a well-known Hollywood program and again plugged herself and film by singing several "pop" tunes at the Plantation Club.

Ballyhoo appeared in the staging of a novel stunt arranged with the cooperation of the War Finance Committee, which resulted in a two-day blitz of publicity from the sky. A veteran Navy airman, took his four-motor bomber over Houston at an altitude of 3000 feet to exploit the bond and style shows. It was the same plane used to propagandize the Nips during the last days of the war. (Mull over slowly the news breaks on that one.) It was estimated that his broadcasts over the bomber's loudspeaker device reached more than 400,000 Houstanians.

It's over. You can go back to dreaming now

50-Window Idea

How just a small idea can obtain big results was demonstrated recently by J. G. Samartano, manager of Loew's State, Providence, when he obtained space in 50 tobacco shop windows in the city simply by supplying mounted photos of Walter Pidgeon contentedly smoking a pipe. Copy on the card was tied in directly with the showing of the film at the State and with the joys of pipe smoking during a "'Weekend at the Waldorf' or just anytime."

HARRISBURG

Although December 31 marked the close of the Eighth and final War Loan throughout the nation and the dissolution of the WAC of the motion picture industry, managers will continue to remain active for Uncle Sam. Although they will discontinue high-pressure stunts to sell bonds, they will continue selling E bonds as a convenience to patrons. What will happen to the Bond House, located in front of the old courthouse, remains an unanswered query, as exhibitors and WFC members alike were trying to reach a decision. Some are in favor of dismantling the small building and returning the lumber and materials to the contractors who constructed it gratis, while other officials think it should remain intact and when the courthouse, now up for sale is purchased, let the new owner of the site dispose of it as he will.

The Victory Ball held at the Zembo Mosque attracted more than 5000 dancers, with Benny Goodman and his orchestra playing. Spot dances were held with prize-winners getting autographed Goodman recordings, while a door prize was a combination radio and phonograph. Gerry Wollaston, State manager, promoted the ball.

New Year's attractions at downtown movie houses all remained for a second week. They are "Bells of St. Mary's," at the Senate; "San Antonio," at the State; "Stork Club," at the Colonial and "They Were Expendable," at Loew's Regent. The Rio continued its double bill program and brought "Hit the Hay" and "Trail of Kit Carson" last week.

Featuring the run of "They Were Expendable," was the personal appearance of the hero of the W. L. White book, Comdr. John D. Bulkeley, USN. Commander Bulkeley was the guest of Sam Gilman, Loew's manager, at a luncheon, at which these military men were present: Capt. Ralph James, USN; Capt. William Turney, USN; Lieut. L. M. Yunafka, USNR, representing Commodore C. W. Fox, commandant of the Mechanicsburg Naval Supply Depot; Col. Albert H. Stackpole, editor and publisher of the Harrisburg Telegraph and veteran of the China Theatre in this war and Col. J. Calvin Frank, recently returned from action in the Pacific. Greeted by Governor Edward Martin, Commander Bulkeley and his wife were presented with the key to the city by Mayor Howard E. Milliken. The visitor was interviewed by the press and in talks with columnists and in his one appearance from Loew's stage, praised the film.

Fifteen-minute interviews each over WHP and WKBO, city radio stations were included in the Naval officer's visit and in addition, he chatted with half a dozen servicemen, also Pacific veterans, in front of the theatre. The officer autographed copies of his book for members of the audience.

INDIANAPOLIS

An injunction enjoining Howard Davis of Anderson, Ind., owner of the Better Taste Popcorn Co., from shipping in interstate commerce popcorn treated with mineral oil or any other non-edible oil, was entered December 27 in Federal Court here by Judge Robert Baltzell. Davis does a $250,000 business annually, according to reports. The government had charged that popcorn distributed in interstate commerce by the company was adulterated by treatment with mineral oil and was misbranded. When Judge Baltzell heard testimony in the case early in November, a group of physicians and medical school professors argued the question of whether mineral oil is harmful to the human system when used with popcorn. The government contended that it could have harmful effect. B. Howard Caughran, United States district attorney, said that the popcorn firm has used 21 carloads of mineral oil in two years.

COLUMBUS

A two-alarm fire which raged for more than an hour before being brought under control, caused damage unofficially estimated at $7000 to the New Linden suburban theatre. W. C. Pullin Sr., owner of the 20 year old brick structure, said he believed the fire was caused by defective electrical wiring. Breaking out in the early afternoon when there were no patrons in the theatre since the house is closed during matinees, the blaze was discovered by Pullin when he smelled smoke while working in the office. The curtain was a mass of flames and fell as he looked inside the theatre. The fireproof projection room, housing new equipment, was undamaged. Fire Chief Edward Welch said that although water had soaked seats, the fire actually caused little damage to the interior. Pullin said the theatre will be repaired or rebuilt, his future course being determined by findings of architects. The building was partially covered by insurance.

"Battle for Music," a British film featuring the London Philharmonic Orchestra.

A drop of nearly 30 per cent from the wartime peak of employment in the manufacturing industries of Missouri had occurred by last September, the U. S. Department of Labor has reported. In July, 1945, the total employed was 430,500 and in September it had dropped to 306,000. Undoubtedly, there has been a further sharp decline since that time.

The recently elected 1946 officers of the Film Exchange Employes Union, Local F1, representing the front office workers in the various exchanges operated in St. Louis, were installed at a meeting held January 8 in the Steam Fitters Hall. The new officers are: President, Bill Thomas, 20th Century-Fox; Vice-President, Frances Hoffman, Loew's; Financial Secretary, E. Rapp, RKO Radio; Recording Secretary, Ann Kurz, 20th Century-Fox; Corresponding Secretary, Dorothy Ball, Loew's; Treasurer, Margaret Duggan, Monogram; Business Agent, Jimmie Gately, projectionist at the Compton. Members of the Board of Governors are Mary O'Brien, Universal; Frances Murphy, Warners; Catherine Foy, Republic and Fanny Krause, Loew's.

Word comes from Shelbyville, Ky., that the damage caused to the Shelby Theatre and adjoining buildings in the recent fire there, will aggregate $75,000. The theatre was just a year old.

DENVER

Fox Greater Theatres, operating 10 houses in Denxer and a National Theatre subsidiary, has paid $175,000 for four corner lots at 16th and Cleveland, and as soon as materials are available, will build a 2,000 seat $500,000 theatre which, according to Frank H. (Rick) Ricketson, company president, will be a show house for this part of the country. The theatre will embody every new architectural and equipment to contribute to the comfort and convenience of patrons. An elaborate tower will serve as an antenna for television; three-dimension projection will be employed; seats will contain heating and cooling elements and will also contain devices to enable patrons to reach the aisles without disturbing others already seated, and escalators will be provided for the first time in the Denver area to transport patrons to the mezzanine and balcony levels. Mel Glat, construction chief for the company intends going to California to inspect new theatres and study plans so that nothing new may be overlooked in the way of comfort and convenience for patrons.

James Hughes and Kenneth Powell, who operate in Yuma and Wray, Colo., have bought lots in Wray and as soon as materials are available, will build a $50,000 theatre.

Thomas Anglin, 43, secretary-treasurer of the Motion Picture Operators Union, died following a heart attack in his home in Denver. One of the best known operators in the section, he was at the Paramount screening room for years. Surviving are his widow Genevieve and a daughter, Mrs. Mary Frances Kennison. Funeral services and burial were in Denver.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Cockrill at St. Joseph's Hospital, Denver. He is managing director of the Denham.

Arlie Beery, former star football player and public utility representative, has joined W. H. Turpie, district representative of the Manley Lifetime Popcorn Machines, as special representative.

The split bill racket is being worked in Denver, but since all cashiers have been warned to turn all currency over, little loss has resulted, while at the Iisis, cashier Agnes Gualtney caught the trick, rang for manager Virgil Campbell, and the culprit was held for the police.

The Denver Advertising Co. has movtd to larger quarters.

EUROPEAN REPRESENTATIVE. Appointment of Jack William Votion (above) as RKO Radio European representative, with headquarters in London, was announced recently. Votion will act as liaison between RKO's Hollywood studio and its production activities in London and Paris.

Jess McBride, Paramount branch manager and Mrs. McBride, are back from a holiday visit with relatives in St. Louis.

Mayer Monsky, Universal district manager from Denver, spent several days here during the holidays.

Inez Miller has joined Universal as an inspectress.

All Paramount salesmen took vacations during the holidays.

Mona Hansen, Universal secretary who recently underwent an operation, is back on the job.

All downtown Omaha theatres held New Year's Eve midnight shows and reported good business.

First stop back in his old home town for Vernon Nelson, former RKO-Brandeis chief of service, was the theatre. He will soon be back at his old job.

TORONTO

With a crime wave at its height in the Dominion, O. J. Silverthorne, director of the Ontario Government's Theatres Inspection Branch, has issued a warning to theatre owners to prohibit the admission of unaccompanied juveniles, under 16 years of age, except before 6 p.m. on Saturdays and holidays. Infractions of the regulation would result in a fine of $20 to $200, he said, adding he had received a number of complaints about the presence of unattended children in theatres.

The Central Film Co-Operative Association has been formed, with headquarters at Toronto under Federal Government charter and with M. Ferris as president, for the distribution of 16-mm. films on a so called non-profit basis. Ferris charged that film rental prices of the exchange companies were excessive and said he counted on 3200 film users in Ontario. He gave no indication of the source of his film product.

Jack Arthur, district manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., has announced an addition, a third baby boy, named Robert Rupert.

Capt. C. G. Jeffery of the Essex Scottish Regiment, who was an usher at the Capitol, Chatham, has been awarded the Order of the Bronze Lion by the Netherlands Government because of outstanding work in the Holland campaign. Jeffery recently returned to the Famous Players Canadian Corp. at Toronto.

After leaving his Royal Theatre, Long Branch, with the night's receipts, Ben Freedman and his wife were held up by a gunman who had hidden in the back seat of their automobile. Compelled to drive to a remote section of Toronto's outskirts, Freedman was robbed of $170 and diamond jewelry and the robber drove off with the car, leaving the Freedmans beside the road. The abandoned car was found a short time later. The crime was the latest in a long series of robberies affecting theatres throughout the country, but it was the first time an exhibitor had been held up.

The call has been issued for the annual meeting of the Ontario Council, Independent Exhibitors of Canada, at the King Edward Hotel, January 15, with Ben Freedman of Long Beach presiding at the luncheon and for the business program. The association has a membership of 40 independent theatres in Ontario.

An influenza epidemic in comparatively mild form has been sweeping the Dominion, but no move has been made to close theatres. The reopening of various schools for the winter term was postponed and some hospitals have been closed to visitors as a special precaution.

Bruce McLeod, owner of independent theatres in Kitchener, Strathroy and Glencoe, has been elected a director of the Canada Health and Accident Assurance Corp. of Waterloo, Ont. McLeod is also busy with plans for the construction of a theatre at Elmira, Ont., which has been without a film centre since the introduction of sound.

President Oscar R. Hanson of Monogram Pictures of Canada has announced the resignation of Irving Sourkes as Montreal branch manager and his replacement by Sam Jacobs, transferred from St. John, N. B., where Lewis Michaelson has taken charge.

Haskell M. Masters, general manager of Warner Distributing Co., Toronto, announced the re-appointment of I. "Babe" Coval as branch manager at Montreal, after serving some months as manager at Trinidad, B. W. I. Grattan Kiely, acting manager, has returned to the sales department of the Montreal office.

The Regent Theatre, Oshawa, a Famous Players' unit managed by J. I. Foy, has blossomed forth with an entirely new projection and sound installation after some delays.

Manager Ralph G. Tiede attracted a mob of juveniles to the Community Theatre, Welland, for a cartoon show, when he offered souvenir pencils to the first 300 boys and girls. The gifts were permitted following the cancellation of the Federal wartime order which restricted giveaways.

Glenna, oldest daughter of Glenn Ireton, promotion manager of Canadian Warner Bros., Toronto, is already making her mark in the world of art, having won a scholarship at the Ontario College of Art. She is also pursuing her studies at the Art Museum. The two younger children are becoming known for their musical talent.

Leo M. Devaney, RKO-Radio general manager in Canada, was guest-speaker at the luncheon January 8 of the Famous Players Toronto Managers Association.

With Manager James I. Foy as the producer, the staff of the Regent Theatre, Oshawa, presented their own version of "The Follies" before an audience of relatives and guests following a staff turkey dinner. The show was authored by Mrs. Maude Brayford, assistant manager and 12 members of the staff essayed individual and chorus roles, with George Walsh officiating as master of ceremonies. Costumes were designed by Betty Krantz, cashier, while Mrs. Nan Walsh, ticket-taker, was the chief comedienne.

Larry Graburn, former district manager and for four years with the RCAF, has resigned from Famous Players Canadian Corp. after long service, to accept the appointment of advertising and publicity manager at the head office of Odeon Theatres of Canada. Graburn has moved from Regina, Sask., to Toronto to take over his duties. Tom Bowyers, who has been acting advertising manager, wil devote his whole attention to the organization of Odeon Movie Clubs for young Canadians throughout the circuit.

Officers for 1946 have been elected by the Famous Players Toronto Managers Association and it is noted that half of the new board comprises downtown managers who were admitted to membership only last April, the organization having previously been confined to suburban theatres. Those elected were: President, Maurice Doyle, Runnymede; Vice-President, Tom Daley, Imperial; Secretary, Fred Trebilcock, Shea's; Treasurer, Roy Downey, Beach; Directors, Walter Graydon, Parkdale and Len Bishop, Tivoli. The entire board is new, all former officers having retired.

Floyd Rumford, owner of the Kineto Theatre, Forest, Ont. and secretary of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario, has retired from the office of mayor of that town, which he held for eight terms.

The annual convention of the Canadian Picture Pioneers, which boasts close to 400 members throughout the Dominion, has finally been fixed for February 1 at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. It was postponed from last November because of a conflict of dates. A banquet will follow the business session.

SKATING PARTY. The Indianapolis Variety Club, Tent No. 10, held its annual skating party for boys of the Boys Club Association at Rollerland recently. Among those attending the party were (standing, l-r) Sam Switow, local Variety Club president; Russell Brentlinger, vice-president, and William Patterson, manager of Rollerland. Kneeling are Everett B. Kelly, Lauter Club director, and George R. Templin, director of the English Avenue Club.

BUFFALO

Ben Smith, Albany representative for Pam-O, and Mrs. Smith stopped off in Buffalo en route from Toronto, where they spent the holidays.

Sympathy is being extended to Laura Clabeau, 20th Century-Fox, on the passing of her mother.

Eddie Cordet, back from Army overseas duty, resumes as manager of the Mercury Theatre here. Marion Hadlick, who pinch-hit for Eddie, goes back to her former post as head cashier, where she started when the theatre opened in 1938.

Dalton Bergett of the Regent Theatre, Dunkirk, has gone to St. Petersburg, Fla.

A new theatre is planned for Main Street, to be operated by the newly-organized Arts Cinema Corporation of Buffalo, which has obtained a 21-year lease on the space in the Dold Building.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen along Film Row: S. Slotnick and Rube Canter of the Canter & Slotnick Circuit; H. G. Carroll, Strand, Rochester; Jim Ryan, Ithica, Ithaca.

NEW YORK

Herman Becker of the Becker-Rugoff Circuit was aboard the train bound for Florida which was derailed last week in Georgia. After walking a mile from the wreck he found a phone and notified his family that he was unhurt.

William F. Rodgers, MGM vice-president and general sales manager, will return to New York from Miami Beach January 19 and leave in early February for the coast.

Harold Marenstein of the Warner exchange shipping department has resigned to join MGM in the same capacity. Marjorie Goldberger, bookkeeper at the exchange has also resigned.

Eight former Loew employes have returned to the company from service in the past couple of weeks. out ill all last week.

Fred Hodgson of the Paramount publicity department and Tess Klausner, both returned to work last week after brief illnesses, while Bill Schneider of the advertising department went to bed with the flue.

Brandt Theatres have acquired property at Broadway and 67th Street, New York, and plans to build a 2000-seat film and television theatre. Brandt now operates the Town, Beacon, Yorktown, Midtown, Carlton, Edison and Schuyler in the vicinity. The property was assessed at $300,000.

Recent changes in personnel of the Century Circuit include the switch of Franklin Sheerin, formerly at the Floral to the management of the Lynbrook with Albert Wasserman taking over the Floral. John Hofeditz has been transferred from the Grove to the Fantasy as assistant manager and Arthur McWatters, Long Island relief manager, will be the new assistant at the Grove. Sidney Nelson, former manager of the Lynbrook, will take over McWatters duties as relief manager.

Lou Kalker, for the past decade British and European sales representative for Republic, has been appointed PRC sales representative in the United Kingdom and Europe, it was announced this week by Harry H. Thomas, PRC president.

Lt. Francis Hicks, who lost his right arm in Germany, has returned to his former post of assistant manager of the Ritz, Staten Island.

Manager Irving Schwartz of the Dyckman, New York, celebrated his 10th wedding anniversary Christmas week.

Murray Scharf, manager of the Alpine, Brooklyn, is recuperating at home following an operation at the Midtown Hospital.

Cpl. Harold J. Abrahams, who has been handling special film activities in France and Belgium for the Army's special services, has been discharged and will rejoin Warners' playdate department on January 14.

Mrs. Sylvia Diamond, secretary to Bill Brumberg, manager of the Warner field public relations staff, has left the company to become a mother. Harriet Lasker has succeeded her.

VANCOUVER

Projectionists Local 348 in Vancouver is doing a swell job of helping returning veterans. At present, the union has 16 apprentices taking courses in projection, it being necessary to be in training for two years before taking the provincial examinations. The Government pays the boys $60 monthly if single and $80 if married.

Alfred Shackleford, manager of the Capitol and Roxy, Lethbridge, Alberta, was re-elected mayor again. He has been chief magistrate since 1940. His houses are affiliated with Famous Players.

Pacific Mills Ltd. have awarded contracts for the construction of a new theatre at Ocean Falls, B. C. Theatre will seat 750 and film bookings will be under Tommy Borland, company purchasing agent.

Duncan MacKenzie, Calgary projectionist, was elected president of the Alberta AFL.

The Canadian quota for projection machines and other theatre equipment remains small in comparison to requirements, due to the labor difficulties and material bottlenecks which have hit reconversion in U. S. plants.

Bill Oswald, B. C. veteran showman, and firemarshal for the province, is retiring this year.

Russell McTavish, owner of the Cambie, has given an option to purchase the house to a Montreal exhibitor, moving to the coast. The theatre is a good suburban money-maker.

Bob Lightstone, Paramount Calgary salesman, who was a Vancouver visitor over the Christmas season, is being transferred to the Winnipeg office from Calgary.

The safe of the Metro, New Westminster, was blown New Year's Eve by robbers who obtained $350.

Business picked up over New Year's after a gloomy Christmas week. "Dolly Sisters" at the Capitol and "Stork Club" at the Orpheum were neck and neck for top coin and "Spanish Main's" second week at the Dominion was also good.

On the sick list are the wife and daughter of Bob Murphy, Paramount manager; Mimi Steen of RKO; Mrs. Paul Harmond, wife of the British Columbia circuit operator; Charlie Doctor, manager of the Capitol. The latter is out of the hospital and recuperating at home, but his injured hip will prevent him from theatre activities for several months.

Bill Jones, RKO Vancouver manager and Reggie Dodderich, Calgary manager, are in Seattle attending a Ned. E. Depinet drive meeting, being held by Drive Captain Dave Prince and Harry Gittleson, assistant to the western division manager.

Managers of leading film houses are watching this week's business closely to get a clue as to what to expect in the New Year in the way of patronage, now that the holiday season and the war are over. For two years, theatres in Vancouver and Victoria enjoyed excellent and even record business. Now with thousands released from war plants and shipyards, the situation may be different but there are good prospects for increased activity in many plants here. The building trades are hoping for a boom in housing. Famous Players report 1945 business was 15 per cent over 1944.

Frank Kershaw, president of General Theatre Supply Co. resigned last week to go into business for himself on the coast. He was formerly Famous Players British Columbia district manager before going to Toronto with GTS.

Jack Randall, manager of the Capitol, spotted 5000 cards around hotels and cafes in town asking that people refrain from telling "What 'Mildred Pierce' did." The stunt resulted in smash business.

DALLAS

All United Artists employes are now back at work after two days' absence during a controversy with the local office workers union.

Jack Dailey, formerly Paramount publicist in Dallas, recently discharged from the Army where he served as public relations officer, has been named executive assistant to Guy Eyssell of the Radio City Music Hall. Dailey will take over his new assignment immediately.

Friends of Harry Sachs, booker with Interstate for 20 years who left January 11 to be associated with I. Addelman in theatre enterprises, tendered him a stag dinner Friday night at the Dallas Athletic Club.

Al Irwin, who has been with Interstate Theatres in Houston for the past 20 years, died suddenly of a heart attack. He is survived by his widow. A large contingent from Dallas went to Houston for the funeral services.

Commander Paul Short has returned from the coast. Announcement of his future plans will be made immediately following his official discharge from the Navy.

WASHINGTON

The District of Columbia will inaugurate its drive to raise funds for the battle against infantile paralysis on January 14, including a round of events dedicated to the memory of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt on his January thirtieth birthday. Commissioner John Russell Young, general chairman of the local committee of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, said that the March of Dimes campaign will be continued until January 31. A banner ball at Uline's Arena, and possibly some dances at local hotels with personal appearances of stage, screen and radio stars, is being considered. The following men, prominent in the civic, social and theatrical life of the District are on Commissioner Young's executive committee: Carter T. Barron, Ray Bell, J. Edward Fontaine, Andrew R. Kelley, Frank La Falce, A. E. Lichtman, Ben McKelway, John J. Payette, Edmund Plohn, Bryson Rash, C. Melvin Sharpe, S. L. Sorkin, Francis L. Timmons.

Jonas Bernheimer, Warner real estate dept., was host at a luncheon in the Neptune Room, where the piece de resistance was wild pheasant. Among the lucky Warnerites who attended were Buster Root, booking dept., and Wm. C. Ewing, publicity.

The District's theatres are cooperating 100% in the Victory Clothing Collection Drive. Trailers will be run in all theatres and posters will be displayed to focus attention on the drive.

Now that Bernie Lyons, fiance of Frances Shafer, Warner booking dept. and Lee Suit, fiance of Theodosia Shupe, real estate dept., have been discharged from service, wedding bells will soon be ringing for both couples.

PORTLAND

Interstate Theatres, owners of houses in Medford, Ashland, Grants Pass and Weed, Calif., have announced plans for an 800-seat house in Central Point, Ore.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Moyer, have announced the opening of their new Sunset Theatre at Sandy, Ore.

The Harris-Voeller Theatre Company is planning a new theatre at Nyassa, Ore.

Edward N. Weinbaum and Kenneth Cockerline, independent theatre owners, have been reappointed to the Portland Municipal Board of Review for three-year terms.

Seattle first runs: "What Next, Corporal Hargrove," Fifth Avenue; "Fallen Angel," Paramount; "San Antonio," Orpheum; "Her Highness and the Bellboy," Blue Mouse; "Weekend at Waldorf," Music Box and "Stork Club," Music Hall.

Ted Gamble, Portland theatre owner who recently resigned as war finance head, will take active charge of his chain of theatres early in March and plans to further extend his theatrical holdings.

Spokane first runs: "Kiss and Tell," Fox; "Leave Her to Heaven," State; "What Next, Corporal Hargrove," Orpheum; "The Dolly Sisters," Liberty; "Frontier Gal," Granada; "Son of Lassie," Ritz; "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," Garland.

As a final goodwill gesture for 1945, Mrs. J. J. Parker and the Oregonian gave a special morning Christmas matinee at the Broadway for the armed forces, with "Mexicana" as the screen fare.

MONTREAL

Quebec Allied Theatrical Industries held an executive meeting here January 9, the first of the year. Among subjects which came up for discussion was the proposed shut-down on free admissions for servicemen. A move to ease the practice, now that the war is over, was said to be under way and that Consolidated Theatres was in favor of the action. Other cinema owners have taken the opposite view and will continue free admissions regardless of the general policy decided.

Friends and acquaintances of Walter "Babe" Coval are welcoming him back to his former post as manager of the Warners offices here. Gratton Kiely, who handled the job while Babe was in Trinidad, will continue as his assistant. Meanwhile, company executives will keep an eye peeled for a spot for Gratton so that his valuable experience will be used where most needed.

There's a rift in the ranks over the PRC-Eagle-Lion set up. Eagle-Lion, it is learned, wishes to control its own products entirely and the split at the seams will probably come when Rank's representative, John Davis, confers with officials in Toronto shortly.

Ike Sourkes has left Monogram after an association of two years and will be replaced as manager here by Sam Jacobs. Jacobs has been with the company for over 20 years and has spent the last 16 in Saint John, B. C., where he handled the Maritime and Newfoundland territory. Several posts have been offered Sourkes, who will discuss further moves with Toronto officials there this week.

Plans showing the future layout of Odeon's new materpiece in cinema construction are expected to be forthcoming this week. Gordie Dann, local manager, says comment from those who have seen Rank's London house built along the same lines, are extremely favorable and that the building will rival anything built on this continent.

The flu and grippe epidemic in this area is on the wane, but hospitals have limited visiting to private patients only. The weather is not contributing to the betterment of the cause and where a year ago there was snow up to your ear-muffs, now there is little except rain and bare streets. Exploiteers looking for snow to put over a film will be interested in knowing this commodity is scarcer than in any year since 1881.

Worst hit family in the industry here is that of John Ganetakos, of United, with every member in bed sick.

Business is reportedly down, but gross receipts are averaging out as a result of trade over the holiday season. Nearly every house had numerous shows in addition to regular fare, which saved the day.

DES MOINES

Iowa state fair officials, planning the 1946 Centennial state fair, have hopes of bringing some of the stars of "State Fair" to Des Moines for the annual exposition this year. The officials believe a tieup with the picture would help at the gate since the world premiere was held at Des Moines and the film was based on the Iowa fair. If any film folks do attend the fair this year, they probably will have to pay the gate charge just like everyone else, as officials are discussing a plan to do away with all Annie Oakleys at this year's exposition, including the working press. The Iowa fair has not been held since 1941 and the centennial exposition would be the first to start the no-pass plan.

Midwestern district and branch managers of 20th-Century Fox held a trade meeting at Hotel Fort Des Moines with Stanley J. Mayer, Des Moines manager, in charge of the meeting. W. C. Gehring of New York, western sales manager, attended the meeting.

Ed Belew, exploitation representative for United Artists, was in Des Moines in connection with "Spellbound."

M. E. Lee, booker for Central States Theatre Corp. has been named head booker and assistant buyer, succeeding Don West who recently resigned. Bert Thomas, a veteran of 19 years on Des Moines Film Row, has been appointed booker for Central States. Thomas has been a salesman for Columbia the last six months. West had been with Central States for 14 years. He did not announce his future plans.

A cigaret started a film fire at the King Theatre at Ida Grove and although the house was forced to close for two days, no one was injured and the damage was not serious.

Harry Savereide, head of the Savereide Theatre Brokers of Waterloo, Ia., has announced the establishment of two additional offices, one at Minneapolis and the second in Chicago. The new offices will confine their activities to the sale of theatres. Savereide reported recent sales included the purchase by Lyle Eastman of Bode, Ia., of the Strand Theatre at Edgewood, Ia., from Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Lilly; purchase by Joe C. Smay of Des Moines of the Coggan Theatre from Don Brown of Strawberry Point, Ia.; and purchase by Clarence Wilson of New Providence of the Times at Davenport from A. C. Sweetman.

H. D. Grove, Tri-states Thearte Corp. district manager, announced the appointment of Henry Plude as manager of the Fort and city manager of the other Rock Island, Ill., theatres. Jerry Greebaum was named manager of the Capitol and city manager of the Davenport theatres.

More Than a Review

Paramount's year-end review, as presented in its newsreel, issue 39, is something more than just a review. It is a moving plea for understanding and cooperation between nations and for everlasting peace. The newsreel reviews some of the year's most memorable and historic events, including the Battle of the Bulge, Yalta, first crossing of the Rhine, the flag-raising on Suribachi, the atomic bomb meetings of the Big Three, and other events leading up to the atomic age. The film has been interestingly edited, providing 20 minutes of informative, absorbing entertainment.

PHILADELPHIA

A realignment of the sales force at the 20th Century-Fox exchange was occasioned by the resignation of William J. Humphries, the local branch's sales manager. Humphries, who owns theatres in Lewistown and Catasaqua, has been ailing of late and will devote all his time to his theartes. Sam Diamond, who recently came up from Baltimore, will take over Humphries' spot. Herb Gilles takes over Diamond's old territory, while Carson Gable will be the new Harrisburg salesman.

Norman Bailey, former Warner manager, received his discharge from the Navy last weekend, and is waiting for an assignment.

The Victory Loan Committee announced that George E. Schwartz, distributor chairman in Philadelphia, won top honors in the bond premiere category with a percentage of 129.46.

Milt Young, Columbia exploiteer, celebrated another birthday this week. After dinner with his family on Monday, he went upstate to meet with Sid Alexander, Columbia's ad manager, to help set up "Kiss and Tell" with Byron Lynn, advertising manager for the Comerford Theatres.

One of the biggest theatre realty deals in recent years took place last week when Frank Blum, Stonehurst theatre owner, bought the 69th St. theatre bldg. apartments and stores, at Garrett Road and West Chester Pike. The theatre is leased by the Stanley-Warner Company. At the same time he bought the Upper Darby National Bank Building, on W. Chester Pike, west of 69th St. facing the Terminal Theatre, a William Goldman house.

ALBANY

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Van Johnson Gets Dramatic Lead in 'The Risen Soldier'; Jerry Wald Is Assigned to Production of 'Mr. Broadway'

Van Johnson was set for the lead role in the forthcoming MGM production, "The Risen Soldier," based on an article by Archbishop Francis J. Spellman. A story of an American soldier and his family, yet not essentially a war story, "The Risen Soldier" will be produced by Cliff Reid, associate producer of "They Were Expendable." John Lee Mahin has been assigned to write the screen play and Fred Wilcox will direct.

Jim Bannon and Dusty Anderson have been given the romantic leads in "Boston Blackie's Private Ghost," latest in Columbia's series of Boston Blackie films. As in all previous pictures in the series, Chester Morris will have the title role. D. Ross Lederman will direct and John Stone produce under supervision of Bennie F. Zeidman.

Robert Ryan, who was well on the way to stardom after appearing opposite Ginger Rogers in "Tender Comrade," then enlisted in the Marines, has been cast in the romantic lead with Joan Bennett in "Desirable Woman" at RKO where he is under contract. Charles Bickford has the other major role. Jean Renoir will direct and Val Lewton will produce.

Barbara Britton and Rudy Vallee were signed for starring roles in Steve Sekely's initial independent production under the Republic banner, 'The Fabulous Suzanne." This will mark Miss Britton's first appearance for Republic. Formerly under contract to Paramount, she left that studio recently to free lance. Vallee will enact the comedy lead in the picture, whose original screen story was written by William Bowers and Tedwell Chapman. Production will get under way in February with Andre Dumonceau as associate producer.

Mark Stevens gets the male lead in "32 Rue Madeleine," 20th-Fox story of the Office of Strategic Services. Producer will be Louis de Rochemont.

Constance Moore was assigned the starring spot in Republic's forthcoming million-dollar production, "Earl Carroll's Sketchbook," which is scheduled to get under way in February with Robert North producing. Jules Stein and Sammy Kahn, ace song-writing team, will do the score.

"Strange Conquest," mystery drama, was assigned by Universal to Associate Producer Marshall Grant. Production is slated for mid-January, and Howard Welsch will produce.

With Arthur Kennedy and Rory Mallinson joining Kent Smith in Warners' "The Sentence," three returned actors will make their postwar debut in the film which will star Ann Sheridan. Vincent Sherman will direct and William Jacobs produce.

"Pardon My Guns," an original story by J. Benton Cheney, has been purchased by Monogram as a starring vehicle for western star Johnny Mack Brown, with Raymond Hatton featured. The author is now preparing the screenplay.

Frank Sinatra, Kathryn Grayson and Gene Kelly, the same trio of stars, and George Sidney, the same director of the MGM musical hit, "Anchors Aweigh," have been set for the follow-up, "All Ashore," which Joe Pasternak, producer of the original picture, plans to film as soon as Kelly, now a naval lieutenant, returns to civilian life.

Helen Walker was signed to a long term exclusive contract at 20th-Fox studios. She is at present working in "Cluny Brown" and her next picture assignment will be "The Home Stretch," which will be produced in Technicolor by Robert Bassler.

Glenn Langan has been assigned the role of Captain Rex Morgan, Amber's first husband, in the 20th-Fox picture, "Forever Amber," which John Stahl will direct and William Perlberg produce in Technicolor. Only other assignment is Reginald Gardiner, who will play King Charles II.

Marshall Thompson and Morris Ankrum were given top featured roles in MGM's "But Not Goodbye," now before cameras with S. Sylvan Simon directing. Film version of the George Seaton play features Frank Morgan, Keenan Wynn, Audrey Totter, Cecil Kellaway, Gladys Cooper, Richard Quine and Leon Ames. Irving Starr produces.

Tom Neal and Martha O'Driscoll will have the romantic leads in Universal's mystery story, "Design For Death," now under way with Will Jason directing for Associate Producer-Writer George Bricker. Elisha Cook, Jr., Donald MacBride, Peter Whitney and Oliver Blake have featured roles.

Rhys Williams was signed by Producer Jack Chertok for one of the important roles in "The Strange Woman," which stars Hedy Lamarr. Williams, Welsh actor who came to Hollywood from the stage cast of "The Corn Is Green," will play the role of Deacon Adams in the screen adaptation of Ben Ames Williams' best-seller which is being directed by Edgar Ulmer under the Hunt Stromberg banner.

Jerry Wald has been assigned to produce "Mr. Broadway" which will be a show business cavalcade based on the life of Sime Silverman. Abel Green, who wrote the original story, is leaving New York to report to Warners for conferences.

James Gleason and Edward Everett Horton were signed by Columbia for top comedy roles in "Down to Earth," Technicolor musical fantasy to be produced by Don Hartman and directed by Al Hall, with Rita Hayworth as star.

RKO Adds Riskin to Outside Producer List

Robert Riskin Productions, Inc., has signed an agreement with RKO, which will add the output of this independent production company to its list of outside producers, along with Leo McCarey's Rainbow Productions, the Capra-Wyler-Stevens-Briskin Liberty Films, Inc., Frank Ross Productions and others.

Three major pictures have been scheduled by the Riskin Corporation on a $5 million budget. The first film, for which the script has already been completed, will be "The Magic City." Casting and directorial assignments, which have been pending until the company's releasing arrangements were completed, will be announced shortly. Also scheduled is the story of Johnny Appleseed, fighting father of the American orchard, and "Impact," a sociological study of big business and American society.

The Riskin organization consists of Fay Wray Riskin, vice-president; former Judge Lester Roth, secretary, and William S. Holman, former studio manager for RKO, treasurer and general manager.

4 Films Start at RKO This Month; Another 4 in February

Joan Fontaine, Henry Fonda, Alan Marshal, Barbara Hale, Bill Williams and Jack Haley are scheduled to appear before RKO cameras in four productions started in January.

"Christabel Caine" will be the Fontaine, Fonda and Marshal co-starrer; "A Likely Story" will team Hale and Williams and Jack Haley will star in "Double Trouble."

Pictures scheduled for February include the Technicolor special "Sinbad the Sailor," co-starring Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Maureen O'Hara and Walter Slezak; "Deadlier Then the Male," with Lawrence Tierney; "The Falcon in Reno," with Tom Conway in the title role; and "Child of Divorce," starring Sharyn Moffett.

Frank Wead Replaces John Mahin As Writer of MGM's 'Atomic' Story

Frank Wead, Hollywood writer, has been assigned to do the screenplay for MGM's "The Beginning of the End" due to the illness of John Lee Mahin. Wead's previous effort was the screen adaptation of "They Were Expendable."

In putting the atom bomb story into production as soon as possible, Robert Considine is writing the original in the east where he is in constant touch with scientists and military and government officials. He is wiring his story, page-by-page to producer Sam Marx, who is speeding the material to Wead.

Pratt Named Production Manager

James Pratt, veteran of 22 years in film production, has been named production manager for International Pictures. Assistant to John Beck, Jr., International general manager, for the past six months, Pratt served as civilian manager for the U. S. Signal Corps at the Astoria, L. I. studios for a year prior to joining International. George Golitzen will assist Pratt.

New Camera Equipment Set for March 10 Delivery to Warners

Ten of the first postwar motion picture cameras to be released to private industry will be delivered by Mitchell Camera Corp. to the Warner Bros. Studio on March 10, giving the Burbank lot what is declared the largest inventory of modern photographic equipment owned by any major studio, according to Jack L. Warner, executive producer.

New cameras now on order are the B.N.C. type, embodying all of the highest developments in motion picture cameras today, and will carry modern auxiliary equipment including remote focusing control and automatic slating device. Ten machines of this type were purchased by Warners just before the U. S. entered the war.

Bogeaus-Robinson Sign Korda to Direct Peck in Hemingway Film

Benedict Bogeaus and Casey Robinson have signed Zoltan Korda to direct Gregory Peck in "The Short Happy Life of Francis Macomber," the famous Ernest Hemingway story of African intrigue and adventure, to be released through United Artists. John Meehan has been assigned to do the screenplay under the supervision of Robinson.

The pictures is the first of two films to be released by the Bogeaus-Robinson team under a recently concluded deal. A proposed second story is based on the life of Anna Pavlova and will star Tamara Toumanova.

Semi-Documentary Theme Set For UA's Dorsey Brothers Film

Charles R. Rogers will employ a semi-documentary technique in "The Fabulous Dorseys" the picturization of the life of bandsmen Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey, which will be released by United Artists. The film will be the initial attempt to present the band business in such a fashion.

Richard English, who spent seven weeks in the east with the musician brothers, as well as doing research in their respective haunts, will write the original screenplay, approaching the script from the semi-documentary slant.

Ida Lupino Signs RKO Contract

Ida Lupino will be starred by RKO Radio in a one-picture-a-year contract arrangement announced this week by Charles W. Koerner, executive vice-president, in charge of production. The contract stipulates that Miss Lupino will begin her RKO duties in June of 1947.

Haskin Signs New Contract

Byron Haskin, a Hal Wallis Productions director, releasing through Paramount, has signed a new contract, and is working on a story based on the development of the atom bomb.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

I've got good news for the Myrna Loy fans. We're going to meet their favorite star today. She's working on the Universal lot in the Skirball-Manning picture "So Goes My Love," and we've been invited to drop around to the set.

Although Don Ameche is being co-starred we won't get to see him for he's not in the sequence they're scheduled to shoot. It's a scene between Myrna and Mollie Lamont in which the green-eyed monster rears his ugly head: one of those "biting" clashes that take place between two women when one is jealous of the other's good fortune. You see, Mollie is Myrna's cousin, at whose home she lived after she arrived from a small town with the announced intention of marrying a rich man. Instead, she married Ameche, a poor inventor (for a change), and his subsequent success and their happiness rankle her cousin.

Set is the parlor of their home. Year 1870. It's a typical setting for that time with the furniture and the gowns the two women are wearing authentic copies of the styles of that era. Tea is being served on a round table in the middle of the room. It is a beautifully carved, marble-top mahogany table; so lovely that it is brought into the conversation between the two women.

Myrna wears a bustle dress made of white organdy with black polka dots; over this is a black taffets weskit trimmed at armholes and neck with black lace. Her hair is braided in the back, curled in front. Mollie's dress is royal blue taffeta and with it she wears a tiny hat to match.

While we've been taking all this in, Director Frank Ryan and Cameraman Joe Valentine have been busy getting things set for the filming. At Ryan's signal to "go," Mollie starts the scene with a remark about the table as she moves forward to accept the cup of tea Myrna has poured for her. Then she says something about Ameche, at which time Myrna gives it to her with both barrels, so that she backs away saying, "love is certainly blind." Ryan then yells "cut" and announces "that was okay, it's a take," which leaves everybody breathless, for a "one take" is a phenomenon in this business.

The place now becomes a beehive of activity, for the technicians start shifting things around for the next scene, so we have to wend our way through lots of cable and props in order to get to Myrna's dressing room. There we visit with her for some time, talking over the parts she usually plays and what she expects to do now that she's free lancing.

Before we leave we're introduced to the director, cameraman, and all the other important people on the set.

Until next week.

Ann Lewis

Hilton to Write Screenplay

James Hilton will begin work on the screenplay of "The Last Man in the World," Paramount's projected film dealing with the depopulation of the earth through atomic energy. Based on "The Purple Cloud," a story by M. P. Shiel, which the studio has owned for several years, the film will star Ray Milland.

Republic to Produce 29 Films For Release in Next Six Months

Republic will produce 29 pictures, scheduled to be made during the first six months of 1946, according to Allen Wilson, vice-president of the studio.

Of the 29, which will keep every stage on the lot employed, five are part of the highest-budgeted program of films set for the new year. These include "The Uninvited Guest," starring Vera Hruba Ralston, which will start about February 1; "Earl Carroll's Sketchbook," produced by Robert North, also slated for February; "That Brennan Girl," Alfred Santell's second production for the studio, to start in March; "Rendezvous With Annie," Allan Dawn's initial production, set for April; the William Elliott starrer, "Plainsman and the Lady," produced and directed by Joseph Kane, scheduled for April, and "That Man of Mine" in May.

During the same period, five Roy Rogers' musical Westerns are listed, with the first, "Rainbow Over Texas," to go into production shortly, followed by "My Pal Trigger" in February, "Under Nevada Skies" in March, "Springtime in the Sierras" in April and "Shine on Texas Moon," slated for June.

Columbia Signs Spewack Team To Writer-Producer Contract

Columbia has signed Bella and Sam Spewack, successful stage and screen writing team, to write and produce an as yet untitled original story. This will be the duo's initial venture as joint writers-producers.

The Spewacks' stage hits include, "Boy Meets Girl" and "Leave it to Me," the latter written in collaboration with Cole Porter; and such screenplays as "Boy Meets Girl," "My Favorite Wife" and "Weekend at the Waldorf."

Monogram's 4 January Starters

Monogram has announced four films to go before the cameras during January. First to start, will be "Code of the Drifter," on January 7; the second in the "Shadow" series has been set for the 17th; "Don't Gamble With Strangers" starts on the 25th and "In High Gear," the final production of the month, is set for January 28.

Stothart Composes 'Years' Score

Herbert Stothart and the MGM studio orchestra will do the musical score for "The Green Years," based on the A. J. Cronin novel. For the film, which features Tom Drake, Beverly Tyler and Hume Cronyn, Stothart has composed a special score of Scottish music. Leon Gordon produced and Victor Saville directed.

Gershenson Signs Hellman

Producer Joseph Gershenson has signed Sam Hellman to write the screenplay for the Universal Comedy, "The Runaround," which has been set as a top-budget production and scheduled for an early spring start.

Marin to Direct 'Mr. Ace'

Edwin L. Marin has been signed by Benedict Bogeaus to direct "Mr. Ace and the Queen," United Artists release starring George Raft. Production is scheduled to begin this week.

RKO Buys Unwritten Wilder Novel

RKO has purchased "Written on the Wind," Robert Wilder's unpublished novel for 1946 filming. Putnam and Sons will run off a first printing of 100,000 copies.

Say MISTER--

How About Those OTHER KIDS?

We're WALKING again! Yes, Mister, thanks to you and last year's swell MARCH OF DIMES campaign, we're running and playing and having fun, just like all the kids in our neighborhood . . . BUT . . .

Say, Mister . . . HOW ABOUT THOSE OTHER KIDS?

We mean the kids back in the hospital we came from. The kids who can't move their legs . . . who must stay in bed all day, or sit in wheel-chairs . . . The kids who never had a chance to SWIM . . . or SKIP ROPE . . . or play BASEBALL . . . or to know how good it is to feel green grass crunching between their bare toes.

They're swell kids, Mister . . . and we know they'll be grateful too . . . if you'll help them to WALK again . . . to LIVE again!

They're just a bunch of little kids, Mister, just like us . . . and they can't do the job themselves . . . That's why they're counting on YOU . . . to run the Greer Garson appeal TRAILER, that's even better than the one that brought in over SIX MILLION DOLLARS last year . . . to put over that 1946 MARCH OF DIMES campaign . . . even bigger than before!

You won't let those kids down . . . will ya, Mister?

Will ya?

Taxes and Legislation

The mail that flows across this desk indicates very strongly that there are many and many independent exhibitors who are critical of the type of representation the exhibition branch of this industry has received in Washington in connection with the admission tax.

There is no denying the fact that one can find little reason to compliment those who claimed to have represented the theatre branch of the industry at the hearings which preceded enactment of the tax measure that puts a twenty per cent impost on theatre admissions. Indeed, one can say only that the efforts were distinguished chiefly by their failure to accomplish anything whatsoever.

This condition serves further to emphasize the vital necessity for an overall revamping of the exhibitor front with respect to its representation in taxes and other matters coming under the general heading of public relations.

The most hopeful sign on the horizon—in our opinion—is the proposed national organization to be set up by the so-called Theatres Activities Committee. Here, we believe, is the blueprint for something that will be a definite service to the theatremen directly and the whole industry indirectly. For there is a formula suggested which—if followed in the spirit and letter outlined by the sponsors of the TAC plan—can accomplish that unity of action which is vitally necessary in matters of proposed federal, state and municipal taxes. We say this because the TAC is firmly dedicated to the very sensible premise that taxation and legislation should be the most important objectives of the exhibition branch working for one common aim through the medium of an association or group such as is proposed.

It appears that certain elements are trying to throw up a smoke screen with which to obscure the real issue behind the whole TAC idea. For what reason or reasons it is not important to either conjecture or discuss. However, one of the outcries—appealing to the fear motive—is all about "circuit domination." Well, in the first place why is circuit domination so certain to become a fact in this organization and if there is more circuit representation than independent theatre owner membership, what harm will there be in that? Particularly when you take into account that the TAC plan is to function, not as a competitor to either of the present two exhibitor organizations, but will concern itself with outside-the-industry matters. And has anybody who is doing the jitter-dance over this bogie man called "circuit domination" figured out that the circuit has as much at stake as the independent theatre owner when it comes to matters affecting the running of their business? Thus, anything the circuits accomplish for themselves with respect to lower taxes, for example, automatically benefits all theatre owners and operators.

However, we do not believe the circuit affiliates will ever dominate the Theatre Activities Committee. The method they have worked out for the selection of the regional delegates should result in an almost two-to-one advantage for the independent as against the circuits.

Monogram's Broidy

Steve Broidy's meeting with the trade press this week in New York disclosed some interesting and important information regarding the company's future plans.

Monogram's move into the higher bracket pictures class was emphasized by the recently completed elaborate production "Suspense."

Things seem to be moving at a fast pace under the guidance of the new president of Monogram.

Straw-In-The-Wind

Those who have followed the progress of the government divorcement suit through their trade journals must by this time have come to the same conclusion that we have, namely, that it appears highly improbable that the court is going to agree entirely with the government's contention that divorcement will solve the ills of the industry.

We spent many years of our business career in the exhibition branch of this industry. And during those many years we were always convinced that if we had to have circuit competition we would much rather it be an affiliated circuit than an independent chain.

Leaders of the Industry

Part Two of this week's issue reports the result of our poll of exhibitors as to the Leading pictures and stars for the 1944-45 season. As in past years, since 1938 to be precise, our nation-wide survey has accurately reflected the record of picture and star performance for the preceding season and also has most accurately mirrored prevailing exhibitor opinion on vital trade matters. With confidence in its revelations, we present with pride our Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry for 1945.

Anti-Trust Trial Judge Calls Divorcement 'Drastic Remedy'

The anti-trust suit in which the government charged monopoly exists in the motion picture industry and named eight producer-distributor companies as defendants, had its final three days in court this week as oral arguments by prosecution and defense attorneys were presented in New York U. S. District Court. Optimism that the government's case had bogged down when brought to court appeared to run through the ranks of the representatives of the film companies after points scored by defense, and remarks from the bench, regarding the government demand for "divorcement," indicated that at least one of the judges regarded this demand as "drastic."

The expression from the bench regarding divorcement came when Circuit Judge Augustus N. Hand, presiding jurist of the three-man statutory court, declared to Robert L. Wright, assistant U. S. attorney and prosecutor of the government action, "your great aim is to upset all ownership of theatres. Now that is an extremely drastic remedy that I should think it extremely unlikely that this court will give. But that is merely a first impression by myself, and I've got to study this very carefully in other ways than just by merely reading through the briefs once, of course." The same justice later declared following a vigorous plea on behalf of Columbia by Louis D. Frohlich that, "I never could make out much of a case against you, either at the beginning of this action or now, but maybe I will become convinced to the contrary later on."

Objects to All Clearance

Wright had opened the proceedings, Tuesday, with a summation of the U. S. case, and declared that the Government was against all clearance of any sort. The U. S. attorney declared that an abolishment of clearance and run, divorcement and the scrapping of the consent decree was necessary in his opinion. The court, asked the U. S. counsel through Justice Hand if he had a system to replace the one he was breaking down. Wright's reply was, "We advocate fundamentally a system where a distributor is free to function as a distributor without any agreement or affiliation binding him to some exhibitor for the purpose of eliminating competition between exhibitors." Defense attorneys characterized this statement as "typical" of the "Government inability" to answer a question squarely. The court then asked Wright what he would suggest as an alternate to divorcement if that issue was not granted. Wright said, "A substitute for divorcement would allow a defendant to play only in his own theatres and, of course, those of independents, provided it is understood by the court that a freeze would be put on further acquisition of theatres."

Wright declared that run and clearance were a product of affiliation, a statement challenged by Whitney Seymour, Paramount attorney, who declared they were in existence by 1915 before any of the present companies had acquired theatres.

The defense case was opened by John W. Davis for Loew's who told the court that he was not as learned as the U. S. counsel, and was only a "country boy trying to make good and earn a living," but that in all his experience he had never seen a case like this one, where the main issues of the Sherman Act under which the case was being tried were ignored.

Davis was followed by Seymour who reiterated remarks made at previous hearings throughout the trial and, following the general pattern of the defense, used sets of figures on production, distribution and theatre holdings to show that Paramount alone constituted an infinitesimal part of the industry and could not constitute a monopoly. He stated that in order to make Paramount a party to a general pattern of conspiracy, proof must be offered of which there was none.

Arbitration Bill $1,347,000

John Caskey, representing 20th Century-Fox followed Seymour, and traced the history of the consent decree and the arbitration system as an outgrowth of the decree. He declared the theatre owning defendants, despite the expiration of the time limit set on arbitration, have continued it at their own expense and spent $1,347,000 on it to date, with the average cost to an exhibitor to try a case being $48. Caskey also dealt with such matters as alleged closed towns in which 20th-Fox operated 16, with a total film revenue of $25,000 out of the $25 million received by the company from all theatres, and 20th's operations in the 92 cities listed by the Government with populations of 100,000 or over.

George Leisure for RKO followed, making his main point the fact that without integration RKO could not have existed or could not now exist. Summing up for the "Big Five," former Justice Joseph M. Proskauer declared that under the law the court could not disturb the present

Park-Butte Theatres $480,000 Anti-Trust Suit Settled

Following stipulations signed by all parties December 31 to have the action dismissed on its merits, dismissal with prejudice of the $480,000 anti-trust suit filed by the Park-Butte Theatres Co. of Butte, Mont., was revealed this week when copies of the court order were received by home offices in New York. Terms of the settlement reached were not revealed.

Filing their complaint last February, the plaintiffs, which operated the Montana and Park theatres in Butte, charged that the 23 defendants had combined and conspired over a 12-year period to restrain trade by depriving the plaintiff's theatres from obtaining preferred runs, thereby impairing the income and investment return on a $140,000 property value.

Rites Held for J. M. Ridge

Funeral services were held in Hollywood last Friday (11) for J. Maurice Ridge, 61, sales manager of Altec Lansing Corp., who died of a heart attack at the Ventura, Calif., Hospital.

Louis B. Mayer

(The Man on the Cover)

Vice-president in charge of production, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures, whose eminence as a producer of screen entertainment of great mass appeal and artistic merit is currently emphasized again in the results of a national poll of exhibitors conducted by Showmen's Trade Review and reported in Section Two of this issue. Among the pictures and stars who stand forth as top choices for the 1944-45 season, MGM films and personalities run far in front in the Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry compilation. Leading actor and leading actress both are MGM stars, who were developed at the MGM studios. Pictures produced by the studios under Mr. Mayer's guidance and direction run one, two, three in the selections of the exhibitors. (See Section Two of this issue for complete details.)

Heads Monogram Subsidiary Firms

Steve Broidy, president of Monogram Pictures Corp., has been named president of all Monogram's domestic subsidiary companies at meetings held by the board of directors of the respective companies. W. Ray Johnston, former president of these companies, becomes board chairman of the subsidiaries. The latter include Monogram Distributing Corp. and Monogram Productions, Inc.

Steve Broidy

This realignment does not include Monogram International, with Norton V. Ritchey remaining as president, Broidy becoming board chairman and Johnston vice-chairman.

Broidy arrived in New York this week to preside at a meeting of the Monogram board scheduled for February 4. Broidy's plans include the completion of arrangements with Ruthrauff and Ryan to handle the national and fan magazine advertising on "Suspense"; discussions with sales executives Edward Morey, Maurice Goldstein and Jack Schlaifer and the conclusion of negotiations for story properties. Broidy, who was honor guest at a Monogram press party at the Gotham Hotel on Tuesday, will return to the coast February 10.

The appointments were made following a meeting of the board of directors of the company last week.

Washington Franchise to Republic

Republic has purchased the franchise rights in the Washington territory from Jake Flax and his associates and has taken over the operation of the branch. Flax will remain with the company as Washington branch manager.

'Wilson' Tops '10 Best'

Twentieth Century-Fox has captured the three top positions in Film Daily's 24th annual "Ten Best Pictures" poll, with American press and radio reviewers and critics voting "Wilson" the best picture of 1945, with "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and "Keys of the Kingdom" following in second and third place, respectively. The same company's "Laura" took sixth place, preceded by Columbia's "A Song to Remember" as fifth place winner. Other winning pictures were, in the order named: "The Story of GI Joe" (UA-Lester Cowan), "The Corn Is Green" (Warners), "National Velvet" (MGM) and "Anchors Aweigh" (MGM).

MOD Leaders Optimistic

Optimism over the prospects of a big final result in the March of Dimes Drive in theatres commencing January 24 soared at midweek as reports from the field indicated that several states will show a greater percentage of pledged theatres than at the same period preceeding last year's campaign.

William Levine, chairman for West Virginia, and J. Meyer Schine, upstate N. Y. chairman, report 100 per cent enrollment of houses in their territories. In Virginia, W. F. Crockett has 287 houses pledged to date against 185 last year. M. C. Cooper and Ed Kraus, North Dakota co-chairmen have 13 more theatres pledged this year.

Among the states which are running close to their 1945 records total are: Colorado, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Iowa, Kentucky, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Rhode Island, Wyoming.

Additional blanket circuit pledges were received from: Randforce, Brooklyn (38 theatres); Savar Amuse. Co., Camden, N. J. (12); Miner Amuse. Co., Rice Lake, Wis. (9); Fost West Coast Agency Corp., California (258); Pioneer Theatre Corp., St. Louis Park, Minn. (7); B. & Q. Associates, Boston (7); and Alger Theatres, La Salle, Ill. (10).

Speakers scheduled for the twelfth annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio at the Neil House, Columbus, January 22-23, include Governor Frank J. Lausche, A. F. Myers of National Allied, James Donohue, Paramount division manager; Maurice N. Wolf of Metro, Leon Bamberger of RKO and W. C. Gehring, 20th-Fox division manager.

Bulletin from P. J. Wood, ITO secretary, declares that preferred playing time, extended runs, blind selling, moveovers, arbitrary designation of playing time, unfair allocations and rentals will be discussed in the two business meetings.

Robert O'Brien Named Paramount Secretary, Succeeds Austin Keough

The Board of Directors of Paramount this week named Robert H. O'Brien, who at present is assistant to Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, secretary of the corporation to succeed Austin Keough, who relinquished the post but will continue as general counsel. O'Brien will take over the duties of Norman Collyer, retired.

Hebert Rejoins Goldwyn; Farnol Director in East

William Hebert has rejoined the Samuel Goldwyn organization as director of advertising and publicity in Hollywood. Lynn Farnol, who has held the post for the past year, will return to the east where he will take over as director of advertising and publicity in New York. Farnol is due to arrive in New York next month to begin preparations for the opening in April of "The Kid from Brooklyn."

Ben Washer, who has been publicity chief in New York continues in that capacity.

Weisfeldt Leaves Columbia; Plans New Picture Company

M. J. Weisfeldt, who recently announced his resignation from Columbia Pictures Corporation retired from company affairs last Wednesday instead of March 1, by mutual understanding with A. Montague, Columbia sales manager. Weisfeldt plans a vacation in Florida before announcing his new affiliation. In the meantime he is making his temporary headquarters at the law offices of Dean Alfange, who is representing Weisfeldt in the formation of a new picture company.

Rank, B&H Agree on Interchange

Tom Law of London, representing the J. Arthur Rank interests, and Joe McNabb, president of Bell & Howell Co., are this week finalizing agreements under which Bell & Howell and British Acoustics, the engineering and manufacturing company of the Rank group, will interchange research, manufacture and distribution of equipment and films.

National Film Cooperative for Canada Formed in Toronto

Canada's first national cooperative film company, to be known as the Central Film Cooperative Association, has been formed and is now in process of organization in Toronto. Membership in the association, now under government charter, is open to individuals or groups. Officers are S. M. Ferris, president; Thomas Way, vice-president; Bruce Smith, second vice-president, and Todd E. Dixon, treasurer.

Main objectives of the company are to employ technicians for repair and servicing, offer periodic general checkups, offer film damage insurance at cost, maintain an 8- and 16-mm. movie library on all conceivable subjects, publish a weekly paper with co-op ads and maintain a library of books on equipment maintenance. The enterprise will be financed by its members, with any existing profit at the end of the fiscal year going back to members.

Walter Wanger to Fly East for Meeting with N. Y. Censors

Walter Wanger, vice-president of Diana Productions, producer of "Scarlet Street," will leave Hollywood for New York to confer with Dr. Irwin Conroe, acting director of the Motion Picture Division of New York State Educational Department which has banned the picture being released by Universal from showing in the state.

Wanger stated in Hollywood Wednesday that he hoped to confer with Dr. Conroe soon after his arrival in New York next week and that he was confident an agreement could be reached under which "Scarlet Street" would be permitted exhibition in New York.

Benzing Appointment Presages New Heywood-Wakefield Policy

The recently announced appointment of John A. Benzing as manager of Heywood-Wakefield's public seating division, is indicated as a move, instituted by the corporation's president, Richard N. Greenwood, to effect complete re-organization of the entire theatre and school seating operations of the Heywood-Wakefield organization. Mr. Benzing's appointment followed the retirement of Frederic K. Hill, who for many years directed the sale of public seating products of Heywood-Wakefield.

Rathvon, Depinet on Coast Viewing Recently Finished Product

N. Peter Rathvon, RKO president and RKO Radio chairman of the board, and Ned Depinet, RKO Radio president, were in Hollywood this week viewing recently completed product. Rathvon was to leave the film capital this weekend, with Depinet remaining an additional week. Other RKO home office executives on the coast include S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, and Terry Turner, exploitation manager.

$1000 to Variety Club

The Baltimore Variety Club has received $1000 for the Tent's Heart Fund from the estate of the late J. Louis Rome, deceased member and chief barker at the Club's inception eight years ago. The Club has voted a plaque in his memory.

Find 'Safety Film' Too Costly

Eastman Kodak Company officials, apparently, have discovered so much confusion in the trade regarding the feasibility of adoption by the industry of the so-called Safety Film, that they this week authorized a statement covering the company's position in the matter. A preamble to the statement mentions the "numerous and sometimes inaccurate articles" which have recently appeared in trade and other publications.

(A report in STR December 1, of portions of a bulletin in which Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, referred to the advantages of the safety film for the industry, was published with an adjoining report that film manufacturing circles declared the changeover from nitro to the acetate cellulose film would require years.)

Text of the statement authorized by the Eastman company this week follows:

"Following years of research and development, the quality of motion picture Safety film, particularly with respect to its ability to stand up under theatre projection, has constantly improved. The Eastman 35-mm. Safety film used in large quantities by all governmental agencies during the war performed satisfactorily under the conditions under which it was used. This included regular theatre projection but, generally speaking, the length of run to which these prints were subjected was considerably shorter than that for normal nitrate release prints.

"Numerous tests of Safety film, both standard and experimental, have been made by Eastman in recent years in their own laboratories and under trade conditions. Such tests will continue. So far, however, both laboratory and trade tests have shown that the best Safety film is not equal in wearing quality to nitrate. Any attempt to generally replace nitrate film with the present Safety would inevitably result in substantially increased print damage and much higher print costs to the industry.

"No experience to date has indicated that Safety base can be produced as cheaply as nitrate. When and if a completely satisfactory Safety base can be made and sold in quantities comparable to the present output of nitrate, the price might be lower than the present 1.25 cent price of current Safety positive, but there is no present prospect that it could reach the low price level of nitrate film.

"The outlook for the eventual transition of the industry to Safety film continues to be hopeful. Improvements, however, are still essential and certainly no specific date for a possible shift to Safety base can be set at this time."

MGM Research Bureau Resumes Operations

The Motion Picture Research Bureau, which was temporarily closed down after Dr. Leo Handel's induction in the army in 1943, has resumed its activities following Handel's separation from the service.

The fact-finding agency is continuing to conduct special audience research studies for MGM. The research program is based on studies conducted before as special publicity polls for the advertising department, analyses for the sales department, studies covering MGM stars for the west coast studios, and title tests. It is planned to increase the field of research and especially to do a large amount of work for the studios.

The Bureau operates under the supervision of Howard Dietz, MGM vice-president and director of publicity, advertising and exploitation, and under the direction of Dr. Leo Handel.

Lipton Joins 'U' in Executive Ad Post

Appointment of David A. Lipton, Columbia's national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, as executive coordinator of advertising and promotion for Universal, was announced this week by John Joseph, Universal's national director of advertising, publicity and exploitation. The Lipton appointment completes a three-man executive committee to work under Joseph's supervision, with Maurice Bergman handling the New York office as eastern director of advertising and publicity, and J. W. Dailey as studio publicity director. Lipton will spend several weeks in New York before leaving for his headquarters on the coast.

David A. Lipton

The new setup, it was said, will enable Joseph to devote more time to his executive duties as a member of Universal's advisory board.

With the exception of 18 months in the Army, Lipton had been with Columbia since January, 1941. Previously, he was in the Balaban & Katz publicity department for 13 years and had also been director of publicity for Universal, both in New York and on the coast.

In addition to augmenting the field exploitation staff in key cities around the country during the last few months, Joseph supervised a reorganization of the eastern office in New York, which enabled Bergman to delegate many of his duties to his executive assistant, Henry Linet, and to Publicity Manager Al Horwits. This has given Bergman more time to work with the sales and exhibition departments.

Working with Lipton in the new studio post will be Clark Ramsay, advertising manager, Harry Ormiston, exploitation manager and Maurice Kallis, advertising art director, all of whom will continue in these capacities. The studio publicity staff under Dailey's supervision has been expanded by the return of five veterans and four more are scheduled to leave the armed forces soon, providing the manpower to take care of increased production activities on the lot, as well as to provide complete advertising and publicity service to the independent production companies operating at Universal. The business office, under James Christie, business manager, is being expanded with James Brennan scheduled to become Christie's assistant.

Film Classics Buys Milwaukee Exchange From Ben Marcus

Film Classics has acquired its Milwaukee exchange from Ben Marcus, thus giving the company six of its 27 exchanges throughout the country, it was announced this week by Nickey Goldhammer, vice-president and general sales manager.

Geison Returns to Columbia

Sam Geison has returned to Columbia Pictures in a new post as assistant to Al Rylander, head of special events and exploitation.

Oregon Bond Record

The State of Oregon closed its Victory Loan Drive with a high of $6,225,000 received from the sale of 263,000 E bonds, it has been announced by the state chairmen. Figures show that the state held 101 bond premieres, 183 free movie days and 26 children's premieres during the drive.

Unger Presides at U. A. Meet in New York

A United Artists district managers meeting called by J. J. Unger, general sales manager, began late this week at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York. Unger presided at the opening session on Thursday and was assisted by Jack Goldhar, eastern sales manager; Maury Orr, western sales manager and Edward M. Schnitzer, home office executive.

District managers in attendance included Fred M. Jack, southern district manager in charge of the Atlanta, Charlotte, Dallas and New Orleans exchanges; Rud Lohrenz, midwest district manager, covering Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis; Sam Lefkowitz, district manager covering New York, Albany, Buffalo, Boston, New Haven, Philadelphia and Washington; C. W. Allen, Prairie district manager, covering Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis; W. E. Callaway, western district manager, covering Denver, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle; M. Dudelson, central district manager, covering Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburgh and Charles S. Chaplin, Canadian general manager, in charge of the Calgary, Montreal, St. John, Toronto, Vancouver and Winnipeg branches. Edward C. Raftery, president; Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of distribution; Paul N. Lazarus Sr. and Jr.; Harry M. Buckley and Charles M. Steele also attended the sessions.

Paramount Employes in $8 Million Benefit Plan

One of the most important group insurance transactions of the year and one of the largest ever concluded by a major motion picture company, was announced late last week by Barney Balaban, Paramount president, who disclosed that $5 million in group insurance has been presented without cost to 2400 employes of Paramount, their wives and children.

This amount, plus $3 million of additional protection for employes on the cooperative basis, became effective December 20, 1945 and the combined plans were underwritten by the Equitable Life Assurance Society.

To Address Virginia Independents

At the invitation of William F. Crockett, president, the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Virginia will be addressed by Leon J. Bamberger, RKO Radio sales promotion manager, at its annual convention in Richmond, Va., January 30-31.

Printers' Strike No Threat to Theatres

Lack of newspaper publicity, occasioned by the printers' strike which has left Cleveland without any daily newspapers for more than a week, has not hampered theatre business, according to those who operate local houses. There are constant telephone requests for program information, radio has filled the gap to some extent with spot announcements, and downtown circuits are giving complete program information on all first-runs, regardless of competition. Far from being distressed over the situation, theatre publicity men are happy to pile up unused advertising space to be used at will throughout the rest of the year.

Can't Blame Movies

Motion pictures, Montreal theatremen declare, cannot be blamed for the widespread wave of juvenile delinquency in what is said to be Canada's worst crime-afflicted city, for juveniles are not permitted to see them. Thus far, it is held, no church or citizens' groups have taken pains to recognize this fact.

MGM Conference to Bring 100 to New York

One hundred salesmen and exploiteers from the west, midwest, south and northwest will be brought to New York by MGM for the final two sales conferences to get under way at the Astor Hotel on January 21. The first group, arriving January 20, will consist of 49 men, while 51 will make up the group due January 27.

Meetings scheduled the first week will be attended by John E. Flynn, midwestern sales manager with headquarters in Chicago, while those for the second week will be attended by Rudolph Berger, southern sales manager with headquarters at New Orleans, and George A. Hickey, west coast sales manager headquartering in Los Angeles.

Arriving January 20 for the third series of meetings will be the following, in addition to Flynn:

Jay T. Upton and Harold Cohen, Kansas City; Maurice L. Basse and Frank Heard, Memphis; Ed Gardiner and James N. Byrd, Oklahoma City; Price Shoemaker, William G. Bishop, Michael J. Paul Short Signs Paramount Deal Covering Three Industry Phases

Paul Short, Dallas theatre and southern film distribution executive, recently placed on inactive service by the Navy with the rank of Commander, will go to Hollywood February 11 to start work on a Paramount contract calling for services in production, distribution and exhibition. Short will act as an associate of D. A. Doran, executive producer. Under the terms of his contract he may enter theatre operations under Leonard Goldenson or distribution under Charles Reagan.

Paul Short

Short entered the Navy in 1942 after having been with Interstate Theatres, Texas, for several years, as well as with National Screen.

Warners to Step Up Releases and Increase Production Pace

A step up in the number of releases—with the product to come from the company's $25,000,000 backlog of completed features as well as from an accelerated production pace at the Hollywood studio—will be instituted by Warner Bros., it was revealed in Hollywood Wednesday following a studio meeting of the company's top executives.

Harry M. Warner, president, and Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production presided at the meeting, which was attended by Ben Kalmenson, vice-president in charge of sales; Wolf Cohen, president of Warner International; Mort Blumenstock, vice-president in charge of publicity and advertising, and Alex Evelove, studio publicity director. The new policy is the result of meetings during which the entire domestic and international film production and distribution situations were surveyed.

The Warner backlog, comprises 19 films.

On his return to New York, Kalmenson will begin work on the new plan to bring an increasing number of Warner releases into domestic distribution.

Cohen, who has just returned from a comprehensive tour of the company's Latin-American and Australian offices, stated the increased number of releases will enable his organization to satisfy postwar requirements in those countries which are planning construction of new theatres and new developments in circuit operations.

Blumenstock and Evelove will outline preliminary plans for their publicity and advertising operations, which will permit them to encompass the greater number of campaigns for the greater number of Warner releases.

"We must be alert to the increased opportunities for the motion picture industry in this fast-moving postwar world," Harry Warner told his executives. "The public insistence on the best in all fields must be satisfied NOW . . . We must not follow the line of least resistance and depend on what we have in a backlog, whether that backlog comprises production talent or the motion pictures themselves. It is our aim to bring to the public the best of our product as soon as the best and most effective system for its distribution can be set up by our organization. . . ."

Jack Warner told the executives that the increasing tempo of releases during the next few months will be matched at the Burbank studios by increased production.

Now being produced and aimed at early release are: "Humoresque," starring Joan Crawford and John Garfield; "Two Guys From Milwaukee," starring Dennis Morgan, Joan Leslie, Jack Carson and Janis Paige; "Escape Me Never," starring Errol Flynn, Ida Lupino, Eleanor Parker and Gig Young; "The Sentence," starring Ann Sheridan with Kent Smith, Robert Alda and Bruce Bennett in the male leads, and "The Beast With Five Fingers," starring Alda, Miss King and Lorre, with J. Carrol Naish and Victor Francen.

The stories now in preparation for the shooting stages number forty.

Brochure Traces Warner Company History

In the first report of its kind ever presented by a motion picture company to its stockholders, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., has just issued "A Financial Review and Brief History," a 44-page brochure giving a comprehensive outline of the company's growth from a small producing firm to its present-day position in the film industry as a major producer, distributor and exhibitor.

The history also traces the financial progress of the organization and its accomplishment in the reduction of funded debt and other obligations by $107,475,000, as well as the refinancing of $37,000,000 of long-term debt arranged in the past year.

Incorporation of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc., took place on April 4, 1923, at which time the company took over the motion picture business owned and operated as a partnership by Harry M., Albert, Sam and Jack L. Warner. With funds obtained by public financing following the incorporation, the company acquired new studios, the one-time famous Vitagraph plant, as well as a nationwide branch office system for the distribution of its product. Later the company expanded into the theatre field, creating its own circuit which now numbers nearly 500 theatres.

Also included in the booklet are schedules showing gross income and net profit from 1924 to date, annual interest and depreciation charges, condensed balance sheet data, motion picture theatre properties, film exchanges here and abroad, music company properties, stars under contract, and other informative data.

Anti-Trust Case Reaches Final Phase in Court

consent decree unless it found new wrongs brought about by new conditions. This, he said, could not and had not been proved. He declared that none, even the U. S., had accused the defendants of a lack of business acumen, but pointed out their combined receipts from all sources were $460 million in 1945 against $900,000,000 more from other sources by other distributors. "If we wanted to suppress competition we have done an awfully bad job," Proskauer stated.

First of the "Little Three" attorneys to speak was Louis D. Frohlich, representing Columbia, who pleaded for the maintenance of block-booking, without which none of the non-theatre owning companies could survive, he stated. "I am fighting for the life and very existence of my company," he told the court. He explained block-booking to the court as being necessary because without a set return for a season's product guaranteed, no small producer could take the risks of production involved. He cited figures showing Columbia's last year's gross to be $16 million with its profit only $2 million and said that if the court wanted to destroy all minor companies and really create a monopoly for the big five, it would abolish block-booking and put the smaller companies out of business.

At the conclusion of defense testimony, the Court extended the life of the AAA Appeals Board until such time as a decision in the case is made. In rebuttal, Wright challenged defense's oral arguments point by point.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Behind Green Lights

20th Century-Fox Drama 64 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: Fairly entertaining melodrama with a few good laughs and some in the wrong places. Should prove satisfactory to the murder and detective story fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable for double-bill situations only. Might be coupled with another detective or mystery thriller for an "all-mystery" exploitation possibility. Too weak to stand alone.

Plot: Carole Landis is questioned by detective lieutenant William Gargan in the murder of notorious gangster Bernerd Nedell. Under pressure from sources who wish to discredit Miss Landis' father in his race for election as mayor, Gargan is tempted to book Miss Landis, but does not do so. Events prove that Nedell was not killed by shooting, as had first been supposed, but by poisoning. The body disappears, turns up mysteriously in various places, and the real murderer is brought to light.

Comment: This artificially contrived drama nevertheless maintains a modicum of interest throughout most of the action, due to the fact that the real murderer does not come under suspicion until the closing moments of the film. The story is slightly ridiculous, with the characterizations of everyone in the film except Miss Landis and Gargan badly acted and ineptly directed. The production values and photography are good. "Behind Green Lights" will fill any double bill, however, fairly satisfactorily, particularly if audiences do not demand too much plausibility.

Tomorrow Is Forever

RKO Radio Drama 104 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: Excellent dramatic and emotional screen fare that will attract the women and entertain the men who enjoy unusually good dramatic fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Name draw and excellence of production should make it one of the tops for the season.

Cast: Claudette Colbert, Orson Welles, George Brent, Lucile Watson, Richard Long, Natalie Wood, Joyce MacKenzie, Sonny Howe, Michael Ward, John Wengraf, Douglas Wood, Ian Wolfe, Tom Wirick, Lane Watson, Henry Hastings. Credits: Produced by David Lewis. Directed by Irving Pichel. Screenplay by Lenore Coffee, from the novel by Gwen Bristow. Music score composed and conducted by Max Steiner. Photography, Joseph Valentine.

Plot: Believing her husband to have been killed in World War I, a young woman remarries. Twenty years later, the supposedly dead husband returns to America, only to discover that he has a son and that his wife has remarried. Keeping his secret from everyone, he helps the boy to enlist and it is not until after his death that his identity is revealed.

Comment: "A Great Drama of Our Time," a phrase used by the studio in describing this film, is a very apt and descriptive one. For "Tomorrow Is Forever" is a tense, absorbing romantic drama whose screenplay has been expertly contrived by Lenore Coffee from a novel by Gwen Bristow, two women who show their rare understanding of such a great love by the exceptional handling of the theme. Essentially it is a woman's picture, for few men can comprehend complicated feminine mechanism that makes a woman remember a love that dates back twenty years, in spite of the intervening years of happiness. But for their entertainment and enjoyment, even the men will find it unusually good dramatic fare. Although a lengthy production, it succeeds admirably in holding its audience intensely interested from beginning to end. There is a steadily mounting emotional suspense that does not loosen its grip until the final scene, an attribute that attests firmly to Irving Pichel's masterful direction. In the leading role, Claudette Colbert gives a natural, human interpretation that rings true with sincerity and warmth; the kind of performance that one would expect from such a splendid actress. With the aid of expert makeup, Orson Welles becomes the crippled chemist he's supposed to be, and he once again evinces a flair for taking in his versatile stride an assignment that would sorely tax the abilities of a less talented performer. As the third member of the triangle, George Brent gives another of his fine performances, while newcomer Natalie Woods, as a six-year-old refugee, practically steals every scene she's in. Good also is newcomer Richard Long, Lucile Watson, Sonny Howe and Joyce MacKenzie. The producers have paid the strictest attention to authenticity, both in styles and settings, and the musical score by Max Steiner and photography by Joseph Valentine are also worthy of special mention.

Shock

20th Century-Fox Drama 70 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Should please the suspense addicts and those who like the so-called psychological dramas. This has both, with a couple of murders thrown in.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Not strong enough to stand alone. Good, however, as the leader in double-bill situations.

Cast: Vincent Price, Lynn Bari, Frank Latimore, Anabel Shaw, Michael Dunne, Reed Hadley, Renee Carson, Charles Trowbridge, John Davidson, Selmer Jackson, Pierre Watkin, Mary Young, Cecil Weston, Charles Tannen. Credits: Directed by Alfred Werker. Produced by Aubrey Schenck. Screenplay by Eugene Ling based on a story by Albert deMond. Additional dialog by Martin Berkeley. Photography, Glenn MacWilliams and Joe MacDonald.

Plot: Anabel Shaw, in a highly nervous condition due to the fact that her husband, Lt. Frank Latimore, has been missing in action for two years, is about to meet him in a hotel. His plane is late, however, and the girl's nervous condition becomes worse. She hears a loud argument between a man (Vincent Price) and his wife in an adjoining apartment and can see the man from her own balcony. She sees him kill his wife with a heavy candlestick and goes into a deep shock in which her husband finds her the next morning. She is taken to a private sanitarium and discovers that the doctor who is treating her is Vincent Price who committed the murder. His knowledge of psychiatry is used in an attempt to drive her crazy. Latimore enlists the aid of another doctor, however, and she is cured, while Price is arrested for murder.

Comment: Whether or not the story of "Shock" is plausible must be left to the medical men, but as far as motion picture reproduction is concerned it does not ring true. It is well acted, well directed and well produced and has its moments of stark terror, but as a whole it does not live up to the careful treatment it has been given. Vincent Price is a suave, restrained psychiatrist, even when he is in the act of administering the drug intended to kill Anabel Shaw so that she cannot testify against him and Lynn Bari, who also is implicated in the murder of Price's wife. Miss Bari is beautiful and properly menacing as the cold-blooded nurse who schemes with Price in the attempted murder of the only one who stands between them and the future. Frank Latimore's interpretation of the young officer husband is fair enough, but the part is so badly written as to convince audiences that he is either just pain stupid or just taken in by the bare-faced conspiracy. He is utterly unconvincing. Miss Shaw is excellent as the distraught young wife whose illness is caused by a mounting series of nerve-racking events. For those whose demands for plausibility are not too emphatic, "Shock" will provide good entertainment. Others will view it with a measure of toleration.

Breakfast in Hollywood

United Artists Comedy-Drama 93 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) This delightfully entertaining comedy-drama-with-music should find widespread favor. Based on Tom Breneman's famous radio program, it is an excellent job of screen adaptation.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: On its own merits, it should score a success. With the popularity of the radio show behind it, there is every reason to predict a long and profitable career.

Cast: Tom Breneman, Bonita Granville, Beulah Bondi, Edward Ryan, Raymond Walburn, Billie Burke, Zasu Pitts, Hedda Hopper, Andy Russell (as guest star), Spike Jones and His City Slickers, King Cole Trio. Credits: Presented by Golden Pictures. Produced by Robert S. Golden. Directed by Harold Schuster. Original story and screenplay by Earl W. Baldwin. Photography, Russell Metty. Production designed by William Flannery. Musical supervision and direction, Nat W. Finston. Songs by Lou Alter, Marla Shelton, Nat "King" Cole, Bob Levinson, Howard Leeds, Spike Jones and Jack Elliott.

Plot: Among those attending Tom Breneman's Breakfast in Hollywood radio program are Bonita Granville, who becomes involved in a romance with discharged sailor Edward Ryan; plain, modest Billie Burke, whose husband, Raymond Walburn, is a philanderer until she wins a beauty kit and has a permanent wave; eccentric Zasu Pitts, who strives to win Breneman's screwy hat contests, and Beulah Bondi, a kind-hearted elderly woman whose will to live is inspired by the lovers' quarrel between Bonita and Edward. Episodes in these people's lives are shown, with Breneman playing a good-neighbor role, especially in bringing the young lovers together.

Comment: Producing a picture based on a radio show is a risky business which does not too often succeed. In bringing to the screen a film based on Tom Breneman's Breakfast in Hollywood radio program, Golden Pictures has done the job remarkably well. "Breakfast in Hollywood" emerges as a delightfully entertaining comedy-drama-with-music that should find widespread favor. The manner of the presentation, the well-contrived screenplay by Earl Baldwin, the natural, down-to-earth performences of the principals and the commendable job of editing all combine to make this picture a refreshing screen experience. There are no lavish musical spectacles, no elaborate settings; the production budget does not appear to have reached too high a figure. Yet it is these factors, along with the attributes already noted, that make "Breakfast in Hollywood" a darn good date-night movie, one that should score heavily everywhere, not only because of the nationwide popularity of the radio program, but also because of the film's own entertainment merits. Song and musical numbers are well spotted, and the mixture of plots within a plot is intelligently handled and easy to follow. Last but not least, Tom Breneman, who makes his screen debut, is as natural and at ease before the camera as any veteran Hollywood trouper. Producer Robert M. Golden and his associates including Director Harold Schuster, deserve credit, not for a colossal, gigantic masterpiece, but for a delightfully enjoyable motion picture that's certain to win the plaudits of the masses who lay the money on the line at theatre box-offices.

The Shadow Returns

Monogram Mystery 61 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A new series, built around radio's "The Shadow," for the entertainment of the armchair detectives and mystery fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will give satisfactory support where mysteries are popular. Has a large advance following because of the radio program and detective fiction of the same name.

Cast: Kane Richmond, Barbara Reed, Tom Dugan, Joseph Crehan, Pierre Watkin, Robert E. Keane, Frank Reicher, Lester Dorr, Rebel Randall, Emmett Vogan, Sherry Hall, Cyril Delevanti. Credits: Produced by Joe Kaufman. Directed by Phil Rosen. Photography, William Sickner.

Plot: The Shadow makes his appearance when the police are called in to solve the mystery of the disappearance of a man who got permission to open a grave and take some jewels out. There are four murders, all committed under strange circumstances, before the Shadow, his girl friend, and his man Friday solve the mystery. The police take credit for the solution, never learning the identity of the Shadow.

Comment: While the plot and sequence of events in this film are slightly confusing in the opening scenes, proceedings are cleared up quickly enough, as the story unfolds, to make this a good offering for the armchair detectives and mystery fans. It's the first of a series Monogram is planning around "The Shadow" character, one well known to radio listeners and readers of detective fiction, which gives it a tremendous amount of advance draw in the neighborhoods where mystery fare has a following. And, even though a mystery, it is presented in a light enough vein to make it worthy entertainment for many other theatregoers. Kane Richmond handles the leading role satisfactorily and Barbara Reed does well as his fiance and general helper. Whatever comedy the picture carries is due to Tom Dugan's capable handling of his role as Richmond's man Friday. Joseph Crehan and Pierre Watkin make the most of their "police" assignments. Phil Rosen directed and Joe Kaufman produced.

The Flying Serpent

PRC Horror 58 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Average horror picture for the fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will serve adequately as a filler.

Cast: George Zucco, Ralph Lewis, Hope Kramer, Eddie Acuff, Wheaton Chambers, James Metcalf, Henry Hall, Milton Kibbee, Budd Buster, Terry Frost. Credits: Produced by Sigmund Neufeld. Directed by Sherman Scott. Screenplay and original story by John T. Neville. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh.

Plot: A professor discovers the fabulous treasure of the Aztec emperor, Montezuma, and with the treasure he finds a feathered flying serpent, which the professor keeps in a cage. The serpent will kill anyone who possesses one of its feathers. Several murders are committeed in this manner by the man and the serpent until a young radio announcer unravels the evidence and saves the day for all.

Comment: This will prove adequate as a filler on a bill that can use a horror film for the secondary spot. There is little scariness about the entire proceedings, but there are several murders and the mysterious doings of a mad scientist to sustain the interest and make the less discriminating of audiences feel that it has something that might be termed entertainment for their enjoyment. George Zucco plays the scientist; Ralph Lewis, a writer who finally corners the man, and Hope Kramer the feminine interest. Others in the cast who do satisfactorily are Eddie Acuff, James Metcalf and Terry Frost. Directed by Sherman Scott; produced by Sigmund Neufeld.

Wagon Wheels Westward

Rep. Western 57 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) A first class show for the followerrs of the Red Ryder series and all other lovers of Western fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: One of the best of the series.

Cast: Bill Elliott, Bobby Blake, Alice Fleming, Linda Stirling, Roy Barcroft, Emmett, Lynn, Dick Curtis, Jay Kirby, George J. Lewis, Bud Geary, Tom London, Kenne Duncan, George Chesebro. Credits: Produced by Sidney Picker. Directed by R. G. Springsteen. Original story by Gerald Geraghty, based on Fred Harman's NEA newspaper strip. Screenplay by Earle Snell. Director of Photography, William Bradford.

Plot: Bill Elliott, heading a wagon train of settlers, arrives at a town called Desert Springs, where they decide to settle down. They find the place deserted, and learn from the man posing as a land agent and leading citizen that most of the citizens have gone into the hills, following a trail of gold. Eventually Elliott discovered that the man is really head of a gang of crooks planning to steal the land, and that he started the fake gold rush. The crooks are disposed of and the honest citizens get their land back.

Comment: Like most of the Red Ryder pictures Republic has been turning out, this western has all the gunplay, hard-riding, and fistfights that make the series such popular fare with the kids and the adults who like outdoor action shows. And no wonder they enjoy them, for Bill Elliott is so smooth and expert in his role of 'Red Ryder" that one forgets that he's anything but, and the entertainment comes from going right along with all the action and excitement. Bobby Blake and Alice Fleming, as Little Beaver and the Duchess, help considerably with all the proceedings, and Linda Stirling and Jay Kirby provide the romantic interest. For pure cussedness, Roy Barcroft does a satisfactory job, assisted by Bud Geary, George Chesebro and several other unsavory characters. Production credit goes to Sidney Picker and R. G. Springsteen gave it the fast-paced direction the followers want.

Southern Gentleman

One day recently while Cyril Mee, manager of the State Theatre, Harrissonburg, Va., was eating in his favorite restaurant, the proprietor related an incident about a man who came in asked for an oyster carton. The balcony of the State had just been painted, the man explained, and he didn't want "to spit his tobacco juice on the newly painted floor."

Sensation Hunters

Mono. Drama 62 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Story about the girl-gone-wrong, that might interest the less discriminating and pulp magazine readers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Minor offering.

Cast: Robert Lowery, Doris Merrick, Eddie Quillan, Constance Worth, Isabel Jewell, Wanda McKay, Nestor Paiva, Byron Folger, Vince Barnett, Minerva Urecal. Credits: Produced by Joseph Kaufman. Directed by Christy Cabanne. Screenplay by Dennis Cooper, from original story by John Faxon. Director of Photography, Ira Morgan.

Plot: A young factory girl, dissatisfied at home, goes to a night-club with a chance acquaintance. There she is disgraced in a gambling raid and is thrown out of her home. She gets work in a low-class night club, becomes hard and bitter, and eventually shoots the ne'er-do-well gambler with whom she has fallen in love. Before he dies, he kills her with the same gun.

Comment: Here is a minor offering that can be used as a filler in the small town and subsequent houses. It has a trite story with nothing in its presentation to make it worthy of any special notice, except that the title "Sensation Hunters" will have a certain amount of draw. Doris Merrick plays the girl-gone-wrong and Robert Lowery the heel-who-brought-it-all-about. In supporting parts are Constance Worth, Nestor Paiva, Isabell Jewell and Wanda McKay. Direction was by Christy Cabanne and production by Joseph Kaufman.

First Canadian Postwar 16-mm. Projector Demonstrated in Ontario

The first Canadian-manufactured 16-mm. projector was demonstrated last week at the screening room of the Canadian Motion Sound Company, Leaside, Ont. Projector and speaker are mounted together when not in use, forming one carrying case. Most advantageous feature of the assembly is that it weighs only 40 pounds, about half the weight of most equipment now made.

Exclusive features, include, improved forced air cooling, three-unit construction which aids in servicing and other minor but simplifying modifications. The projector operates on either 25 or 60 cycle power, sound or silent, and the sound equipment can be utilized as a public address system.

German Sound Patents Now Available on Royalty-Free Basis

The German "Stereophone" method of recording sound on film is now available to all American citizens on a royalty-free, non-exclusive basis, Alien Property Custodian Markham announced last week. Markham added that the system is reportedly superior, giving excellent three-channel reproduction of great dynamic range at a very low noise level. Five United States patents, title to which has been seized by the Alien Property Custodian, are involved.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management

You're BIG, So Think BIG Mr. Manager

By Jack Jackson

In this provocative discussion the author of an exclusive series for this publication drives home the value to the manager of "taking stock" of his theatre and appraising it at its true value and significance to the community. The result of such true evaluation of the importance of the theatre and the pictures it shows is increased enthusiasm which will manifest itself in the prestige which the manager will enjoy in his city or town.

Just how BIG can you think, Mr. Theatreman?

Just how BIG can you feel about your theatre; its attractions; its service to the people of your community?

While most theatremen think pretty well of themselves, they seem to be reticent about letting anybody other than their wives and employes know of their self-satisfaction. At the meetings of the civic clubs, in conversations with the newspaper editors, at the Chamber of Commerce dinners, at church gatherings, etc. it is invariably the druggist or the department store owner who is stealing the spotlight as a progressive town benefactor whose enterprise deserves lauding from the housetops. The theatreman is usually allowing himself and his business to be taken for granted, and his effort in community advancement accepted or rejected without argument or complaint.

Talking About Service

Personally I've read notices in the New York papers about new displays in the windows of Fifth Avenue department stores. I've listened to a small town druggist exhort at length about new display fixtures and I've been visiting with an editor when a grocer crashed into the office and fairly raved about his new service of three deliveries a day. None of these things were equal in importance—or equal in cost—to the new front displays at the New York Paramount, Roxy or Strand; the hanging drapes, carpets or rest room service units at the local Rialto, or with the day-to-day-hour-to-hour service at any theatre anywhere. But the enthusiasm of the fellows who talked to the editors and to the business men's meeting was not to be denied, and readers and listeners alike were impressed with the service the concerns were giving.

A Case in Mind

By contrast let me tell you of a personal experience a couple of days ago.

I had hired a couple of top-rung European entertainers on short notice to appear at one of the theatres under my jurisdiction. They had just finished an engagement at one of the really "class" hotels of the state and had brought scenery, wardrobe, press books, lobby displays and everything else to authenticate their claims as rated artists. I had to call the manager's attention to the possibility of newspaper publicity and then stood in his office while he called a critic—a good newspaperman who is inclined to "go along" on any pretense and willing to go "all out" for attractions of merit. Well, the manager was exceptionally modest in his claims about the act. Said he, "They have some very nice photographs" and "they say they have appeared in Europe" and "This man seems to know his business and I'd like to have you spare the time for an interview." Needless to say he did not get a picture in the paper. He did get an interview with the critic, but one could know before even reading it, the see-it-if-you-want-to-at-your-own-risk notice that resulted.

To me such lack of enthusiasm about anything that happens in the theatre is downright sabotage. That manager is unconsciously doing his very damndest to keep business away from his theatre. And, feeling doubly sure that his many counterparts will read this article and never arrive at the conclusion that I am talking about them, I'm going to be a bit more specific.

If there is any place on the face of the earth where ego of the most flagrant order can

Try This Tieup for 'Daily' Cooperation

With the priority considerably taken off the paper shortage, newspapers are again considering expansion on lineage and print. What more opportune time than now for alert showmen to take advantage of a cooperative tieup with a well circulated daily? Added news space for your theatre attractions never hurt the box-office and with a little extra effort, the tieup suggested here will bring in more than its share of revenue.

Here are the details: The newspaper distributes a liberal amount of double patron theatre guest tickets, which you supply, to various persons whose names appear hidden among the classified ads. These names are chosen at random from the local telephone directory. Through this, extra want-ad reader interest is induced, which in turn heightens want-ad sales space for the paper—which is your selling point for the tieup.

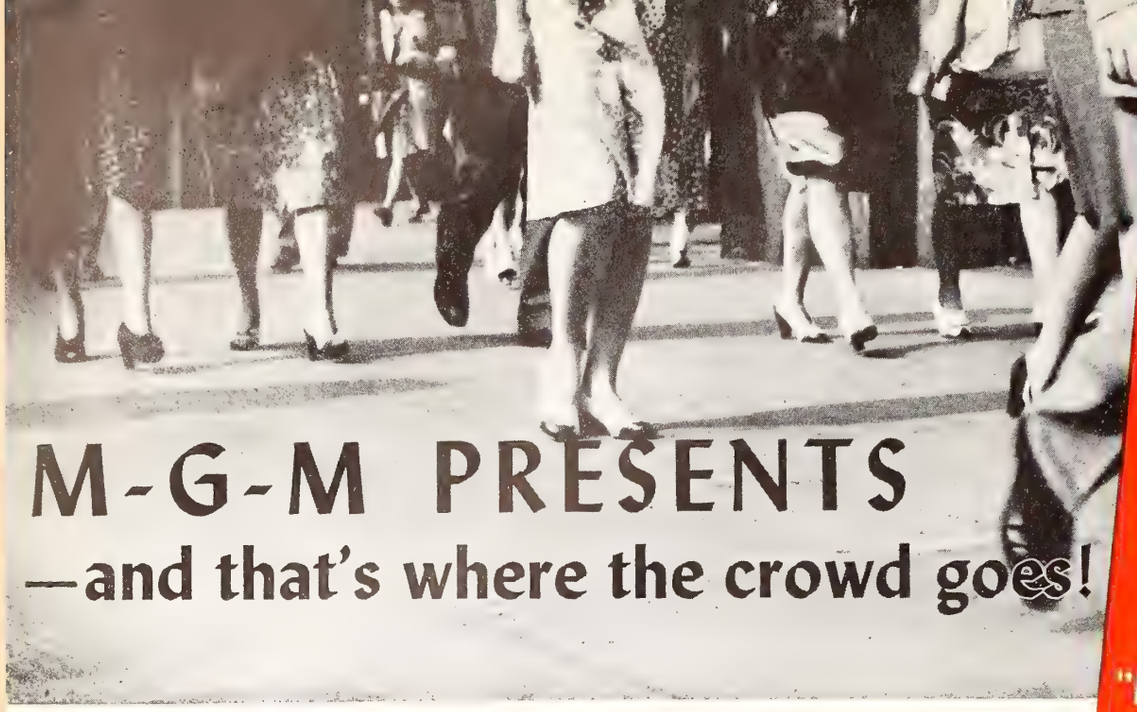
Display Ads for You

In return, the following should be promoted from the paper: large display ads which notify readers of the names hidden in the classified section. You should supply star heads and mats for these ads, which should contain theatre, picture and playdate credits. Secondly, eye-catching front-page boxes referring readers to the proper pages inside for details, plus scattered teaser ads to create interest in the stunt. Lastly, posters and banners on delivery trucks and on all newstands.

Because of the extra material in the display ads, individual shows are advertised to a greater advantage than ever before. Also, due to the fact that the newspaper is giving away the tickets, it can be persuaded to give more than the usual amount of publicity on its amusement page.

Theatremen should note that tickets offered to the public are referred to as "guest tickets" and not "free tickets." That which is offered free is not much good; that which is offered to a guest is the best.

Appoint Floor Sound Monitor



Someone in every theatre should be assigned to notify the booth for increased or decreased sound volume in accordance with the number of persons in the theatre at any one time. Nothing annoys a patron more than not being able to hear whispered dialog with the possible exception of nearly being blasted out of his seat by too great a volume of sound.

About Your Ads

The guy who said, "Don't fall in love with one of your own ads until you see it in the paper," really said something and he meant simply this: No ad is a good ad unless it stands out sufficiently on a newspaper page in competition with other ads, so that it attracts eye attention. By studying page make-up, the styles of ads most usually used in your town, whether they have lots of black or not, etc., you usually can devise an ad of your own that will stand out by contrast. Large space is NOT the first essential to topping the other guy's ads. Remember that.

Leading Dignitaries at 'Expendable' Premiere

The nation's leading officials and military personnel were present at the recent premiere of MGM's "They Were Expendable" at Loew's Capitol, Washington, D. C., held in conjunction with a high-powered four-day program sponsored by the War Finance Division's Motion Pictures and Special Events Section.

Among the leading dignitaries who attended a reception preceding the premiere were Chief of Naval Operations Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz; General and Mrs. A. A. Vandegrift; Vice Admiral and Mrs. E. L. Cochrane; Vice Admiral and Mrs. Aubrey W. Fitch and Vice Admiral and Mrs. Marc A. Mitscher. Robert Montgomery and Donna Reed, stars of the film, also were present at the stage ceremonies for the premiere, with Howard Dietz, MGM vice-president and director of advertising and publicity, as master of ceremonies.

Highlights of the campaign staged in connection with the opening were the public exhibition of PT boats, captured Japanese equipment and booby traps; a luncheon aboard PT boats for press and radio representatives; a display of battleship signal lights from theatre marquee, and display of thousands of cards.

'Lost Weekend' Screenings Held

Screenings of Paramount's "The Lost Weekend" were held January 8 and 9 in Philadelphia prior to the opening of the film at the Boyd Theatre on January 16. In attendance were principals of colleges, grammar and high schools, and other educators; psychiatrists and members of the medical profession; members of the Judiciary and welfare departments, and others.

BUILDS MATINEE. Edward May, Rosetta Theatre, Miami, evidently believes that anything worth showing is worth selling, as evidenced by this lobby set-piece used to advertise his young amateur stars who appear on the theatre stage Saturday matinees. Youngsters are called "Stars Of Tomorrow" and are proving popular with the juvenile matinee trade.

CATCH THE PIG! Large crowds were attracted to a greased Pig Chase conducted by Jack Alger, publicity director of the two Majestic theatres in LaSalle and Peru, Ill., as the highlight of a top campaign to publicize "State Fair." Jay Frank, 20th-Fox exploiteer, assisted in arrangements for the campaign which also included 20 tieups with department stores, music and record shops, free want-ads in newspaper classified sections, etc.

Advance Plugs Sell 'St. Mary's' for Sorkin

Tremendous advance publicity highlighted the advertising and exploitation campaign staged by Manager S. L. Sorkin, of RKO Keith's Theatre, Washington, D. C., for his showing of "The Bells of St. Mary's." Coupled with a teaser advertising campaign in the capital's newspapers which ran ten days before the film opened, Sorkin also ran a trailer on his screen five days prior to the opening.

Radio was well utilized with 15-minute programs on the four major networks, in addition to extra plugs and spots.

Handsome window tieups were arranged with local leading department store, including a special display in the music branch.

Sorkin beautified his theatre front and lobby by trimming them with bells. Attractive lobby posters, the first one being displayed a full two months in advance of the opening, with subsequent frames added from time to time, keyed up interest in the film.—WA.

Three Men Added to Paramount's Advertising and Publicity Staff

Fred Goldberg and Joseph Callahan have been added to Paramount's home office staff, under the supervision of Alec Moss, exploitation manager, it was announced by Curtis Mitchell, national director of advertising and publicity.

Richard M. Halsey has been added to Publicity Manager Al Wilkie's staff in a research capacity.

Music House to Plug UA Film

Mills Music Company, publisher of Who's Sorry Now, the popular song hit written in 1923 which is being revived in "A Night in Casablanca," is planning a nation-wide exploitation campaign timed to the United Artists release in April of the David L. Loew picture starring the Marx Brothers. The song has sold more than 150,000 sheet music copies.

Big Detroit Campaign Exploits 'Spellbound'

Large amounts of newspaper linage, a well-publicized contest, more than two dozen window tieups and several radio spot announcements featured the Detroit exploitation campaign on United Artists' "Spellbound" at the State Theatre. The completely varied four-pronged attack took the automobile city by storm and ended up in a whirlwind at the box-office.

With restrictions on newsprint practically a thing of the past, a maximum amount of newspaper linage was employed in three Detroit papers beginning the Sunday ahead of playdate, and in addition stories and art in the amusement sections, fashion pages and news sections gave added publicity to the cast and film.

A "Miss Spellbound" contest, designed to select Detroit's most charming, attractive and intelligent girl, was responsible for many breaks in the news sections. Judging the contest were John Coppin, noted Detroit artist; Vincent Gage, associate editor of the Debutante Register and Dick Satterfield and Ted Baldwin of the Selznick Studio.

Eight leading women's shops used cooperative ads promoting their merchandise with the "Spellbound" tag.

Zenith Hearing Aids employed window tieups in 12 of their outlets, and attractive book displays at other shops did much to help the campaign. An ornamented ski display at a popular sport shop, set up three days prior to the opening, attracted considerable attention.

Spot announcements on WXYA, WXYZ and CKLW were used extensively.

Street car dashboards on all main lines also did much to keep the city "Spellbound"-conscious.

JUST LIKE LINDA. This eye-catching live lobby display was used at the Wisconsin Theatre, Milwaukee, to sell 20th-Fox's "Fallen Angel." Exhibitors who have played the picture will recognize the lobby display as almost an exact duplication of one of its scenes. Needless to say, the display created more than a little talk. The stunt was arranged by Jack Starnation, theatre's publicity director. The girl represented the local Linda Darnell.

Teen-Agers Held Potent Box-Office Material

Activities That Increased Youth Patronage Cited as Alert, Modern Showmanship

With kiddie shows and apropos features designed for those who are under 13, and special adult entertainment for those over 21 what of the neglected youth element between those ages? Are they being overlooked?

Teen-agers, a movie gold mine of today, with proper care, handling and proffering of sincere goodwill can be molded into the much desired future theatre audience of tomorrow. Many present-day popular stars owe a great deal of their prestige to the bobby-sockers, as witness the phenomenal rise of Sinatra, Harry James, Van Johnson, Gene Autry and Roy Rogers. In addition to this, a huge percentage of the numerous motion picture magazine readers are youngsters, all of which makes for excellent future theatre patron potential. All one has to do is look at these facts objectively to realize why this youth group must be catered to and never neglected.

It is the alert, trend-following theatreman who, upon booking typical teen-age fare such as "Kiss and Tell," "Snafu," "Janie," "Junior Miss," "Too Young to Know" and other such films, directs his efforts towards selling the picture their way. For, according to information received by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW, recent campaigns aimed toward the bobby-sock trade have inevitably brought out a minor tidal wave at the box-office, and have done much to make the youngsters a consistent part of the movie-going legion.

For those theatre operators who see in this trend more than meets the eye, and who desire stimulating ideas on the subject, the following fundamental ideas are presented to be enlarged upon or changed to suit local conditions.

The town's local high school should be the logical target of much of the theatre's exploitative explosions. Take the recent case of a showman who decided to let a group of school youths preview a film. By contacting the school's superintendent, he was allowed to discuss the picture and his plans with the presidents and officers of the school's clubs, classes and after-school-organizations. After passing out invitations to the advance showing (which impressed the young leaders no end), he told them that he wanted to build the reputation of a youthful new star in the film, and that their comments on preview cards would more than aid in the build-up. The kids felt a responsibility and of course outdid themselves. Not only did this junior preview innovation grab off plenty of news space, but the word-of-mouth publicity was terrific, or as the manager put it, "Those kids did more than any Woman's Club (with all due respect to them) could ever do." The manager built up a lot of goodwill with the kids, their parents and the school heads, and paved the way for additional promotional ventures in the future.

Much free and valuable publicity can be garnered by contacting the high school newspaper. For Columbia's "Snafu," an exhibitor working directly with the paper's editor, could promote a contest whereby double patron theatre guest tickets (so the boy-friend could take the girl-friend and vice-versa) would be rewarded to those contestants submitting the best articles on "The Greatest 'Snafu' in My Life." The school paper is sure to give it a big play and the contest should enjoy a rollicking success, with a good possibility of the town's local gazette picking up the winner's story for an extra break. The exhibitor's contacts with the school paper's editor and feature writers can more than help put this campaign on the black side of the ledger.

By collaborating with the school officers of the sophomore, junior and senior classes, a manager can arrange to plug his film conveniently and at the same time create acres of goodwill by a tie-in with one of the many scholastic dances. A most recent example of this type of tieup was in a campaign for the showing of a popular teen-age production. Through the school's newspaper and banners around the building, the manager announced that he was offering 10 individual pairs of ducats to those girls most representative of the town's 'junior deb' at the next dance, which tied-in with the forthcoming picture. The stunt succeeded because of the work and cooperation given by school kid officers who officiated at the dance contest. In this case, photos and stories about the girls were featured in local tabloids for nice breaks, which added attractive totals to box-office grosses.

Another effective effort was putting a soda bar in the theatre lobby to hypo teen-age goodwill and patronage. A weekly dance was featured at the house for members of a nearby high school. The lounge accommodated only 80 persons, so each week 40 students would draw for the opportunity of attending. One week the girls would draw and choose their partners from the boys; the next week the boys would do likewise, and the juke box played merrily on. This smart showman soon intends installing live entertainment to please his younger friends, which isn't a bad way to insure future audiences.

Exploitation methods should not halt with the school, for outside business tieups leaning on the youth angle also fall into the profitable-goodwill-publicity class, too. A suggested tieup could possibly operate along the ensuing lines. For example, concurrent with the showing of Columbia's "Kiss and Tell," the management might contact a leading department store and arrange a "Shirley Temple Slipper Contest." The store would advertise in windows and newspaper ads, together with theatre and playdate credit, the presentation of a pair of expensive shoes to the first teen-ager who entered the department store and whose foot was the same size as Shirley Temple's. The theatre could give guest tickets to the child and her family. The merchant would probably find that the crowd of youths, most of whom would be escorted by parents, would flood the store, heightening buyer interest, and more than compensate for the initial expense.

Another important interest-creating factor to be enlisted during any film selling campaign is that of a teen-age clothing fashion spread. Young kids will go out of their way to copy and imitate the new and novel clothing fashions worn by their favorite teen-age movie starlets or stars. Exhibitors could get in touch with local department stores and have them create "Special Teen-age Wardrobes" along the lines of the clothes worn by the starlet, and then tiein the picture with the department store's windows and news ads. Another slant on this idea is a fashion folder, with photographs of teen-age stars and models in various figures of up-to-date dress. This booklet can be put out collectively by clothing merchants, with the theatre supplying mats of stars, dates of pictures, etc. Out-of-the-ordinary mailing lists may be obtained by special contact with proper school officials, so that the youngsters whom these fashions concern may receive them direct.

These are just a few of the angles that can start the teen-age youth movement to the box-office. Theatremen who may have neglected this important movie-going element would do well now to begin currying its favor as the soon-to-be adult patrons of tomorrow—with tomorrow not so very far away.

Name Baby After Film Character

Acclaim as Canada's youngest pin-up admirer has fallen to the young baby daughter of a farming couple, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Cundle of Blenheim, a hamlet in Western Ontario, as the result of a group of events which began even before the child's birth.

While the baby was on the way, the Cundles' went to the Center Theatre in Chatham to see Warners' "Old Acquaintance" and were so pleased with the performance of Dolores Moran in the role of 'Deirdre' that they asked Manager Frank E. Reid for more information about the star. Glenn Ireton, public relations manager of Canadian Warner Brothers in Toronto, learned of the incident when Reid wrote to him for more information. Meanwhile, the parents-to-be decided on the name for their offspring and in due time the baby was born and arrangements for the christening followed.

Ireton was notified and decided to "stand up" with Reid and another Chatham Theatre manager, Harold S. King, for the ceremony. They bucked miles of snowdrift and finally their automobile became stalled in the snow and Papa Cundle had to come to their assistance with his farm tractor. The baby was named Charlene Deirdre Cundle.

BULKELEY HONORED. In connection with the recent showing of MGM's "They Were Expendable" at Loew's Theatre in Reading, Pa., Commander John D. Bulkeley, the Navy's most decorated officer, appeared in person and was honored at a cocktail party held at the Berkshire Hotel. Commander Bulkeley (right) is shown here with Paul Schaeffer, chairman of the Berks County War Finance Committee, and Larry Levy, manager of Loew's. Much newspaper publicity resulted from the personal appearance.

Bulkeley Appears in Connection With 'Expendable' Openings

Navy Commander John D. Bulkeley, who commanded the PT boat which took General Douglas MacArthur out of the Philippines, has made a series of visits to Baltimore, Richmond and Harrisburg in conjunction with openings of "They Were Expendable."

Bulkeley called on governors, mayors and other leading officials in the cities he visited and drew front page newspaper stories. He was accompanied on his tour by Tom Baldrige, MGM field exploitation representative stationed in Washington.

Money Dates for February

If moviegoing has been somewhat spasmodic during January because potential patrons were paying their Christmas bills, there should be something of an improvement in February. The month presents much in the way of patriotic and commercial observance. Theatremen can build extra profits by taking advantage of these observances, most of which are national in character, and making them colorful local events. No time should be lost in contacting interested merchants, school authorities and organizations that may be prevailed upon to take part in observance of the various occasions. And, of course, arrangements should be made with newspapers and radio stations for cooperation. Keep your theatre in the limelight of all activity during the month. This, plus your customary exploitation activities, should produce a short (only 28 days) but profitable month.

National Observance Periods:

Feb. 3-9—NATIONAL DRAMA WEEK. Contact the high school dramatic teachers, local drama leagues and private elocution and dramatic teachers. Have them either arrange for individual presentation of their prize groups or pupils or combine their efforts into a special stage presentation. The newspapers and radio stations will lend their assistance to making the event successful. Arranging to give a portion of the receipts from the evening of the final presentation to a deserving local charity should give the occasion a nice tone of public spirit and remove the stigma of selfish commercialism. Including the music, vocal and dancing teachers would enhance the entertainment values of the presentation and offer possibilities of holding stage events two or more nights during the period of observance. This display manager of the local newspaper will find possibilities for tie-up advertising among the various music stores and teachers whose pupils take part.

Feb. 8-14—NATIONAL BOY SCOUT WEEK. Arrange for a meeting with all local troop leaders and tie the theatre in with special membership drives for each troop. Get the support of the newspaper or radio to the drive and have it start with a big party in your theatre, with all troops marching through town to a special performance. Allow the leaders to occupy the stage on the first night and explain to parents the benefits their offspring will receive through membership. Allow each troop to demonstrae their proficiency in drills, camping practices, etc., on special nights of the week in front of the theatre. Give a theatre party to the troop showing the greatest increase at the close of the drive. Help the scout leaders set up a local committee of civic leaders to solicit funds or in other ways help the movement. Another idea would be to have all new members take the oath of membership and be sworn in on your stage. If there are too many for handling on any one night, arrange for two or three such initiation periods.

Feb. 15-22—NATIONAL CHERRY WEEK. Candy stores, fruit stores, produce merchants and bakers could be induced to participate in observance of this period. Undoubtedly the national organization will have contacted most of them and they are susceptible to approach on any angle that promises to popularize or extend the cherry market. The display manager of the newspaper should be able to get a lot of advertising space to support a publicity campaign involving contests for recipes where cherries were used in cakes, etc. The candy stores are naturals and the ice cream manufacturer should also go along. The baker might be prevailed upon to make a cake for lobby display.

Feb. 17-24—BROTHERHOOD WEEK. If there happens to be a Big Brother movement in your town, tieups with the organization are a cinch. If no such organization exists it might be good business to contact leaders of the Rotary, Kiwanis, Elks, etc., and get such a group started. The newspaper or radio station will cooperate to the limit on a movement of this kind. Briefly, such an organization exists in many big cities and engages in efforts to alleviate the burdens of needy children by each member acting in a semi-foster father capacity to certain deserving youngsters designated by school authorities. You can also interest church dignitaries. Set up regular periods when the "adopted" kids will be guests at the theatre at a cut-rate ticket expense to their "dads."

Holidays.

Feb. 12—LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY. Contact high school authorities and arrange for debates among student groups on "What would Lincoln do in the present post-war peace period?" Admit winning teams as your guests or, if possible, arrange for the two winning contestants to present 5-minute summaries on the stage. Try to get the Boy Scouts to parade to the theatre and offer special tribute to Abe Lincoln. Contact the principals of the grade schools and endeavor to have them interest the kiddies most proficient in elocution in appearing on stage to deliver Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and the Emancipation Proclamation. Give your lobby and front patriotic treatment featuring heads of Lincoln. A lot of attention could be attracted to a rail-splitting contest in front of the theatre with a period pass going to the winning team. If the banks in your community will participate in a "penny drive," you might get excellent advertising results with a stunt in which a special price concession is made to patrons paying their entire admission in Lincoln pennies.

Feb. 22—GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY. Perhaps it is possible for you to get the various city or town officials, leaders of women and men's clubs, civic and social organizations together in a mammoth rally to give verbal support to that which Washington stood for—freedom, liberty and enterprise. Speeches by the officials encircling peace, unity and religious tolerance would be picked up eagerly by newspaper and radio. This is "All American" day, in which you can get the American Legion, Boy Scouts and World War II veteran groups to take part in a huge parade ending at your theatre. You can do a swell job for your country and people while boosting theatre receipts by getting all of these top civic leaders and the heads of various organizations lined up well in advance. The newspaper editor, the Board of Education, your local church and synagogues all will participate. Stage it as a tribute to the father of the country or as an expression of appreciation for the freedom Washington made possible. You can have them parading the streets all day and a lot of activity in front of and in the theatre, if you really go to work on the idea.

Special Anniversaries.

Feb. 11—THOMAS A. EDISON, BORN 1847. Contact the local light and power company and inveigle them into using your lobby as a showcase for the old and new in electric lighting and power equipment. You donate the space and they carry the newspaper ads to call attention to the display.

Feb. 14—ST. VALENTINE'S DAY. Make a tieup with local candy merchants for the sale of special sweetheart tickets—at a lower than box-office price—to be given away or sold in connection with purchases of candy at their establishments if they agree to purchase a stipulated amount of tieup advertising. Or, if you wish, you can establish a special sweetheart price at the box-office to be given all sweethearts patronizing the theatre together. Have the editor conduct a search for the oldest sweethearts in town and arrange to have them as your guests. Stage a husband-and-wife night. Be sure your screen attraction is on the romantic side.

Feb. 25—INCOME TAX AMENDMENT ADOPTED, 1913. The tax collector and his assistants will welcome an opportunity to explain the manner of filing returns to your customers and you'll be doing the patrons a big favor by permitting the use of your stage for this purpose. The newspaper and radio station can be depended on to publicize the service to the fullest extent.

Feb. 26—PANAMA CANAL ZONE TREATY SIGNED, 1904. If your theatre happens to be in a community where a portion of the population is from Latin-American countries this is a swell chance to put it in the front ranks of the exponents of the U. S. good neighbor policy and possibly attract additional business. Get the newspaper and radio station to publicize your observance.

Sectional Observances:

Arouses Interest with Teasers

A one-two punch technique was employed by Manager Bill Decker for 20th-Fox's "And Then There Were None" at Schine's Liberty, Cumberland, Md. The first punch was in the form of calling card made up to resemble an invitation to a murder, requesting the holder's presence at the theatre. Distribution was made to hotels, restaurants, etc. The second punch was used for Universal's "Men in Her Diary" for which Decker used a classified ad with the following copy: "Lost! A Diary . . . When through please return it to Liberty Theatre and see 'Men in Her Diary'."

Berman's Co-op Ads Put Over 2 Films

Even though it's a top-notch picture—don't sell it short! That in a few words is the 100 per cent successful formula behind Manager Mort E. Berman's box-office smashes in Springfield, Illinois. Take for instance, the Orpheum Theatre's showing of MGM's "Weekend at the Waldorf" and Paramount's "Stork Club." It's not in the Berman plan to let them slide in unnoticed, so he plugged them—but good!

For the showing of 'Waldorf," he sold a double-page advertisement in both morning and evening newspapers featuring an 'Orpheum Theatre Christmas Contest" with prizes offered to contestants who submitted the best answers as to why they should attend the picture. Smaller cash prizes and guest tickets were awarded those who sent in reasons as to why they should purchase the various merchandise advertised in the tieup. The result was a total of 5000 answers and an increased volume of business at the boffice.

The next week 'Stork Club" was featured and Berman again sold a full-page tieup to Myers Brothers, Springfield's leading department store. The ad highlighted the annual "New Years Baby Derby," and two full baby layettes were promoted and given to the first birl and boy babies born at that city in the New Year who were named after the stars of the picture. Also displayed was a full front window of the department store, plugging the tieup and picture. The two local newspapers publicized the picture and the contest throughout its run, all of which put another feather in Berman's much befeathered hat . . . and rang another bell at the box-office.

Berman claims that both films were played during adverse weather, and because of that, drove his advertising inside. But in spite of the setback, he did okay . . . Okay is right, and you can say that again!

'Gay '90s' Program Proves Hit For Gollogher in Trinidad (U.S.A.)

Highlighted by such films as "The Great Train Robbery," "Ten Days in a Barroom," and the "Dempsey-Willard Fight," the program, "The Good Old Days," was executed very successfully by H. E. Gollogher, city manager for the Fox Theatre, Trinidad, Colorado, with the launching of an extremely apropos exploitation campaign.

Believing that if a novelty is worth booking it is worth selling, Gollogher set out to make everybody in Trinidad "Good Old Days" conscious. He attired his staff in "Gay 90s" dress, created an attractive false front for his theatre, employed old electric vehicles for street ballyhoo, and rigged up an old-time bar.

The program proved nostalgic for the oldtimers and great fun for the bobby-soxers.

College Rally at Theatre Cements Friendly Relationships

In cooperation with the students of the University of California, at Los Angeles, Manager Earle Barry and his Village, Westwood staff, where the college is located, put on two guest shows. The affair was the highlight of Homecoming Week, first since Pearl Harbor. Each performance was opened with a short rally on stage led by cheer leaders.

This is a fine example of how a theatre can operate with its nearest educational institution and through cooperation cement friendly relationships.

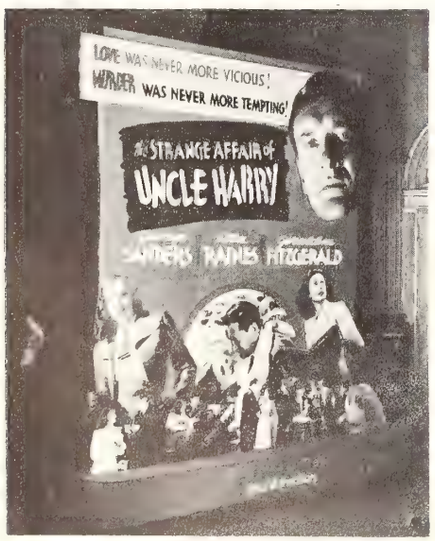
Stage Event Stunts Score in Caldwell

The older they are, the better they are, seems to be the motto behind Irving Simpson's smash box-office successes with Caldwell audiences. Be it pie-eating contests, home-town screen tests, amateur contests or any other patron-luring device, the Fox Intermountain city manager believes in ads that state "And on the stage . . ." because he has come to realize those four words nowadays mean extra dollars at no extra expense.

Most recent of the Simpson 'clickers' was an old-time pie-eating contest held, not on a kiddie show, but for the entertainment and enjoyment of the regular patrons, which brought down the house. It's old, but it's box-office, according to Simpson. The Home Town Movie idea, which Fox Intermountain's District Manager Hall Baetz employs to great advantage over the entire Montana district, took Caldwell by storm. The screen test "stage event" assures one big night, and the actual showing of the films always is good for several others.



So why run a "simple ordinary" theatre, asks Simpson, when a few old or new events, sold as "stage attractions" honestly and legitimately lure extra patrons?

'Musical Quiz Contest' Held in Cincinnati

A 'Musical Quiz Contest' on the radio, employing familiar western songs, was conducted over station WKRC as part of the advance exploitation campaign for Warners' "San Antonio" at the RKO Albee Theatre, Cincinnati.

The first 25 radio listeners sending in the correct names of the songs played received guest tickets to see the picture. Compositions broadcast in the contest included such favorites as Wagon Wheels, The Last Roundup, Boots and Saddles, Old Faithful and other cowboy numbers.

A similar contest was to be used in connection with the opening of the film in Dayton, Springfield, Zanesville and Toledo.

SENSATIONAL. How a good mystery melodrama may be effectively sold to an audience which likes a touch of the macabre is effectively demonstrated by this advance lobby display in the Lichtman Theatre, Washington for Universal's "The Strange Affair of Uncle Harry." Done in somber colors and predominated by title stenciled with green blinker, the display was further enhanced by the still enlargements at the base. Indirect green fluorescent lighting gave weird effect.

UNIQUE ADVERTISING. RKO Radio's new series of magazine advertisements called Pic-Tour of the Month, now appearing monthly in Life and Woman's Home Companion, is receiving wide discussion as one of the most attention-getting series yet devised for magazine reader consumption. Combined circulation of both publications total 7,464,741, with at least three times that many actual readers. The layout shown above, advertising "The Spiral Staircase," "Without Reservations," "Heartbeat" and "From This Day Forward," is scheduled to appear in Life, issue of February 11, and Woman's Home Companion, March issue.

Record Poster Plug For 'Heaven' in N. Y.

The New York posting campaign for 20th-Fox "Leave Her to Heaven" was huge with 76 24-sheets being posted in Manhattan and the Bronx one month before the opening date at the Roxy. As the campaign progressed, 374 more 24-sheets were added, along with 2000 three-sheets, 2000 six-sheets, and 2500 one-sheet. The record number of posters was employed strategically throughout the five boroughs.

Rodney Bush, exploitation manager, directed the poster campaign and Jules Fields, publicity manager, supervised the metropolitan press, which handed the picture a record number of newspaper and magazine breaks. Under the direction of Christy Wilbert, advertising manager, the ad campaign was one of the most telling of its kind, with teasers and large ads attractively spaced before and during the picture's run. Radio spots, secured by Radio Manager Irving Kahn were carried over all major networks including most of the independents.

The over-all campaign for the picture in New York was under the direction of Charles Schlaifer, who heads the advertising, publicity, exploitation and radio departments of 20th-Fox.

Joins Warner Field Staff

Emmons H. Turner, Jr., former New England newspaperman, magazine writer, radio announcer and publicist, recently discharged from the Army with the rank of captain, has joined Warner Bros. field public relations staff. Following a short period in New York under Bill Brumberg, manager of the field staff, he will be assigned to the Albany exchange territory.

Metropolitan Snipes 'San Antonio'

For the first time in its history, the Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, has sniped a coming-attraction poster on its subway boards to advertise the booking of Warner's "San Antonio."

'Dillinger' Campaign in Mexico Scores a Hit

Monogram's "Dillinger" opened in Mexico City amid a blast of ballyhoo and peals of publicity which sent citizens of the capital city scurrying to the box-office of the Colonial Theatre.

Radio highlighted the campaign with ten spot announcements broadcast on every radio station, which began a week in advance of the opening and ran for a week after. Newspaper advertising was also employed.

The Colonial management distributed 15,000 cardboard pistols bearing the imprint of the playing date and theatre, to all patrons a week before the opening. An attractively designed flat streetcar, with all four sides carrying large blow-ups plugging the film, ran for eleven days, six hours each day, over all car tracks in the city, with a clanging bell to attract attention.

The theatre was all decked out for the occasion too, with two large cutouts, a large valance encircling the entire marquee, and specially cut-out red silk screen cards with white imprints, which were hung from the theatre's lamps. All these effects were displayed three weeks in advance of the showing.

School Talent Contest Sells Strand Films

Selling a theatre's attractions with the excellent 'come-hither' draw of a well planned radio talent show contest is the showmanship stunt designed by Manager Milt Frye of Schine's Strand Theatre, Seneca Falls, New York.

Cooperating with a radio station located 16 miles away, a merchant sponsors the entire cost of the show including a line installation direct to the station, radio time and all contest money prizes.

The contest, which emanates from the theatre's stage, runs for 20 weeks, at the end of which time the winners will perform in a grand series of semi-final contests for five weeks. The finalist will receive the top prize. Not only does this entertaining effort give Frye a chance to advertise his films verbally, but all the schools, which supply the show's talent, are going in for the idea in style, cooperating 100 per cent. That alone, in goodwill, is worth everything.

MUSIC SCHOOL TIEUP. Although there is no apparent reason for the music school to tieup with Columbia's "Kiss and Tell," all the more credit goes to Jimmy Eshelman of the Paramount Theatre, St. Paul, for his pursuasive powers in arranging this window which is but one of several set to publicize the Shirley Temple starrer.

not only be condoned but actually commended, it is the theatre. If it were possible for the average theatre manager to blow himself up with helium gas he could not attain the heights to which his forthright service to the people of his community entitle him. To repeat what has been written so often before; motion pictures and accompanying programs at theatres are conceived and planned with a view of captivating one or more of the many human emotions that are the motivating force of peoples everywhere. If you, as a theatre manager, can (through your personal enthusiasm, the enthusiasm you can instill in your staff, the sparkle you can implant in your various advertising efforts) succeed, even momentarily, in effacing the scars of toil and travail for just a few members of your audience—putting a smile where there was a frown, gladdening a heart that was heavy—you are fulfilling a mission beyond the abilities of the finest business and professional men in any community.

Ego Required

To do this requires a controllable bump of ego—ego of the kind that prompts its owner to dare to conclude that the other fellow may be interested in what he has to sell and that his wares will benefit the chap to whom he sells them. Science has never perfected an instrument to measure the depth of sorrow in the human heart or the travail of a distressed mind. It is possible—yes even probable—that the enthusiasm generated by your ego will break the self-set barriers, the shiny masks that people always use to hide sorrow and distress and that the resultant moments spent in the theatre will prove turning points in the lives and careers of the men and women you contact. If you can do this you are surpassing the efforts of the finest medical practitioner, the most able lawyers and the most apt advisors in your locale.

If you think I'm dreaming just stop and think how much has been written about the ability of pictures and the theatre to mould character for the worst. Every crack-pot reformer is able to get reams of publicity by picking out some one picture that may possess a questionable sequence and ranting about "how the movies are ruining our children." You and I both know that people everywhere believe that rot, so why not get some "fire" into our efforts to publicize and command attention to the numberless elevating elements that the vast bulk of our offerings contain? Why not get all "hopped up" about the splendid spectacles, the wonderful historic romances, the exciting adventure stories, the crime-does-not-pay lessons of our detective stories, the thrill of our mystery narratives? It's time we all started thinking BIG about ourselves and our theatres and our attractions. Motion pictures are "seeable literature." Literature of the very finest kind—as good in every way, and far better in some, than the books that grace the shelves of our best libraries. Through the medium of the screen it is possible for patrons within the span of a couple of pleasurable hours to thoroughly absorb, through eye and ear, narratives whose written script would tax the comprehension of the lesser educated and demand hours of eye-taxing strain from even the best-trained minds. The screen makes it possible for Mr. and Mrs. Stay-At-Home to go along with Father Hubbard on his trips to the Arctics. To "reluctantly leave" remote places with FitzPatrick. To be in personal attendance at the most exciting battles of the recent World War.

The screen—and the screen alone—can inspire multitudes to soul-uplifting thoughts such as the forever memorable scenes and unforgettable story content of "Going My Way." Literally hundreds of other examples could be cited but just let your own recollections bring back the legion of impressive lessons in practical character building, honest business procedure, ethical social conduct and other elevating procedures that help men and women, boys and girls to a better understanding of how to lead better lives and become better citizens.

It's Up to You

There have been very few "bad" pictures, and those few only enjoyed minor distribution. The mammoth majority of pictures are composed entirely of elements calculated to make lives happier and to afford practical example of the silver lining that glistens behind every cloud.

Every picture possesses tremendous emotional appeal and it's up to you to SELL the story intent of every picture you play to everybody you talk to. Don't let some druggist get space in a newspaper because he put in some new shelves. You are doing something new for the community every time you change programs. Don't let some local plumber "hog" the C of C gathering with details of his new wash bowl reamer. Tell them about some of the exciting details of your coming attractions. Don't let the grocer "bull" them into thinking that his three deliveries a day mean anything compared to the incomparable service and exceptional accommodations offered to patrons of your theatre.

Start thinking BIG, Mr. Theatreman, because you are BIG. Yours is the only merchandise being offered in the entire city that cannot be secured by mail—and more than likely at a cheaper price—from some remote establishment. Yours is the only establishment in the entire community catering to the needs of Mr. and Mrs. Everybody and the Everybody's youngsters. Yours is the only place that does a daily turnover of grins for grouches, smiles for frowns, thrills for troubles, happiness for heartaches, and joys for sorrows.

Behind your entrance doors is the accepted panacea for all of the world's ills, "recreation." Yours is the place of refuge for the tired doctor, the mentally brooding lawyer, the studiously confounded professor, the pious men of cloth as well as the exhausted laborer and the tired business man. In your place they leave all of their worldly cares and emerge to go their respective ways better fitted to meet and compete with another period of mental or physical activity.

And remember, all of this is supplied by you at but a fraction of the price charged for services by most of your patrons.

So-o-o-o, Mr. Theatreman, hold your back stiffer; hold your head in the air; push your chin forward and start stepping higher. YOU are the MR. BIG of your community and don't let lack of enthusiasm or an instant's doubt about your own importance cheat you out of the position that is rightfully yours. You've an important job to do for Mr. and Mrs. Everybody and the Everybody's youngsters and the only way you can do it credibly is to feel BIG, think BIG and to be BIG. Big in heart, Big in mind and Big in actions.

Fire Alarm Instruction

If the theatre is not equipped with its own fire alarm box one reliable employe on each shift should be instructed as to the location of the nearest outside fire alarm station. They should be given instruction about how the box operates and also to stay at the alarm box until the arrival of fire apparatus so that they can direct firemen to the scene of the conflagration.

'Circus Day' Returns

Acres of free hot dogs and gallons of the traditional pink lemonade went into the palpitating tummies of 4,000 excited teen-aged youngsters, when all Wometco, Florida, neighborhood theatre managers played host to the kiddies in observance of the pre-war custom of holding an annual "Circus Day." Program included a feature picture and plenty of cartoons.

First-Aid Kit Advocated

A first-aid medicine chest is part of the necessary equipment in every well-appointed theatre. Unless one of the staff is trained in first-aid, however, all should be cautioned not to use the medications or bandages themselves; rather offer their facilities to the patrons for their own application. Don't practice medicine!

ST. LOUIS

The Arly, a 300-seater, has been opened at Arlington, Ky., as a unit of the Earl Stout Circuit, operated by Earl Stout and his son, D. B. Stout, recently released from the Army. The Stouts also operate the Uptown, Cairo, Ill.; the new 400-seat City at Mound City, Ill.; the 290-seat Wick, Wickliffe, Ky., and the 250-seat Center in La Center, Ky.

O. L. Wright, who several weeks ago purchased the 300-seat Nolan, Monroe City, Mo., from W. H. Nolan, later changing the name of that house to the Southside, has sold both the Southside and the 400-seat Monroe here to the Dickinson Circuit with headquarters in Mission, Kas., headed by Glen W. Dickinson.

Al Rosecan, owner of the Princess, will go to Los Angeles for a visit with his mother, who resides in that city. His brother, Eddie, who owns the Rialto, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and the Rialto, Hannibal, Mo., recently returned from a visit with their mother.

Seen along Film Row the past few days were Jimmy Frisina and Randolph Pedrucci, Frisina Amusement Company, Springfield, Ill.; B. Temborius, Grand, Breese, Ill.; Eddie Rosecan, Rialto, Hannibal, Mo.; C. Klarsfeld, Cape Girardeau, Mo.; Mildred Rauth, Ritz, Rolla, Mo.; Frank Finger, Gem, Marissa, Ill.; Charley Beninatti, Ritz, Carlyle, Ill.; Clarence Denny, State, Roodhouse, Ill., and Caeser Berutt, Gasconade Amusement Company, Rolla, Mo.

Ted Lending of the Kirkwood Amusement Company, operators of the Kirkwood, Mo., escaped injury when his automobile skidded on an icy street and struck a fire hydrant.

Caesar Berutt, Gasconade Amusement Company, Rolla, Mo., is back home after spending the Christmas holidays with his parents in Herrin, Ill.

Rodgers Good Harvey Customer

Carson Rodgers, general manager of the I. W. Rodger Theatre Circuit, Cairo, Ill., brought a party of friends to St. Louis to see the stage show, "Harvey," at the American.

A number of film exchange managers spent part of the week out in the territory. They were Lester Bona, Warners; Bernard McCarthy, United Artists; B. B. Reingold, 20th Century-Fox; Maurice Schweitzer, Paramount; Barney Rosenthal, Monogram; Tommy Williamson, RKO Radio, and Harry Hynes, Universal.

Hall Walsh, Prairie district manager for Warners, is in Des Moines, Iowa.

Irv Waterstreet, MGM exploiteer, was out in the territory this week.

Heine Arends, RKO-Radio salesman, recently released from the Army after three years of service, is back on his old job peddling film in northern Illinois and northern Missouri.

Crime dramas on the radio, screen and in the newspaper comic strips are blamed, along with lack of parental supervision for causing six youths ranging in age from 13 to 16 years doing some $7000 damage at the Fremont Public School here recently. The cause of their vandalism was made public by Frank X. Reller, chief probation officer.

Dominic Frisina and his wife experienced some transportation difficulties in their recent trip to California via Lambert-St. Louis Municipal Airport. Their plane turned back because of bad weather and they had to wait 24 hours to get train reservations to Kansas City, Mo., where they obtained another plane for the trip to the coast.

St. Louis film exchanges had difficulty maintaining contact with their out-of-town accounts in Southern Illinois and Eastern Missouri last weekend when 'phone operators refused to cross picket lines thrown up by striking WE installation workers. The net results was more traveling by exchange personnel to make personal calls on the motion picture exhibitors. The local strike of teamsters also affected the operation of stage shows because of the refusal of the unionists to permit trucks to haul stage scenery, costumes, etc., to and from Union Station.

A possible maximum increase of 48 cents per $100 of assessed valuation in the St. Louis tax rate is provided in a bill passed by the Senate this week and returned to the House for concurrence in amendments. If the maximum rates set out in the bill were levied the total St. Louis tax rate on real estate and personal property would be increased from the present rate of $1.35 to $1.83 per $100 of valuation. This would hit the owners of motion picture theatres very hard.

Late compilations show that St. Louis once again went over the top in a war financing campaign in all classifications of securities, including the E Bonds. Sales of E Bonds totaled $20,194,450, or just 0.2 per cent above the metropolitan area's quota. Total sales in all categories amounted to $278,923,910 or 226.8 per cent of the quota of $122,981,000. Theatre and the film exchange personnel had a prominent part in maintaining the St. Louis and Missouri record.

Fred Souttar, district manager for Fox Midwest Theatres, and Mrs. Souttar on their recent visit to the West Coast took advantage of the opportunity to visit leading studios and meet prominent production officials, stars, etc.

Agnew, Arthur Sterling, Tom Grady, Ed Urschel and Charles Fogel.

MILWAUKEE

Peacock & Belongia, a new partnership in architectural design of motion picture theatres, has started in business in downtown Milwaukee. Both of the partners have had long experience in designing new theatres and remodeling old ones, and that will be their specialty. A number of contracts have been signed for the design of new theatres in Wisconsin, and several remodeling jobs are on the board also, among the latter being the Gem, Platteville, in the southwestern part of the state, and a new theatre to be built in Grafton, a few miles north of Milwaukee.

Several movie houses have agreed to put on special pictures for youngsters, from 8 to 14 years of age, under the sponsorship of the Parents-Teachers Association and other groups. The children's programs run from 12:30 to 3:30 each Saturday, being called the Children's Pak o' Fun program, and pictures are carefully supervised and previewed by the women's organization mentioned, and, of course, passed by the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission. Managers report good attendance at the Saturday shows and the youngsters appear to be well behaved. The shows do not appeal to the teen-agers, who think they are ripe for older stuff.

A testimonial dinner on January 8 by the Independent Theatre Owners of Wisconsin marked the retirement from show business of George Fischer, 65, after 50 years in show business, mostly as a manager of theatres. He had been in the film end of the business since 1913. He is credited with having built the first luxurious show windows for the exclusive showing of films in Milwaukee.

A showman who has been showing obscene films to teen-agers and young men has been nabbed by the police here and placed under $1000 bail. FBI agents took him in tow in

WHAT DO EXHIBITORS THINK OF SCREEN ADVERTISING?

Quoting from an unsolicited editorial in Rocky Mountain Screen News, here is what one Western theatre chain official has to say:

"Alexander ads are effectively produced and are always entertainment. Why should patrons protest screen advertising? Modern America lives and breathes, in fact its very pulse, its life is advertising.

"The radio field could not exist without entertainment and advertising. Still we pay several hundred dollars for a good radio set and we take the advertising with a grain of salt. That same money spent for a radio would buy admission tickets to a theatre for a great many years. Still we protest. Ho, hum!"

Nearly 9,000 exhibitors agree and are screening Alexander ads.

January. He is charged with possession and exhibition of obscene films, and contributing to the delinquency of minors. The man has been a storekeeper, selling church goods and photo supplies. One other showman, now in custody, said he had obtained obscene films from the wholesaler at prices of $10 to $25 per film, and the film machine operator admitted he had shown the films in his basement and in the homes of teen-agers—when the parents were not at home—at $1 per customer.

The Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission, after previewing Universal's "Scarlet Street," has banned the film. In discussing the action of the Commission, Secretary Bradshaw said: "The banning of this film is in line with the policy of this commission, to cooperate fully with Chief of Police Polcyn in his recent plea for stricter regulation of undesirable films." He declared that the vote was 11 to 4 to ban the film from being shown in the Milwaukee area.

COLUMBUS

Local showmen are interested in the news that a branch central office of the Veterans Administration, one of 13 regional offices in the country, will be established in the downtown area. From 1500 to 2000 persons will be employed in the new office which is to be located in the former H. C. Godman Shoe Co. factory and office building on Starling Street, opposite the proposed site for the new Franklin County Veterans Memorial Auditorium and adjacent to the downtown theatre and business section. Remodeling of the factory building will begin as soon as it is vacated. Hiring of personnel will begin within three months. It is hoped the office will be in full operation by June 1. Eventually all records of veterans from Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan will be kept at the branch center.

Bernard P. Ginley has been named manager of the Southern, subsequent-run downtown house operated by Mrs. Max Stearn, widow of the former operator of the theatre.

Members of the Franklin County Mayors' Association have asked the Legislature to withdraw the state from the admissions tax field, leaving it to local subdivisions. Mayor William Schneider of Bexley is the new president of the association. Mayors attending the meeting at which the admissions tax vote was taken include: J. C. Boss, Gahanna; Emery B. O'Harr, Lockbourne; Lloyd Peck, Obetz; Jack Stouder, Reynoldsburg; Ross Shoemaker, city manager of Westerville; Paul E. White, Grove City; James A. Rhodes, Columbus; Carlton Berry, Minerva Park, and George Wing, Worthington.

Jean Peters, East Canton co-ed who was selected Miss Ohio State, has won a seven-year contract with 20th Century-Fox, following a series of tests on the coast. Miss Peters, however, left Hollywood for Columbus before the announcement of the contract was made. It is reported that Darryl F. Zanuck personally ordered that she be placed under contract.

Poor Mr. Fiddgit —

He is one of those unfortunate exhibitors who has passed up one big box-office bet after another. Fiddgit likes to talk about the 'good old days,' sing old favorites, and pan the 'C' pictures he is forced to play because there are not enough big hits to fill his playing time. If old Fiddgit was on his toes he would be on the GRAVY TRAIN with the smart showmen, rolling merrily along toward Big Profits. These fellows like old favorites (with big star names) too, and THEY PLAY THEM. They know the public is buying them and that ASTOR EXCHANGES are the place to get 'em.

Don't be a Mr. Fiddgit and miss the train.

Among former Evergreen employes back from war service are John Wilkinson and Dan Bergman.

Ross H. Nelson, in the theatre business at Independence, Oregon, for 37 years, has sold his Ross, Monmouth, and Isis, Independence, to J. D. Praggastis of Oregon City. Latter has operated theatres in Kelso, Wash. and Oregon City for the past ten years.

Jensen Von Herberg, pioneer theatre operator in the Pacific Northwest, advises that the Venetian and Bagdad theatres, Ballard, Wash., will later this year be taken over by Frank L. Newman, Jr., who recently sent in his resignation as booker for Evergreen State Theatres.

Patricia Jones, cashier of a Salem theatre, kept her head when a robber pulled a gun on her. She pulled his hair and raised such a fuss that he retreated with only one money sack containing $200, instead of one with $1000.

Dr. Howard S. Clemmer, 75, pioneer theatre operator and dentist, died in Spokane last week.

HAIL AND FAREWELL. Col. Howard Waugh, right, bidding farewell to James Barnes, his successor as manager of the Warner Theatre, Memphis, following a luncheon tendered to Waugh by Warner associates, who presented Waugh with a plaque describing him as "The World's greatest living showman" in recognition of his many colorful exploits during a long career as Memphis zone manager for the Warner Circuit. The two figures seen in the rear are—you've guessed it—Barnes and Waugh; it's done with mirrors.

MONTREAL

Edgar Granville, Liberal M.P., in the British House of Commons, will arrive in Ottawa this week for conferences with officials of the National Film Board relevant to the development of British films in Canada. He talked briefly with N.F.B., and other movie men here last week. Mr. Granville's visit is not connected directly with the J. A. Rank interests.

Local ski men and the resort owners in the Laurentians plan the use of films to push the trade. Several instructors will be featured in the shorts which will be made for teaching the art and publicizing the resorts.

Disney's "Fantasia" is going great guns at the Orpheum where the French version seems to be packing them in.

The Palace, in Famous Players' chain, was the victim of a holdup last week in the best movie style. At an early morning hour six armed, masked bandits made their way into the house, tied up Charles Dube, superintendent, and made their way to the office. From there several took up vantage points as guards, while a midget went about the task of opening a small safe. They fled with $800 but missed the weekend receipts of $10,000 because they were unable to open the larger vault. As police entered by the front the robbers left by the rear. None were caught.

F.P.C. Corporation is contemplating the building of a 1200-seat house in Quebec City. Approval of the site, situated at Belvedere Road and St. Cyrille St., has been given by the rate payers. Full plans are still under consideration and no price tag has been attached. Quebec is notorious for its lack of modern cinemas and film men say the new house is a definite need. Other interests have also announced plans to build in the Citadel City.

Ben Farber, now manager of the Empress, is looking for a sponsor interested in broadcasting from the stage of the theatre once weekly. He thinks a musical-type show will go best and figures Tuesday the best night, just before U. S. name programs filter through.

Business men interested in using the property at Beri and St. Catherine Streets have approached the city council with the request that it force the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to use its option on the land or relinquish it. The C.B.C. originally intended to build a "radio city" there but changed its mind. Both theatremen and restaurateurs have an eye on the site.

Babe Coval, of Warners, who is again entrenched as manager here, reveals that the worst aspects of life in Trinidad, where he was posted for a year, are the lack of food and other supplies. Meat and potatoes, he said, were almost unobtainable.

Eddie Farhood, formerly a manager with Confederation, entertained several newsmen who were invited to a party in honor of the engagement of his brother, George, to Mary Bouchey.

The Standard last week carried a roto spread on Canadian ambassador to the U. S., Hon. L. B. Pearson and his Hollywood visit. The party recognizing the film industry's war work drew much favorable press comment here.

JOE HORNSTEIN has it!

VANCOUVER

An unsuccessful attempt was made this week to break open the safe at the Sapperton, New Westminister. Thugs forced the back door and knocked off the safe's dial and one hinge, but were unable to swing the door open.

Eric Williams of the Strand is on a two-month trip to Hollywood.

A new theatre of 750 seats is planned for Oroville, British Columbia, in the near future. It will be erected by Loris Gillespie of Seattle.

Business was excellent this week with first runs showing "The Wonder Man," Orpheum; "Mildred Pierce," Capitol; "Dakota," Plaza; "Captain Tugboat Annie," Beacon; "Wanderer of the Wasteland," Dominion; "George White's Scandals," Strand, and "Frontier Girl," Vogue.

Overheated stove-pipes set fire recently to the Oak Theatre, Stoney Mountain, and the building was burned to the ground with an estimated $10,000 loss. Insurance covered part of the loss, according to Ronald Mills, owner and operator.

TORONTO

For the third time "The Great Mr. Handel" played the Royal Alexandra, Toronto's only legitimate theatre, as a road show during the current week with two performances daily and prices scaling from 30 to 90 cents. Eagle-Lion's "Madonna of the Seven Moons" was a long time in appearing on a Toronto screen but it has now opened at Loew's Uptown after a nifty teaser campaign. This picture was held over twice in its Hamilton, Ont., engagement.

Lately returned from overseas after long service with the Canadian Army, Capt. Russ McKibbin has been selected as the manager of the Victoria Theatre, Toronto, which is being opened at the end of the month by Famous Players to provide another first-run outlet. The Vic was dark for many years and is being reconstructed at an estimated cost of $35,000. The job would probably have been far more extensive if materials and skilled labor had been more plentiful. Prices here will be a modest 12 to 48 cents.

With the equipment-supply situation being what it is, the Tivoli Theatre in downtown Toronto is scheduled for some improvements including the re-covering of its 1434 seats. Incidentally, Famous Players has appointed Eugene Fitzgibbons, lately out of the U. S. Pacific armed forces, as student manager of the Tivoli under Manager Len Bishop. He is the second son of President J. J. Fitzgibbons of the circuit company.

Paramount Film Service Limited, Toronto, has had its flying squad in action. General Manager Gordon Lightstone flew to the Maritime Provinces on the east coast; Win Barron, promotion manager, flew to Vancouver on the west coast and Harold Pfaff, head salesman, has been flying around Ontario.

Floyd Rumford, owner of the Kineto Theatre and a director of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario, decided not to run for mayor of Forest, Ont., for the eighth term, but that did not keep him out of the municipal arena. The 1946 elections found him the people's choice for mayor of the village.

A building permit has been issued to Hyman Berlin at Ottawa, Ont., for the erection of a $60,000 theatre in the Canadian capital, making his second theatre in that city.

The head office of the Motion Picture Theatres Association of Ontario has been moved from 26 Queen Street East to the 12th floor of the Hermant Building, 21 Dundas Square, Toronto, right in the heart of the city's film district.

Arch H. Jolley, executive-secretary of the MPTA of Ontario, has been elected to membership in the Motion Picture Trade Section of the Toronto Board of Trade, which deals with excise, taxation and other problems of the film industry.

Presentations of suitable tokens for past services were made to Past Presidents Tom Waterfield of the Scarboro Theatre and Lou Ross of the Lansdowne Theatre by the B. & F. Theatres Managers Association at its third annual dinner-dance at the Murray House, Toronto. To cap it all, Manager Waterfield also proved to be the winner of a $50 Victory Bond. Executive guests at the function included Sam Bloom, Sam Fine, Sam Sternberg, Supervisor Bill Summerville and their wives.

Managerial shifts involving four theatres have been made by 20th Century Theatres, Toronto, of which Nat Taylor is the directing head. Tom Gallacher has moved from the Geneva, Orillia, to the Community Theatre, Hamilton; Ed Hubbard went from the Community to the Mountain, Hamilton, and Charlie Greenwood has been transferred from the Mountain to the Centre at London, Ont. Prior to his departure, Greenwood was guest of honor at a function of the Hamilton Theatre Managers Association, when he was presented with a briefcase by Kent Craig, supervisor of the United Amusement Theatres, on behalf of all association members. Chief sponsor of the gathering was Manager Lloyd Gurr of the Century Theatre. A visitor was Arch H. Jolley, secretary of the MPTA of Ontario.

CLEVELAND

Ray Wallace of Alliance, popular exhibitor, last week was elected a member of the board of directors of the City Savings Bank and Trust Company of his home town. Wallace has been prominent in motion picture circles for the past 20 years and operates all of the movie houses in Alliance; namely the Morrison, Columbia, Strand and Mount Union.

Nat Lefton, now retired from the industry, but previously local Republic and PRC franchise holder, left Wednesday with Mrs. Lefton for St. Petersburg and other points south, planning to be gone until late spring.

Lt. Jack Essick of the Navy, son of P. E. Essick of the Scoville, Essick and Reif circuit, is back in the country from the Pacific. His brother, Lt. Ray is currently at Yokohama, in Japan.

Rufus Young of Maumee has bought complete Motiograph equipment for his new 1000-seat theatre now nearing completion. Ben L. Ogron, Motiograph sales representative states that the contract includes postwar AA Motiograph projectors, Mirrophonic sound complete with bases and magazines and all other booth accessories.

PRC's "Enchanted Forest" is reported to be piling up a fine record of outstanding business in this territory. Among the houses where it scored heavily are the State Theatre, Findlay; Paramount, Youngstown; Paramount, Steubenville; Mozart, Canton and Sigma, Lima where a four-day booking was extended to a full week. The picture opens January 17 for a week's engagement at the Palace, Akron and is booked but not yet dated for the Allen, Cleveland.

Leo Jones of the Star Theatre, Upper Sandusky, was in town and reported his family has recovered from the flu.

William Black of the Star Theatre, East Liverpool, made one of his infrequent visits to Film Row last week. Other visitors of the week included Bill Borack, Northio booker; P. C. Welton of the Grove Theatre, Columbus Grove and E. L. Staub of the Star, Delphos.

Jack Gertz, representing Coulter Premiums, has closed new dish deals for the Regent, Jennings and Grand Theatres of Cleveland.

Nat Schultz, Monogram franchise owner, was in New York on business. Max Jacobs, recently of Imperial Pictures, reports that he is shipping his new Dater Strips, which he designed and is manufacturing, from coast to coast.

Shep Bloom, of the 20th-Fox home office staff before joining the Army, is now a member of the local 20th-Fox sales staff.

The Red Cross Fund publicity committee met January 14 at the Carter Hotel to outline plans for the 1946 drive. George W. Erdmann, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is a member of the committee, representing the theatres.

Jack Sogg, MGM branch manager took on a new title last week when his daughter, Shirley wife of Lt. Fred Soldow presented him with a grandson, named Gary Frederick. The young man made his debut at Indian Hospital, Santa Fe, New Mexico, not far from where his father is stationed at an army hospital.

Donald Wolf, son of Warner Zone Manager Nat Wolf, has returned to Valley Forge Military School in Wayne, Pa. following his mid-year holidays.

Harold Olds is back as manager of the Madison, Mansfield, with an army discharge in his pocket.

Millard Ochs, manager of Warners' Strand Theatre, Akron, has been named circuit theatre chairman for the local March of Dimes drive. Independent theatres are represented by the Akron Theatre Managers' Association of which Max is president.

Nat Barach, National Screen Service branch manager here reports that the 'Dimes' pledges are coming in fast. To date he has received 310 out of a possible 460 requests for trailers.

Grainger to Play Host

E. C. Grainger, president of the Shea Chain, has issued invitations to local exchange managers to attend a dinner at the Carter Hotel on January 28. A general meeting of Shea officials and theatre managers will be held before the dinner.

Al Sunshine and Howard Savitz were guests of honor at a luncheon last Friday at the Carter Hotel at which the "river" salesmen were the hosts. Occasion was the transfer of Savitz from the NSS Cleveland office to the company's Washington, D. C. office, and the resignation of Sunshine from the Republic sales force to step out for himself as national distributor of Advanads, a coming attraction service.

Akron Theatre Managers' Association will meet February 2 to elect a new president to succeed Max Federhar and to name new officers for the year.

James E. Scoville of the Scoville, Essick and Reif Circuit, is spending the rest of the winter in Tucson, Arizona at the Bar Double A Ranch.

Short Subject Reviews

The Royal Mounted Rides Again (Actionful)

Univ. Serial 13 Chapters 18-20 Mins.

The first two chapters of Universal's "The Royal Mounted Rides Again" indicate that a good cast, action-packed story and fast-paced direction invest the chapter play with the elements that make this type of film fare successful for the small fry and interesting to some segments of the adult population. The episodes close with the usual hair-raising predicament of the hero or heroine but serial fans are always sure that somehow or other they will be on hand when the next chapter appears. The good cast includes George Dolenz, Bill Kennedy, Daun Kennedy, Paul E. Burns, Milburn Stone, Robert Armstrong, Danny Morton, Addison Richards, Tom Fadden, Joseph Haworth, Helen Bennett, Joseph Crehan, Selmer Jackson, Daral Hudson, George Lloyd, George Eldredge, William Haade and Rondo Hatton. Produced by Morgan B. Cox. Directed by Ray Taylor and Lewis D. Collins.

So You Think You're Allergic (Fair)

WB (2404) Vitaphone Variety 10 mins.

Showing the various foods, flowers, etc., which induce different forms of allergies, Knox Manning narrates the troubles of Joe MacDoakes, who has a particular mysterious allergy which causes him to sneeze (very funnily, too) in every scene. Finally he discovers the cause: his wife's dandruff, and he shuts her in a special breathing chamber which puts an end to his trouble. Good shot in this short, written and directed by Richard L. Bare, is the one depicting the zany hero sniffing down the cause of his sneeze. Fairly amusing short.

Guest Pests (Very Funny)

MGM (S-752) Pete Smith Specialty 9 mins.

Pete Smith delights audiences by his vocal comment on the house guest who does all the things that annoy normal people, including rearranging the furniture, consuming soup with sound effects, etc. Smith loses none of his reputation as a top wit, convulsing audiences from time to time with his apt irony.

The Editor's Mail Bag

To the Editor:

I have noticed in the daily newspapers that the request for two million dollars for cancer research has been turned down by the Federal government.

Since the problem of cancer, its elimination and control, is such a pressing one I should like to make the following proposal: our theatres are called upon several times a year to make collections on behalf of various worthy causes. We can and should add another to the list, a collection whose proceeds should be devoted to research looking to eventually wiping out cancer.

It is as worthy a cause as the March of Dimes for infantile paralysis victims especially since we note the ever increasing numbers of children afflicted with this dread disease.

Again may I urge that this matter be given the utmost consideration.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Robert Walker Signs New Long-Term Contract at MGM; Lew Ayres Returns to Screen in Int'l's 'The Dark Mirror'

Harry Davenport, who made his first screen appearance in 1912, will appear in his 90th picture in 34 years of screen acting in MGM's "Faithful in My Fashion," which stars Donna Reed with Tom Drake. Film marks the producing bow of Lionel Houser. Everett Edward Horton, Spring Byington, Warner Anderson and Woody Wilson complete the cast. Sidney Salkow directs.

Sid Caesar, youthful comedian who makes his film debut in the Columbia musical, "Tars and Spars," will do one picture a year for that studio in accordance with a deal between the company and Milton H. Bren, who has Caesar under personal contract.

Phil Karlson has been assigned to direct the second in Monogram's "Shadow" series, as his first film under the new two-year contract. Picture, tentatively titled "The Shadow's Shadow," will be produced by Joe Kaufman, with Kane Richmond and Barbara Reed again in starring roles.

Frank Wisbar, producer-director of the PRC horror tale "Devil Bat's Daughter," has signed Molly Lamont, Nolan Leary and Ed Cassidy for important roles in the picture. Wisbar also wrote the original screenplay.

Ruth Brennan, daughter of Academy Award Winner Walter Brennan, has signed a term contract at Republic and been assigned a featured spot in the Jane Withers' starrer, "Lonely Hearts Club."

H. C. Potter, whose last directorial assignment at RKO was the Cary Grant feature, "Mr. Lucky," will return to this studio to direct RKO's new starring team of Bill Williams and Barbara Hale in "A Likely Story," a modern romantic comedy with Manhattan background, by Bess Taffel. Richard Berger will produce with Jack J. Gross as executive producer.

Pati Behrs, 21-year-old French actress, has been signed by 20th-Fox for one of the leading roles in the Darryl Zanuck production, "The Razor's Edge," which will star Tyrone Power. Edmund Goulding will direct.

Jean Yarbrough, Universal director, was promoted to producer-director status and his first picture under the new deal will be "Inside Job," comedy-drama. Production is set for February with Ben Pivar as executive producer.

William Cagney has signed James Poe, who was with the March of Time in New York prior to the war, to a term writing ticket. He draws "Bugles in the Afternoon," by Ernest Haycox, as his first assignment. This will follow "Stray Lamb" and "A Lion Is in the Streets" on the Cagney production schedule.

Robert Walker has signed a new long-term contract at MGM launching him on the most important assignment of his career in the role of Jerome Kern in "Till the Clouds Roll By." Walker, who came to Hollywood only three years ago to play the small sailor role in "Bataan," has had a spectacular rise to stardom. Arthur Freed produces "Till the Clouds Roll By," which also stars Judy Garland, Frank Sinatra and a galaxy of stellar names.

Sam Bischoff has signed Ben Markson to pen the screenplay for "Mr. District Attorney" based on the radio program of the same name. Film will roll some time next month, for Columbia release.

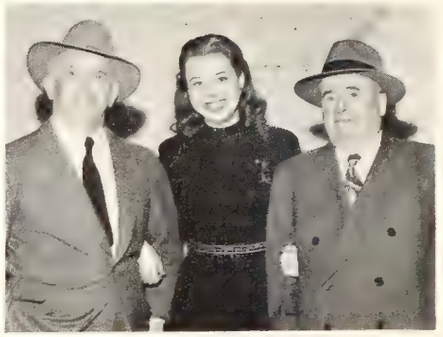
Richard Sales will collaborate with Mary Loos on screenplay for "Rendezvous With Annie," an original true-life comedy purchased by Republic for Allan Dwan to produce.

Otto Preminger, who was assigned the producer-director berth for the recently purchased Christine Weston novel "The Dark Wood" at 20th-Fox, has just signed a six-year producer-director contract without options, for the same studio.

Lew Ayres will return to the screen in February, co-starred with Olivia de Haviland in "The Dark Mirror," which Nunnally Johnson, who wrote the screenplay from Vladimir Pozner's story, will produce for International Pictures. Robert Siodmak will direct.

Samuel Goldwyn, by arrangement with 20th-Fox, has engaged June Haver as leading lady for Danny Kaye in "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," James Thurber story. Norman Z. McLeod will direct.

Lynn Merrick and Robert Stanton have been chosen for the top roles in the Columbia musical, "Sing While You Dance," to be produced by Leon Barsha. The Vagabonds, instrumental and vocal quartet, were also signed for specialty numbers.



Jane Wyatt was signed by Producer Marshall Grant for the role of Dr. Mary Palmer in Universal's romantic drama, "Strange Conquest." This will be her first screen appearance in more than two years. She will co-star with Jess Barker, and top feature roles go to Lowell Gilmore and Julie Bishop. Jack Rawlins directs.

Glenn Langan replaces Cornel Wilde in the romantic lead of the 20th-Fox Technicolor picture, "Margie," which Henry King will direct. Already set for the leading feminine role is Jeanne Crain.

'Top Secret,' Atomic Bomb Film, Set for February Production

"Top Secret," will be the title of the Hal Wallis production dealing with the development of the atomic bomb, according to an announcement by Wallis. The film will be released through Paramount.

Jerome Beatty, noted magazine writer, has completed collection of material in Washington and has forwarded the first treatment to Hollywood. He will begin work immediately on the screenplay.

Burkett to Produce 12 Films For Monogram, PRC Release

Twelve pictures, including one high-budget feature, are on the 1946 production program of independent producer James S. Burkett. Eight of the "Charlie Chan" series, starring Sidney Toler and featuring Mantan Moreland, will be set for Monogram release.

Burkett will also produce another series, the Philo Vance mysteries, based on the character created by S. S. Van Dine, to be released through PRC. The first shooting starts on January 28.

Auer to Form Own Company Upon RKO Contract Completion

John H. Auer has disclosed plans for the formation of his own independent company upon the completion of his producer-director contract with RKO in April.

Auer has acquired two important story properties, a play and an unpublished novel, for his initial productions and shortly will announce them, together with his releasing affiliation.

Hajos PRC Musical Director

Karl Hajos has been named musical director of PRC Productions by Reeves Espy, president of PRC Productions, Inc. Hajos, noted composer-conductor, will have entire supervision over composition, orchestration and recording, and will himself write the original scores for certain future productions.

King to Direct 'Margie'

Twentieth Century-Fox has selected Henry King to direct "Margie," the original comedy-drama written by Ruth McKenney and Richard Branston. Alan Young, radio comedian, will make his debut in this production which Walter Morosco will produce.

Marietta Caney in 'Wind'

Marietta Caney has been signed for a role in Paramount's "The Searching Wind," produced by Hal Wallis, in which Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney and Ann Richards star.

Colbert in Appeal Trailer to Raise Funds for Cancer Fight

In a drive to be conducted in all motion picture theatres during April, Claudette Colbert has accepted the request to help raise funds through the medium of an appeal trailer, for the American Cancer Society, with Charles P. Skouras as chairman for the motion pitcure industry.

Directed by Mervyn LeRoy, the subject will be the first all-out appeal for funds to combat the disease which during 1941-45 accounted for twice as many lives as were lost in World War II.

'Red Pony' Milestone's Next

Lewis Milestone, now free-lancing as a producer-director, will make John Steinbeck's "The Red Pony," with production to start in May. No arrangements have yet been made for distribution but indications are that 20th Century-Fox will discuss the matter with Milestone soon. The production is budgeted at $1 million. Milestone recently completed "Strange Loves" for Hal Wallis, and his "Walk in the Sun," independently produced, is now being distributed by 20th-Fox.

Goulding to Direct Zanuck Film

"The Razor's Edge," which Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, will personally produce as his first 20th-Fox effort since his prize-winning "Wilson," will have Edmund Goulding handling the directorial reins and will mark Tyrone Power's return to the screen. The cast also includes Alexander Knox and Clifton Webb.

'Searching Wind' Cast Builds

Reginald Sheffield will play a leading character role in Hal Wallis' "The Searching Wind," starring Robert Young, Sylvia Sidney and Ann Richards. James Flavin and Maurice Marsac have been added in the roles of reporters. William Dieterle will direct.

Mature's New 20th-Fox Pact

Victor Mature has received a new term contract from Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production of 20th-Fox, in keeping with the company's policy concerning returning servicemen. Mature's first assignment will be a role opposite Ida Lupino in "The High Window."

Golden, Lane Join Paramount

Jerome Golden and Morton Lane have joined the legal department of Paramount. Golden, recently discharged from the Army, will work under Walter W. Gross, company attorney, handling theatre department legal matters. Lane will work with Louis Phillips, assistant general counsel of the company.

Universal to Film Terhune Novel

Universal has set "Treve," an adaptation of the Albert Payson Terhune novel, for early spring production. Adele Buffington has been assigned to write the adaptation and screenplay with Wallace Fox as producer-director.

Vehicle for Screen Return

RKO's "Step by Step" starring Lawrence Tierney and Anne Jeffreys will serve as a vehicle for ex-Coast Guardsman Lee Bonnell's return to the screen.

Three More in 'Crack-Up'

Rodger Creed, Joe Palmer, Frederic Graham and Westley Harper have been added to the cast of RKO's "Crack-Up," which stars Pat O'Brien, Claire Trevor and Herbert Marshall.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

There's a set over at 20th-Fox that we must see. It's the enormous one built for the Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison, Linda Darnell picture "Anna and the King of Siam." So that's where I plan on taking you today. We'll also get a chance to meet the two female stars and maybe Rex Harrison, the Englishman who was brought to this country to play the part of the King.

Once on the lot we walk through the usual entrance onto the stage where the picture is being made, but on the inside we find ourselves in completely strange surroundings. Place looks like an open air pavilion, and upon questioning we find out that that's the King's palace we see on the one side and the Palace of Women on the other. This is Siam in the 1860s.

Story, taken from a best-seller, is about a young Englishwoman who was hired by the King to come to Siam to educate his large family. She was the first white woman to enter that country up to that time, which, as one can well imagine, must have made quite an impression on the people there.

Everything's set to go for the scene which takes place as Irene Dunne is teaching the inmates of the palace: the brown-skinned children and women of the King's harem. The women all look alike, so that the one with the monkey on her shoulder stands out. She turns out to be Linda Darnell, whom we never recognized in her oriental makeup. Her skin is brown, her hair is worn in a coil on the top of her head and she wears the customary "panung": an oversized diaper tied around the waist and then brought up front between the legs. When tucked into the belt it falls softly to the knees.

Irene Dunne isn't hard to find for she's the only white person there. Besides, she's wearing a hoop-skirt and the other proper raiment for that period for the English-speaking world.

Director John Cromwell now has everything set for shooting the sequence in which a snake interrupts the class. Camera, lights and cast are all set "to go," at which time the snake is dropped down on the table. This upsets the quiet of the room, for Irene screams and runs out, and the Siamese women and children immediately fall to their knees in thanks. The appearance of the snake (to them) is a symbol that Buddha looks down with favor on what they're doing.

Several rehearsals are necessary before the scene is filmed with the perfection Cromwell demands. Then the cast is dismissed so that the technicians may take over to prepare for the next shot.

It is at this time that we find ourselves introduced to Gale Sondergaard, who plays wife number one and whom we never recognized. We also meet Irene Dunne, Linda Darnell and Director Cromwell. No meeting Rex Harrison, the King, today, for he isn't working.

Until next week.

Paramount Sets 'Evil Genius'

"The Evil Genius," a Paramount comedy with a psychological twist, was set for forthcoming production. S. James Andrews will produce the picture, and he and Joseph Krumgold will write the screenplay, based on an original idea by Krumgold.

Two Additions to Wallis Film

"The Perfect Marriage," the Hal Wallis Production for Paramount, which co-stars David Niven and Loretta Young, has Jerome Cowan in a character role. Luella Gear, Broadway comedienne, has also been added to the cast.

Roach All-Color Program

Setting a new Hollywood precedent, Hal Roach announced last week that his program of 12 comedy features for 1946 will be filmed in color. Approximately $750,000 will be spent in adapting his studio to the technical requirements of the new color program.

Kaye, Haver, Loy and March Set for Two Goldwyn Films

Samuel Goldwyn's Technicolor film, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty," written by James Thurber, will star Danny Kaye with June Haver.

Frederic March and Myrna Loy will appear in the Goldwyn production of MacKinlay Kantor's "Glory for Me," along with Dana Andrews, Teresa Wright, Cathy O'Donnell and Virginia Mayo. The story is being adapted for the screen by Robert E. Sherwood.

'Wilderness' to be Musical

June Allyson and Ray McDonald have been set for top roles in MGM's musical version of "Ah, Wilderness," noted play by Eugene O'Neil which was produced on Broadway by the Theatre Guild and later by MGM as a serious screen drama. Harry Warren and Ralph Blane have been assigned to write songs for the film. Reuben Mamoulian will direct and Arthur Freed will produce.

Hellinger Buys Broadway Play

Mark Hellinger has announced the purchase of the former Broadway play, "The Hero," written by the late Gilbert Emery and staged by Sam H. Harris, which he will produce as "Swell Guy" one of the two independent productions for Universal release in 1946. The other film will be Ernest Hemingway's "The Killers."

Tadlock Joins Western Cast

"Gentlemen With Guns," PRC's color western starring Eddie Dean, has added William F. Tadlock to the cast. Robert Emmett produces and directs. This picture and the latest Buster Crabbe western, as yet untitled, have moved to outdoor location sites in the San Francisco Valley.

Trio Set for New MGM Film

Jimmy Durante, Lauritz Melchior and Sharon McManus, the versatile moppet who danced with Gene Kelly in "Anchors Aweigh," have been set for featured roles in MGM's "This Time for Keeps," a story with music. Joe Pasternak will produce.

Grant Named Executive Producer

Universal has appointed Marshall Grant, producer, to the status of an executive producer, with a program of eight pictures on his schedule. Immediately following the completion of "Strange Conquest," he will organize his staff.

Alda Set for 'Sentence'

Robert Alda, who portrayed the role of George Gershwin in "Rhapsody in Blue," has been assigned a leading role opposite Ann Sheridan in "The Sentence." Kent Smith completes the romantic triangle in the film.

Welles Option Lifted

Virginia Welles, 19-year-old beauty who was given the feminine lead opposite Eddie Bracken in "Ladies' Man," as her first role, has had her option lifted by Paramount.

Paramount Signs Louis Kaye

Louis S. Kaye, Bob Hope's writer for the last fourteen years, has been signed by Paramount to a long-term contract as a writer.

THE DAWN OF A NEW ERA!

The war is over and won.

But the peace and domestic battles are still to be achieved.

We of the Motion Picture Industry can honestly feel that we did our part far and beyond anything expected of us or any other industry.

Theatre business boomed. That was to be expected. If it was a little lopsided, the reconversion period may witness a general levelling off with the business better apportioned among all the theatres rather than just the few.

We have our post-war problems to meet and to solve. Better showmanship stands high on the list of "must-dos" for the immediate future and this means a return to the type of showmanship that was so necessary during the lean years.

There are some who say that showmanship is a lost art. We disagree. We believe it has been dormant. Dormant too long, to be sure, but certainly not dead.

Nineteen Hundred Forty-Six should be a happy and prosperous year for all branches of our industry. It can certainly be that for you if you will apply yourself to your profession.

You have a valuable commodity to sell. Inside these metal containers for film reels are relaxation, entertainment, surcease from daily worries and cares. It is yours to sell and yours to exhibit to those patrons who buy your merchandise.

Be a real showman. Sell your shows. Maintain flawless physical operation of your theatre. Be ever on the lookout for the welfare, the comfort and the safety of your patrons. They are your first and only consideration.

—"CHICK" LEWIS

Dear Betty Grable

Of course, you're one of the 10 Top Stars in the poll of Showmen's Trade Review! Your Technicolor hit "The Dolly Sisters" is wonderful . . . and your greatest will be "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim," --also in Technicolor! Until then-- love from the boxoffice and

20th CENTURY-FOX

LEADING PRODUCTIONS

Presented in the order of their choice are the pictures which have been selected as the Leaders of the 1944-1945 season in accordance with the now tested and proved yardstick which has been applied at this time each year through the medium of the national poll of exhibitor opinion conducted by Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry.

As emphasized quite regularly in these forewords to pages which record the details of pictures which have won Leaders recognition, this annual stock-taking of the box-offices of the U. S. concerns itself with a prescribed list of pictures—the list being comprised of those productions which were in general release during the period beginning November one and concluding on October 31 of the following year. It is quite necessary to stress this point and call attention to the listing, elsewhere in this issue, of the pictures that were eligible for Leaders distinction for the season covered by this poll.

Another point which it is necessary to emphasize, is the fact that the Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry selections of pictures and stars named as the outstanding attractions are selected by means of a poll of exhibitors based on a plan which accomplishes with marked accuracy—as proved in the many years this poll has been employed—a reflection of the average theatre situation in this country. This therefore is not a selection of pictures or stars based on the opinion of a critic, either professional or amateur, but the designation by theatremen of the pictures which drew the biggest patronage to their theatres. That, according to the reasoning behind this work by Showmen's Trade Review, constitutes the most accurate evaluation possible of the merit of a picture—assuming that pictures are primarily for the entertainment of the masses.

Thus, having attempted to make clear that there are two vital points to be kept in mind in considering the results of this poll (that the pictures eligible are those released during a specific period as listed elsewhere; that this publication merely gathers the exhibitors' views and reports them herein) we offer with great pride the results of the national selection of Leading Productions of 1944-1945.

all UPS and no downs

A FEW months ago we said that Universal was highly optimistic—so optimistic that it increased its production budget approximately $10,000,000, and made plans to enlarge its studio with new buildings, new stages, and most important of all it had mobilized some of the best producing, directing, and writing talent in the industry to make pictures at and for the Universal Studios.

Every movie company has its ups and downs, but with the developments of the past several months and with the added insurance that Universal is taking on every picture, as far as production resources are concerned, we feel more certain than ever that the current program for Universal will be marked with all ups—and no downs.

We extend our greetings to our thousands of exhibitor-friends who have actually been a party to Universal's success story. Here's hoping we both continue to entertain the public, to grow and to prosper.

Universal is proud of its Newsreel, which, for more than thirty years, has proved that it not only has an enviable record in the collection of News but also in the editing and presentation of it.

Universal proudly salutes the entire Newsreel staff here and abroad who week in and week out resourcefully maintain a fine standard of news coverage which truly makes the Universal Newsreel a matter of public service.

PICTURES ELIGIBLE FOR LEADERS RANKING

Listed below are the pictures which were eligible for ratings as Leaders of 1945. Only films appearing in these lists were included in exhibitor calculations in naming the Leaders. Pictures are listed by companies releasing them, with stars indicating those which received sufficient votes to place them in nomination for Leaders ranking. Pictures indicated by stars must be considered as outstanding, irrespective of whether or not they appear in the list of Leaders groups, since the number of votes necessary to put them in nomination is of such volume as to certify strong performance at a large number of theatres.

UNIVERSAL SALUTES ITS PERSONNEL ALL OVER THE WORLD

Truly, commerce has become global and motion pictures, more than ever, are speaking a language of One World.

Seldom in the rush of things do we take time out to acknowledge the fact that many of our employees are literally scattered to the four points of the compass.

It is with the realization that the remote has become the proximate that Universal salutes its foreign legions and extends to them greetings from all their friends in the home office and the studio.

Bugs Bunny in Topmost Position for Second Time as Cartoons, Comedies Lead Topical and Musical Reels as Public Favorites

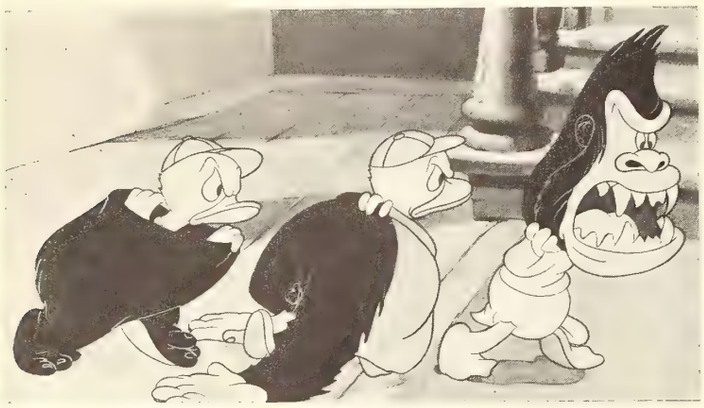
Whatever influence the war had on public tastes, that influence did not extend to short subject cartoons. For during the past five years in the Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry Poll, cartoons have remained at the topmost position, with scarcely any threat of being toppled from their lofty pinnacle.

And the animated "personality" apparently glued to the upper strata of popular society is Warners' Bugs Bunny who, having officially ascended the throne in 1944 (he was really on top in 1943, but because he had not attained "star" status, his series of Merrie Melodies received the high honor) is still sitting up there in 1945, his ears cockily aloft and his mouth champing carrots enthusiastically, pausing only to ask, "What's up, Doc?"

"Well, Bugs, if you really want to know, it appears that your top position is reasonably secure, provided you keep right on being the smart, wise-cracking hare who shattered cartoon tradition by turning the public's favor from the kindly, overrun, down-trodden, sympathetic cartoon character to a smart-aleck like yourself."

That the war years did have their influence on shorts, even though cartoons escaped, can be easily proved by looking back over the Leaders results since 1940. Brushing aside first place temporarily, since we know that cartoons held that position (Walt Disney Cartoons (RKO) in 1940, 1941 and 1942; Merrie Melodies in 1943, and Bugs Bunny from then on), it is interesting to note that with war already having begun in Europe, and the United States almost on the brink, the topical March of Time took second place in 1940, retaining that position in 1941 when the United States was attacked by Japan at Pearl Harbor.

During those years other types of subjects, such as comedies, musicals, etc., were a little farther down the ladder of the Leaders ten best; but as the war got under way and the years passed, the other types began to move slowly upward while the topical reel, still ranking high in public favor, began to descend slowly as the war years rolled on and eventual peace loomed.



For example, in 1942, The March of Time, which had held second place the two previous years, finished fourth in the short subject race, retaining this same position in 1943 and 1944. Thus, while this 20th Century-Fox release still held potent appeal for those who wanted to keep pace with current wartime events, there was still sufficient "escape" desire on the part of the public to make cartoons the leading type of favorite short subject. So that, when The March of Time dropped a rung or two down the ladder, there was a cartoon series to take its place. Beginning in 1943, the Walt Disney cartoons dropped to second place, with Merrie Melodies (in 1943 only) and Bugs Bunny taking the watchtower position from that time on. Nevertheless, since 1942, regardless of changes in cartoon favorites, cartoons have held the two top positions in short subject series supremacy.

With World War II ending in 1945, cartoons took a stronger position than ever, managing to cop the three top rungs of the popularity ladder for themselves. For in third place to Bugs Bunny and MGM's Color Cartoons were the Walt Disney series. Not since 1940 when, with war clouds hovering over the United States, cartoons held top spot, has this type of short subject attained such public favor as in 1945.

Back in 1940, too, such series as MGM's Crime Does Not Pay, Warners' American Cavalcades and MGM's Pete Smith Specialties were on the upper-half of the ten-rung popularity ladder. In the years that followed, the "Crimes" went down, the "Cavalcades" dropped out and the "Pete Smiths" see-sawed back and forth, dropping as far as eighth place in 1942 and 1943 when the war was at its height. But while the American people have been too concerned with the war at that time to evince a very strong interest in the Smith reels, it is interesting to note that now, with the conflict over, the inimitable Pete is back again in fourth place.

Poll Results Show Definite Peacetime Trend

If anything, the 1945 Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry poll shows a definite peacetime trend—not only to cartoons, which seem to hold favor come war, peace or famine—but also toward comedies and musicals, with newsreels staking a claim between the two. Just five years ago newsreels, musicals, comedies and dramatic shorts followed cartoons in that order as the preferred types of short subjects. In the 1945 poll, comedies jumped from fourth to second place, newsreels fell from second to third, musicals came up from fourth to third, and the dramatic reels remained in fifth position.

Since 1943, when exhibitors' votes placed RKO-Pathe's This Is America series in fifth place in the Leaders short subject poll, that series has continued to hold its same position, a notable record when one considers that the transition from war to peace has brought about so many other changes. The This Is America producers have wisely chosen their subject matter with care, have prepared it with an eye to public appeal, and have timed its release to coincide with the subject's high place in public interest. With the maintenance of this same care and diligence in future production, it is safe to assume that This Is America, while perhaps veering back and forth from its present position in the years to come, will nevertheless remain a favorite short subject series far into the future.

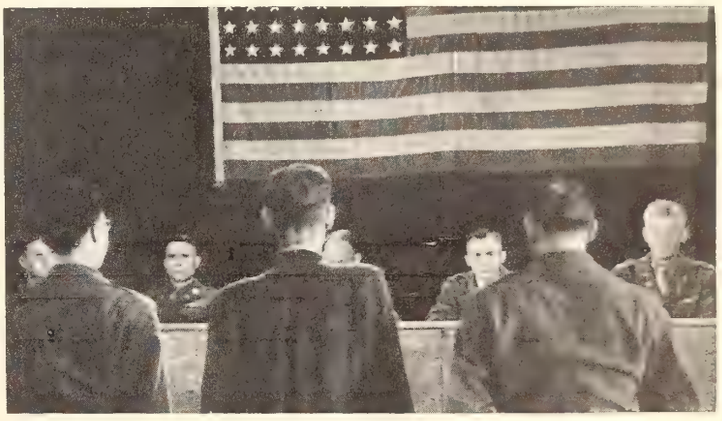
Columbia's Three Stooges, whose knockdown, drag-out, slapstick antics have been convulsing audiences for nearly a decade, continue to maintain a worthwhile rating in the Leaders short subject poll. From seventh place in 1940, the three buffoons fell a notch (1941), went up six notches to third place (1942), dropped back to sixth place (1943), fell by the wayside (1944) and then re-entered the list with a bang in 1945, copping once again the sixth position they lost to Paramount's Musical Parades in 1944.

Such a record can prove only one thing: that regardless of the raised eyebrows and the expressions of complete aloofness from such slapstick vulgarity on the part of critics and sophisticates, the Three Stooges are highly esteemed by the men, women and children who lay their cash on the box-office line from one end of the country to the other. And that, in the long run, is what counts when the exhibitor is planning programs that will please his patrons.

Paramount's Speaking of Animals was a seventh-place winner in 1942, then dropped completely out of the short subject running until 1945, when the series again came back in exactly the same position. To account for the subjects' absence from the Leaders poll ratings during 1943-44 is to surmise that, as stated before, the public was too war-weary for other than cartoons, topical reels and out-and-out comedies. Despite the fact that the series was nosed out by other series whose votes, the tally sheet showed, were more numerous, one has only to enter a theatre where a Speaking of Animals short is being shown to get an idea of the convulsively laugh-provoking qualities of the series. Now that exhibitors' votes have reinstated them in the top ten of the Leaders short subject poll, we can look forward to having them there in the years to come.

Slowly But Surely Pushing Their Way Up

One is reminded of the fable about the tortoise and the hare when studying the position of George Pal's Puppetoons, a new form of animation which assumed Leaders calibre in 1942 when they placed ninth in the poll that year. In 1943 they barely managed to remain in the top ten by finishing up in tenth place after the votes had been tallied. The following year (1944), for one of those reasons one can only conjecture upon, they dropped out of the running. Now, in the 1945 poll, they are back again, this time in eighth place. Like the tortoise who plods slowly along while the hare whizzes past, the George Pal Puppetoons are slowly but surely pushing their way up the popularity ladder.



From fourth place in 1944, the March of Time dropped to the ninth rung of the ladder in 1945, placing just ahead of Paramount's two-reel Musical Parades. The peacetime trend to "escape" shorts might explain the March of Time drop, but the descent of the Musical Parades from sixth place in 1944 to tenth in 1945 is attributable not only to the decline of musicals as favorite types of short subjects but also to the fact that, with the double-feature policy still as prevalent as ever, few theatres have the time on their programs to permit a 20-minute subject. That the Musical Parades have a place in the top ten, despite this drawback, is a tribute to their outstanding production values, not the least of which is Technicolor, outstanding entertainment artists, well-contrived plots and good direction.

LEADING STARS

In connection with this presentation of the results of the national poll wherein were determined the Leading stars as reported here, it is quite worth while to call attention to a very salient fact, and that is the general importance to the industry of the actors and actresses who prove, at the box-offices of the country's theatres, that they have earned the favor and approval of the majority of motion picture patrons.

These players, then, are the artists and personalities to whom the industry turns when it seeks a representative to speak for it—in terms of entertainment—from the screens of the theatres. It is only fitting, as well as good business, for the industry to take stock of its personalities in order that merit may be recognized and proper tribute paid to the distinguished Leaders of filmdom's star galaxy.

The naming of the Leaders in this poll is done wholly as a "write in" vote by exhibitors who consult the box-office records of their theatres for the candidates they nominate for Leader distinction.

Here then, are the stars that the theatremen name as the greatest drawing attractions of the 1944-1945 season as determined by a national poll conducted by Showmen's Trade Review.

Republic's famous "King of the Cowboys" reaffirms his eminence as one of the all-time outstanding personalities of the screen by capturing for the third consecutive year the laurels as Number One box-office attraction in the western star class. At the same time Roy Rogers ranks again this year, for the third successive year, as one of the top ten box-office stars.

Bill Elliott

Progress to top-flight ranking as a western star has been made steadily over a period of several years by the gifted, magnetic Wild Bill Elliott who this year comes into the spotlight as runner-up for first position among the cowboy personalities. It is a class in which competition is, always has been, very keen, and to win such honors as Elliott carries off this year in the Leaders competition requires outstanding talent and acting skill.

THE LEADERS SURVEY

Strong Backing for Peacetime Successor to WAC; Overseating Threat Seen If Heavy New Competition Enters Smaller Situations; War Has Not Changed American Filmgoers' Apathy Toward Foreign Films, Exhibitors Say

An overwhelming majority of the exhibitors of the country favor creation of an organization to carry on in peace times some of the activities which were performed by the theatre division of the War Activities Committee; British producers face the necessity of building up demand for their pictures via a consistent flow of popular-type product if there is to be any increase in screen time for their films in American theatres; practically all new theatre building outside the metropolitan areas will have to replace existing theatres or result in a serious over-seating situation in such locations—these are some of the factors developed in the annual poll of exhibitors conducted by Showmen's Trade Review in connection with the publication of Leaders of the Motion Picture Industry.

From the end of the war in the Pacific up to the pre-holiday season of 1945, there was little noticeable change in general theatre conditions from those which obtained during the war years of terrifically increased attendance, tremendous extension of the playing time of top-grade product in the key run and first run situations and consequent shrinkage of picture availabilities.

Regarding this latter point of a cut in the amount of product which was available to exhibitors before the war, one of the questions which elicited the highest percentage of positive reply in the Leaders Poll was that concerning the value of re-issues to bulk out the available attractions for theatres which must make more than one change of program per week.

Some of the big pictures of the past came back to the theatres this year to register very handsome grosses—in many instances even bigger grosses than the pictures ran up when they played the same theatres as original releases.

Re-Issues Help in Emergency

However, importantly as the re-issues figured last season in helping the situations which were starved for product, only 55 per cent of these theatres found the older pictures adequate as substitutes for new features; the other 45 per cent declaring that attendance dropped off from normal with each re-issue attraction.

The pictures which won top place as the most successful re-issues last season were "The Call of the Wild," the Clark Gable starring vehicle of the early thirties, which 20th-Fox re-issued this past season; and Paramount's re-issue of the C. B. DeMille Technicolor action picture "Northwest Mounted."

The experience at the community and neighborhood theatres during these years of heavy general attendance and diminished flow of product should serve as a final and convincing answer to those producers of the high-bracket films who continually agitate for a policy of "fewer and better" pictures. The exhibitors in the smaller situations will go along with those producers all the way on a policy of "better" films, but they very easily can prove that, no matter how big the attraction, there is no possibility of pictures playing their theatre more than half a week, for the very good reason that potential patronage is completely exhausted—down to the last possible admission—after three days run at their theatres. Consequently, they cannot get along on "fewer" pictures.

While on the subject of the later-run situations, it is worth noting that our survey indicates that while less than 20 per cent of such situations have shown any increase in attendance since the end of the war, 79 per cent are paying higher rentals for current product, the increases over rentals for the same grade of pictures in the previous season ranging from 10 to 25 per cent, according to the exhibitors in the small, subsequent run situations.

Say Percentage Is One-Way Partnership

These exhibitors, also, are the chief sufferers from the growing percentage demands of the distributors. The very logical claim that percentage arrangements are fair since they permit the theatre owner to realize a profit on his showing, comes a cropper, these smaller exhibitors continue to point out, when the amount of the return is balanced against the very inadequate returns on the less popular attractions. Their claim is that percentage that would go down the line from top to bottom, with a consistent profit on all engagements considered as the basis of film deals between the distributor and the producer, would be necessary in order to justify the percentage argument. However, they point out, there is no "partnership" between the distributor and the exhibitor on those bookings or engagements of the flat rental weaker films, with the theatre taking the loss. They argue that the exhibitor must have that extra profit from a big attraction to offset his meager return, or losses, on the in-between-big-attraction bookings. For years this has been the issue which has created that gulf which exists between seller and buyer in the industry. It is as active, as potent an ingredient of intra-industry turmoil today as at any time in this history of the business, as indicated so forceably by our survey this year. That is the reason why 63 per cent, according to our survey, of the small operators would rather pay a top flat rental than make a percentage deal.

The vast majority of exhibitors in the country are convinced that there is danger of a serious over-seating situation should there be heavy new theatre construction projected on the basis of competition with existing theatres rather than as a replacement for older, outmoded buildings. According to these indicators there is little need for increase of theatre population, so to say. The number of theatres regularly in commercial operation over the country has remained static for many years. Apparently the exhibitors feel that it should so remain for many more years. Shifting population, of course, has opened up many situations in which the present seating is inadequate, or at least where there is opportunity for healthy competition based on a potential market.

Ready, Eager and Willing to Expand

Regarding the new theatre building and renovation work—which will roll up into a tremendous national total—the theatre field appears to feel even more acutely than most other fields the effects of delayed re-conversion. Lack of information as to the types of materials and equipment for various features of the building and the operation of film showhouses has put the theatre owners in the mood to postpone final decisions on expansion plans which have been in process of development during the past two years and for which the financing is earmarked and ready for the "go" signal.

The reference, earlier in this report, to little change in general conditions since the end of the war, was to such facts as exhibitor replies to questions concerning the manpower and product situations. About 20 per cent of the exhibitors reported an easing of the help situation, with a high proportion of the other 80 per cent declaring that the manpower situation, if anything was a little more acute at the beginning of the new movie season than during the war. The product flow became no easier for 75 per cent of the exhibitors, according to our survey. The same war-connected conditions were cited as responsible for the tight product condition. These were the shortage of prints and continued extension of runs in the key situations.

More Screen Time for Imported Films

Theatremen throughout the country have become more international-minded in so far as the conditions of their own business are concerned. That is due to the emphasis which has been put upon foreign distribution of Hollywood films and the implications that unless markets abroad again are opened up to American pictures, the grade of the attractions will lessen or rental costs to the exhibitors here will go even higher.

One of the chief excuses of foreign countries for putting limitations on entry of American films to their markets (that their pictures get little or no playing time in the U. S. theatres) has been heard and noted by the exhibitors in this country. While the American exhibitors are not of the opinion that they are supposed to be any more than good business men and are not called upon to personally make sacrifice in order to promote international goodwill at the expense of their business, there is no doubt that they are entirely willing to give foreign product all the playing time it can win for itself in competition with American pictures.

Those foreign producers who do not find very much encouragement in the volume of bookings their pictures get in this market, had better realize that it's up to them—not to the American exhibitor—to make pictures which will win favor of theatregoers here, say the theatremen.

On the basis of our survey, the best a foreign-made film can hope for here at present is a circulation of less than five per cent of that realized by bookings for the average good (not big) Hollywood film. This is so because the American theatregoer must be "unsold" on his adverse opinion (based on his own past experience with foreign films) before the exhibitor can begin to sell the prospective patron on the idea that a foreign-made film is good entertainment.

It will take patience, and a lot of good product (plus some high-powered showmanship in behalf of British or other foreign screen personalities) to make the foreign-made pictures a desirable booking for the average American film theatre, exhibitors declare.

Even the very exceptional pictures which have been made abroad, the theatremen point out, never succeeded in winning general and widespread popularity in this country, and they say that when the time comes that Britain or any other country can make pictures which have won such acclaim here as Hollywood pictures have won abroad, then the foreign product will get its screen time here.

American Product Still Far in Front

The war, apparently, has had no effect on this situation. Despite the fact that information films and documentaries of our Allies have been widely circulated here during the war, the exhibitors declare that they cannot find any more interest in, or acceptance of, British or other foreign pictures than existed before the war.

In addition to improvement of the pictures (not "artistic" improvement, but a change to the type of entertainment treatment which marks the majority of the Hollywood films) the British and other foreign film producers, exhibitors declare, must go into action in the American market with a more colorful brand of showmanship in support of the stars and personalities associated with the pictures they wish to have presented in American Theatres.

American filmgoers have been accustomed to the kind of "glamor treatment" which is given to Hollywood stars, directors, producers, and the exhibitors queried in our poll declare the American picturegoers must be given some of that same "glamor" about the foreign personalities before there will be a receptive audience for the kind of showmanship the average theatre employs to win local favor for a film attraction.

Support for National Organization

A national organization to take over some of the functions performed by the theatres division of the War Activities Committee has been projected in rather complete outline within the past two months. This move, while sponsored by many theatremen who have been identified with the WAC or with national industry affairs, apparently reflects widespread opinion on the part of the average exhibitor for some agency to continue the work of public relations which was performed by the WAC during the war.

According to our survey, 70 per cent of the exhibitors favor such an organization in principle, with only 18 per cent definitely opposed to formation of such an agency, and 12 per cent have no opinion for or against in advance of concrete proposals for such an organization.

There is some qualification on the part of 7 per cent of the total of 70 per cent who favor the idea in principle. That qualification is that the organization must be free from affiliated circuit domination. But the big majority approving the idea nevertheless appears emphatic in agreement that a great

amount of good can be accomplished for the theatremen generally through some agency that will function as a medium of contact with outside activities such as charity drives, requests from official quarters for circulation of sponsored films, national and state legislative proposals which affect theatres and, above all else, the problems of taxes levied on admissions by federal, state and municipal governments.

In discussing the proposal for a successor to the WAC for peacetime, many of the exhibitors refer back to what they considered a slipshod job of representation when the current 20 per cent amusement tax bill was up for discussion by the solons in Washington. Many of them still feel that it was the inadequacy of the industry's representations before the Committees in Washington as much as anything else that resulted in the 20 per cent tax, which exhibitors say is oppressive and a definite hardship to the theatre.

Seek More Representation in Taxation

The rather general belief—as indicated by our survey—that there will have to be a scale-down in admissions before long, makes the exhibitor especially apprehensive at the present time with respect to the whole tax situation. The current 20 per cent, so far as the exhibitor can make out, will be maintained by the government for some time. That, in the smaller situations especially, is too high, the theatremen claim. But on top of the 20 per cent there are state and municipal levies in many cities and towns, and there also appears to be a wave of tax legislation aimed at theatre admissions sweeping across the country.

This apprehension explains the very solid backing which appears to exist among the rank and file of exhibitors for some such organization as has been proposed to carry on more or less in the same tradition as the theatres division of the WAC —that is, an organization which will be capable of dealing with matters developing outside the industry but which have vital bearing on the welfare of the individual theatreman's business operations.

Failing the successful organization of some such unit as has been proposed as a successor to the WAC, there will be an overwhelming demand for a single national exhibitor organization—according to indications revealed by our survey, which shows that 73 per cent of exhibitors who now are members of exhibitor organizations favor a single national organization, and that 52 per cent of those exhibitors who are not members of an organization favor a single national exhibitor organization and would join such an organization.

The backing for an idea such as has been proposed, according to our survey, would indicate that many leaders in the industry have been not too well informed on general exhibitor sentiment, because whereas two years ago there was a wave of outspoken suggestion for a future peace-time organization to follow up in the functions performed by the WAC in connection with the war duties of the industry, these met with some rather cold receptions in certain exhibitor quarters. The result was that some of the men who spoke in favor of such an eventual move, dropped the idea like a hotcake, and many observers came to the conclusion that the issue was anything but a popular one.

Turning from the generalized topics of industry policy to matters of specific showmanship import, the Leaders survey comes to the concluding phase of its sounding of exhibitor opinion on the subject of pre-selling of films by distributors via the usual mediums of newspapers, magazines and radio.

For many years the Leaders survey has included questions on this subject, because the amount of money spent by the industry for advertising to consumers is so great that we believe nothing could be more important than constant check on exhibitor experience and observation—right where the results are visible—as to the most effective means of building up an advance audience for a picture that is going to play the theatres of the country.

Where Advertising Pays Best

This year, as has happened consistently in the past, the average exhibitor says that general magazine advertising tops both newspapers and radio as a medium for selling his patrons on a picture he is going to play.

It is rather remarkable, in some respects, that the magazines have been able to maintain their position over newspapers and radio during the past two years, because one of the chief handicaps to such advertising is the spread of time which occurs between pre-release of the picture and its general circulation in all parts of the country.

In former years when there was such a thing as a national release and magazine advertising, which must be scheduled and even printed long before date of actual publication—there was a means of timing the magazine selling to appearance of the picture at the theatres that could be attended by the readers of these Saturday Evening Post, Life, Liberty and the other magazines. During the last year particularly, there has been a very wide differential of time between appearance of the advertisements in the national magazines and the showing of the pictures at the theatres along the line from first to subsequent run. Despite this, the exhibitors in the late run situations give the general magazines as big an edge over newspapers and radio as do showmen in the earlier run situations, according to results developed in our survey.

Campaigning Via Newspaper Ads

The newspaper advertising in metropolitan dailies in connection with first run engagements in the key cities come second in exhibitor estimate of the efficacacy of advertising mediums for pre-selling a picture. The success of the picture in its first run of a territory, naturally, determines to large extent the success of that picture in its subsequent runs. However, the exhibitors in the subsequent runs declare that a vigorous newspaper campaign in the first run as follow-up to a strong national magazine campaign sells tickets for the picture when it reaches their houses.

Radio rates third, but as during the past three years, it is closing up on the newspapers in the percentage of voting by the exhibitors in our poll. The spread betwen general magazines and newspapers has remained about static over the past several years, whereas the preference expressed for radio by the exhibitors has mounted at the expense of votes for newspapers as a pre-selling medium for their engagements on a given picture.

LEADING EXPLOITATION OF 1945

Flash-Back Over Leading Showmanship Campaigns of 1945 Proves War Restrictions Sharpened Rather Than Dimmed Exploitation Craftsmanship of Theatremen and Exploiteers of Distributor Firms

20th CENTURY-FOX—"Captain Eddie"

One of those "saturation" exploitation campaigns which were so highly developed under the unrestricted conditions of pre-war "normalcy," found its way into national consciousness when the exploitation forces of 20th Century-Fox went into concentrated action to ballyhoo the premiere of "Captain Eddie" in the city of Columbus, Ohio, in July 1945.

Starting about two months in advance, a corps of 20th-Fox exploiteers set up headquarters in Columbus and immediately obtained promises of complete cooperation of Government office holders from Governor Frank J. Lausche, Mayor James A. Rhodes of Columbus, and other officials. They formed local committees of Columbusites consisting of leading merchants, newspaper and radio station owners.

The "Captain Eddie" World Premiere Committee, headed by Congressman Jerry Vorys of Ohio, directing most of the activities was sparked by Sid Phillips, advertising manager of the Ohio State Journal and chairman of the Columbus Advertising Club.

Sub-committees handled newspaper publicity, radio publicity photographs, etc. Others handled decoration of the city's buildings, streets, etc., all constantly nudged into action and assisted by 20th-Fox exploiteers, each assigned specific duties.

Striking the note that was to set the planned campaign into motion, Governor Lausche talked on the "We, the People" radio show in which he proclaimed "Captain Eddie" day. He was followed next day by a similar proclamation from Mayor Rhodes. Then the campaign really started to move.

"Welcome Captain Eddie" signs, banners and stickers were plastered throughout the city. A 40-foot illuminated Hat-in-the-Ring insignia appeared on a down-town corner and even the State Capitol Building was decorated from dome to foundation with bunting and huge blow-ups of Captain Eddie and Fred MacMurray who portrays him in the film.

On the state-house grounds surrounding the Capitol, thousands of persons saw the exhibits set up there, including a collection of 20-odd old time automobiles. Another display demonstrated a life raft similar to the one in which Rickenbacker was marooned for 21 days and the afternoon before the premiere a helicopter landed directly behind the city hall and was set up on the State House lawn to join the other exhibits. All of the displays featured "Welcome Captain Eddie" signs and the State House gardener fashioned a similar greeting from the turf and grass on the lawn. A 40-foot sign behind a fountain gave forth the same greeting.

Several hundred store windows carried streamers, stickers and door mats carrying the familiar greeting and more than 40 complete store windows used special displays, based on the theme of the celebration.

Scores of points in the city bore side-walk stenciled greetings, using a 6-foot Hat-in-the-Ring insignia and more than 20 city blocks were decorated with over-hanging buntings, signs and banners. All street cars and buses in the city carried similar greetings and hundreds of light poles were decorated with 6-foot shields bearing photographs of Rickenbacker and MacMurray.

Rickenbacker's first employer, the Federal Glass Company, made up a special tumbler, bearing a greeting and the Hat-in-the-Ring insignia and distributed 6,000 of them to bars, restaurants, hotels and clubs.

More than 25 special ads appeared in newspapers, magazines, etc., and newsreels recorded highlights of the campaign and celebration as it progressed.

Honors from universities were heaped on Rickenbacker, when he arrived in town for the celebration, flanked by movie stars, Carole Landis, James Dunn, Peggy Ann Garner, Lloyd Nolan and Richard Conte; producers George Jessel and Christy Walsh. A park was dedicated in his honor and Capitol Square was renamed Rickenbacker Square.

Rickenbacker appeared with Governor Lausche on the Ted Malone air show.

WARNER BROS.—"God Is My Co-Pilot"

The three-point policy of high executive achievement—"organize, deputize, supervise"—was put into effect with tremendous results by the Warner Bros. publicists who tackled the job of staging a "scene of the picture" premiere for "God Is My Co-Pilot" in Macon, Georgia, the home town of Col. Robert Lee Scott, author of the best-seller novel on which the picture is based.

The seeds that later flourished into one of the really great exploitation campaigns of industry history were sewn in December 1944, when a committee of Macon's leading citizens visited the Warner office in New York to persuade H. M. Warner, visiting in the East at that time, and other executives of the company that the city of Macon would be the logical place at which to premiere the story of a local Macon boy, Col. Robert Lee Scott, author of the story which was the basis of the Warner production. The committee consisted of Mayor Charles L. Bowden, City Attorney Ellsworth Hall and Carmage Wells, publisher of Macon's two newspapers.

A "gasless" parade—the event took place during the fuel shortages of wartime—was one of the many features that rolled up a tremendous total ballyhoo for the premiere of "God Is My Co-Pilot" in Macon, Georgia. It was an event that took the town by storm, as indicated by the two photos above showing section of the parade and a shot outside the L & J Grand Theatre.

The Macon city fathers were informed that Warners had set a policy, in cooperation with the government, but that it could be arranged for a few of the company's stars to make a nation-wide Bond selling tour which would have its climax at Macon to coincide with the premiere. Under this arrangement Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale and Janis Paige went to Georgia to take part in the state-wide celebration that ensued. Red Cross activities along the line of the tour also benefited by the players' presence. Under the aegis of the State of Georgia and the City of Macon, travel arrangements were made for the stars.

Six weeks before the premiere Warners sent its top exploitation and special events men to Macon to prepare for what has turned out to be a veritable maelstrom of newspaper and radio publicity, window displays, a gigantic parade and other publicity activities.

The first thing organized by the Warner men when they arrived in Macon was a series of committees to handle arrangements, under the theory that the more local talent whose names appeared as committee members, the greater would be the results. All committees reported to the Warner on-the-spot man who kept more or less in the background but whose creative ideas and active prodding kept things rolling at an increasingly greater pitch.

Following conferences with the Mayor, the committee (called "World Premiere God Is My Co-Pilot Committee") appointed Philip Buchheit, business manager of the Telegraph and News, Macon's two newspapers, its chairman.

An Editorial Committee—so named to keep the curse of the word "publicity" as far away as possible—was appointed with the active cooperation and orders of Buchheit, headed by Susan Myrick, Sunday Editor of the Telegraph and News. Miss Myrick, having served as technical advisor for "Gone With the Wind," was motion pitcure wise, as well as being in a strategic position to flood both newspapers with stories about the campaign's progress—which she did, and how she did!

Ellsworth Hall, City Attorney and one of the members of the committee responsible for bringing the premiere to Macon, was made head of the Entertainment Committee. He, in turn, named 10 young married business men of the community as members of this committee.

Son Sammon, director of athletics for the Macon school system, was appointed by the Mayor as chairman of the Transportation Committee and made responsible for providing transportation for other committee members and for the Warner representatives. Jack Robinson, Sears Roebuck manager, was appointed deputy chairman of this all-important committee.

The Parade Committee had as its chairman E. K. Cargill, promotion manager of the newspapers, who enlisted the aid of the Chief of Police as his assistant!

All of the committees functioned perfectly resulting in more than 80,000 persons participating in the premiere day activities which taxed the abilities of the police department and other officials to keep the eager crowds from stampeding to see the parade, Col. Robert Lee Scott, the movie stars and the public officials who were responsible for the celebration.

Lucas & Jenkins contributed manpower for the premiere and preparations for the celebration in the person of Lamarr Swift, city manager for the theatre company and his entire staffs of the company's five theatres in Macon. One of Mr. Swift's first moves was to change the name of Lamarr Park, named for a member of his family, to Scott Park in honor of Colonel Scott.

As the committees began to function reports of their progress appeared in ever increasingly important space in both of Macon's newspapers.

Activities took on such importance that every daily newspaper in the State of Georgia assigned at least one reporter to be on the ground to cover the event. During the last week, just before the premiere, Warner's headquarters was overrun with out-of-town reporters and cameramen anxious to record anything new for their readers The result was thousands of persons from Atlanta, Augusta and other Georgia cities came to Macon the night of the premiere to attend the picture's showing or—unable to buy tickets for the theatre—to attend the Junior League Ball, following the show, at the Civic Auditorium. The 5,000 capacity auditorium was filled to overflowing, by the way, at $5.00 per ticket, the proceeds of which went to Army Air Forces Aid Society, as did the $10,000 netted from the Grand Theatre premiere which had been sold out for days in advance at $10.00 a ticket, with no passes!

The highlights of the entire celebration were the mammoth parade through five miles of decorated streets and culminating at the City Hall, and the Chinese Ball, sponsored by the Junior League of Macon, but which brought in Junior League members from all over Georgia, thus making it a state-wide event. Publicity for the ball was recorded in the local society columns in the cities from which the young ladies and their escorts came to attend the affair.

The window display contest was sponsored by the Retail Merchants Association which donated War Bond prizes for the best window displays and also to writers of letters who gave their choice of the best window display with an accompanying description of the window's contents and their reason for making their selections. The contest was a feature of the campaign and resulted in reams of newspaper copy promoting it. More than 50 of the downtown windows were set up by professional decorators, so great was interest in this phase of the celebration.

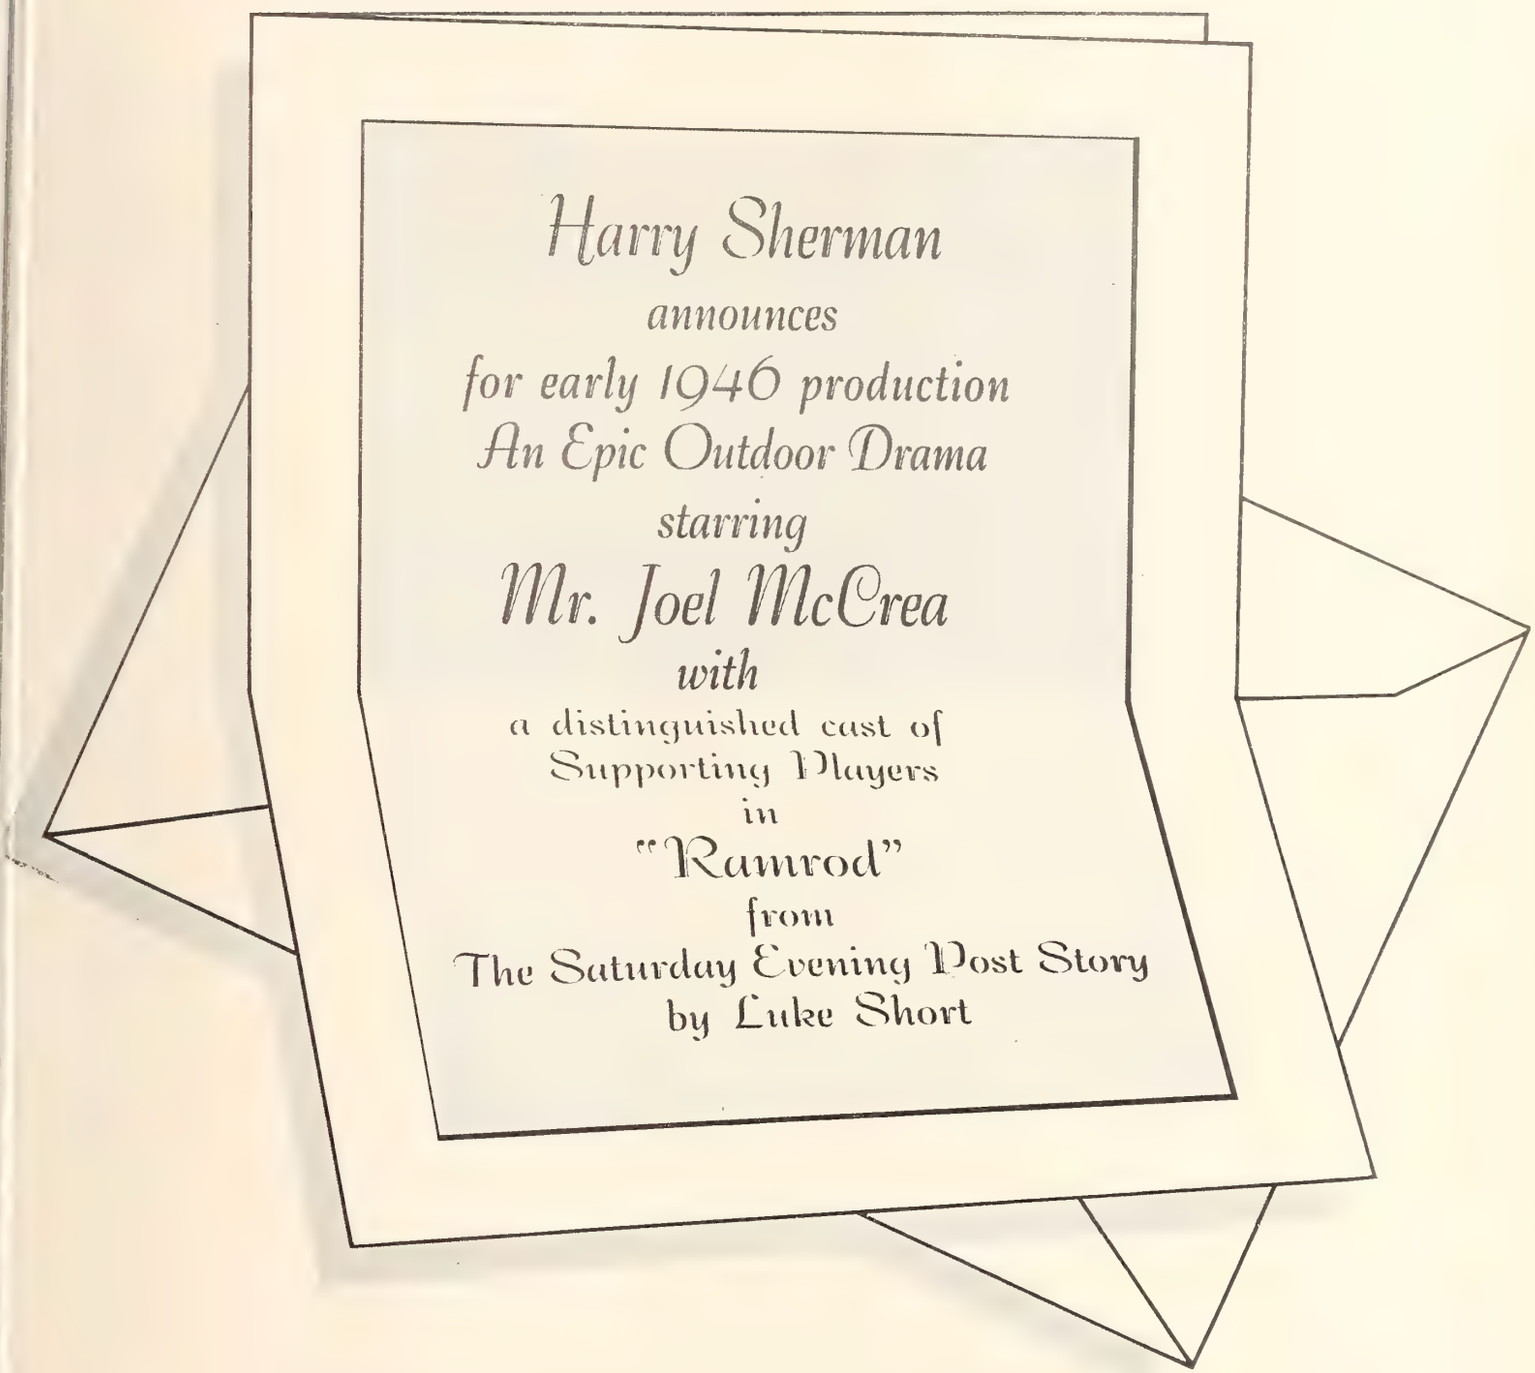
Macon residents along the line of the parade's march decorated their homes, too, just to be in keeping with the city-wide participation to honor Col. Scott, the movie stars, and the picture.

A large delegation of Chinese from Augusta, Georgia, made up two 40-foot dragons for the parade and were active in manipulating the grotesque, oriental effigies during the parade activities—this in spite of the fact that the New York City annual Chinese New Year's celebration parade had been called off because no dragon was available!

COLUMBIA—"A Song To Remember"

One of the industry's most carefully planned and efficiently set up exploitation campaigns broke early in 1945 with a force that mounted over a period of many weeks as the national sweep of Columbia's tremendous show-selling job for "A Song to Remember" rolled from town to town and city to city.

Highlighted by the "George Sand Memorial Talent Search," in which 86 member stations of the Columbia Broadcasting System cooperated with the distributor (as well as independent stations in cities not covered by CBS stations) and the Jo Copeland fashions tie-up with 34 department stores in as many key cities, the campaign had notably wide scope.



Newspapers and department stores in many cases tied their promotional efforts directly with the CBS stations giving coverage to the "Talent Search." School systems accepted the Sigmund Spaeth transcription in which the "tune detective" discussed Chopin's music as the basis for many modern compositions. The transcriptions' acceptability amazed even the Columbia exploiteers.

Victor Records, Revlon Lipstick, The Hattie Carnegie hat shop, Shire-Tex Slacks, Glenwear's "Nocturnal" Blouse, Coro Costume Jewelry, Lux Soap, Serta Mattresses, Max Factor, a motion picture book edition, were some of the national tie-ups available for local exploitation.

The Victor Record tie-up had unique aspects not usually included in this type of promotion, including the use of radio, newspaper advertising, direct mail, window displays and publicity in dealer and consumer publications.

The Revlon tie-up resulted in the manufacture of a new shade of lipstick, "Scarlet Slipper." The picture's title was used in all advertising connected with the new cosmetic. All stores committed for the fashion promotion featured the cosmetic as part of their campaigns. Thousands of other Revlon outlets in cities where the fashion promotion could not set up used window display material distributed by the manufacturer.

Seven thousand Shire-Tex Slacks dealers were contacted by the manufacturer in an arrangement by which Merle Oberon was featured in display material and advertising.

"A Song to Remember" was finished by Columbia early in the summer of 1944 after seven years of preparation. Widespread national publicity on the picture started to appear early in May, 1944, and continued in newspapers, fan and national magazines with "breaks" of four, five and six pages. Coverage included nearly 200 special stories, photos in full color, fashion layouts, reviews, interviews, features, pictorial strips, production stories, musical features and almost every other angle of the picture's myriad publicity possibilities.

The Jo Copeland fashion tie-up was unique. Miss Copeland designed a series of new fashions, adapted from the costumes worn in the picture. Outlets for her creations were primarily in 34 of the country's leading department stores. The New York Times published a Saks Fifth Avenue fashion ad of three-quarters of a page in a Sunday issue. The same ad was repeated the following Sunday in the New York Herald-Tribune! Saks devoted seven Fifth Avenue windows to the fashions. Fashion magazines and dress trade papers were generous with space.

Other important features of the New York campaign included the Revlon lipstick promotion, the exclusive Hattie Carnegie hat shop created a George Sand Tophat and devoted three complete windows to its display. W. & J. Sloane dressed its best Fifth Avenue window with a display of 19th Century furniture. Chopin manuscripts were the basis of another Fifth Avenue window in Scribner's Book Shop.

In each of the six cities where the picture opened up to the end of January the Sigmund Spaeth transcription was given free playing time. In San Francisco alone, the transcription received 11 gratis playings, taking in every network station in that city. New York stations gave the transcriptions considerable free time, also.

Numerous personal radio appearances by featured players in "A Song to Remember" gave the picture air plugs starting last fall and occasionally continuing even now. During Cornel Wilde's recent trip to New York he was spotted on six radio shows by the Columbia home office.

The most important part of the New York campaign, as it is in other key cities, was the "George Sand Memorial Talent Search." The contest sought America's outstanding dramatic actress and CBS stations as well as other network stations and independent outlets, including WHN in New York, gave it considerable free radio time, resulting in a response about 40 per cent ahead of the same producer's "Cover Girl" contest.

The Sigmund Spaeth transcription was played in 180 New York City high, junior high and vocational schools.

The high schools in St. Louis presented the record to every music class for a period of ten days. Grade and high schools in Buffalo, San Francisco, Oakland, New Orleans and Cincinnati also included the transcription for playing time before music classes, assemblies and for the discussion of the music teachers themselves.

WARNER BROS.—"Rhapsody In Blue"

Scoring for a third time during the year, the Warner Bros. publicity and exploitation forces again took the spotlight during the month of June, when an exceptionally thorough-going job of showmanship was used with the music angle that formed the entire fabric of the company's "Rhapsody In Blue" picture based on the life, but more especially the music, of George Gershwin. Picture showmen many times before had tapped the rich exploitation wellsprings of the music field, but in the case of "Rhapsody In Blue," the film drumbeaters rolled up results to a tremendous total of national coverage.

Far in advance of the New York premiere, the Warner exploitation crew lined up representatives of the entire music industry to attend a luncheon at which plans to honor George Gershwin were discussed and a program arranged for a series of musical events. Paul Whiteman was named honorary chairman of George Gershwin Jubilee Week which was to be held just prior to the New York opening of the picture. Nearly every musical aggregation in radio cooperated in this program by presenting salutes to Gershwin with suitable plugs for the picture and its New York date at the Hollywood Theatre. These in the majority were musical programs with national hook-up arrangements, reaching millions of listeners. One of the most important aspects of the entire campaign was that in addition to exploiting the New York opening, it has focussed national attention on George Gershwin's music, thus calling attention by the picture itself for future local value.

Two "stories within a story" were interesting aspects of the New York campaign. Feature writers of the World-Telegram and the Herald-Tribune became interested enough in commercial tie-ups to write stories about these features. The World-Telegram writer devoted four columns of story and art space to the Bonwit-Teller eight windows displays of gowns and lingerie, each named after one of the company's songs. She called her article "Rhapsody in Style." The Herald-Tribune writer went into the aspects of Giant Blueberries, describing a series of dishes prepared by the chef of the Hotel Roosevelt, where the waiters wore blue rosettes, and where the chef created a "Rhapsody in Blue" special dish, with blueberries as its main feature. Even Bleu cheese contributed to the special menu. Four columns of pictures and art comprised the article.

RCA Victor mailed display material to its dealers urging direct tie-ins with theatres when the picture arrives for local exhibition.

George Gershwin Jubilee Week: Paul Whiteman as honorary chairman lined up entire music industry, radio, theatre and allied fields for full week of tributes starting June 29.

Junior Gershwin Week: Public School 25, which Gershwin attended, held Junior Gershwin Jubilee Week.

Radio: Number of advance radio breaks, due largely to playing of popular Gershwin music, set new all-time record for radio-film cooperation, averaging more than 35 weekly for four weeks on coast-to-coast programs and reaching a peak with 40 Gershwin salutes on network shows during Jubilee Week.

Window Display: Most extensive coverage including Saks 34th Street, Arnold Constable on Fifth Avenue turned over all its eight windows. Bloomingdale, 30 Liggett stores, five Davega stores.

Times Square War Bond Auction: With Motorola's Handie-Talkie portable radio used for first time in conveying bids from the crowd to the bond booth, a three-hour George Gershwin Jubilee Bond Auction was held at Statue of Liberty in Times Square preceding film preview. Signal Corps men were assigned by Army to operate roving radios.

Saks-Fifth Avenue Concern: All-Gershwin musical program was presented at Saks Fifth Avenue store.

Library Exhibit: Exhibit of Gershwin manuscripts, pictures, paintings by composer and other material placed on view at New York Public Library.

Muzak Plugs: Gershwin compositions comprise 8 o'clock dinner hour music broadcast by Muzak throughout Gershwin Jubilee Week. Muzak's printed program for week also devotes cover to Gershwin and "Rhapsody."

Poster Contest: School of Industrial Art sponsoring a Gershwin Poster Contest among students.

Handie-Talkie Premiere Coverage: In addition to its use in War Bond Auction, Motorola's Handie-Talkie radio was employed for first time in newspaper coverage of a film premiere.

Hotel Roosevelt Brochure: Hotel Roosevelt, where Gershwin gave his first jazz concert in the Grill, put out attractive brochure on composer for distribution to guests, also for nationwide mailing.

Legit Theatre Salute: Orchestras in two legitimate theatres—the Henry Miller ("Dear Ruth") and Morosco ("Voice of the Turtle")—played Gershwin music during Jubilee Week.

Special Ads: Motorola placed two large ads in New York papers calling attention to first use of its Handie-Talkie at War Bond auction and preview.

WARNER BROS.—"Christmas In Connecticut"

The same organizational technique which succeeded so well in Warners' "God Is My Co-Pilot" campaign for that picture's premiere in Macon, was applied to an entirely different type of showmanship splurge by the company's publicists in the sparkling show-selling job done for the premiere of "Christmas in Connecticut" in the busy, typically Connecticut town of Norwalk. But while the "Co-Pilot" campaign attacked from many angles, the "Connecticut" campaign had just one angle—to help 100 overseas veterans celebrate Christmas in Connecticut during the month of August, because they had missed the preceding Christmas at home.

This basic idea was milked of every possible value to obtain tremendous local coverage and established a precedent in out-of-town newspapers, which in the case of the New York World-Telegram, carried a two-column front page story headed "Noel, Noel," with a Christmas border and when detailed angles of the campaign were being carried on in Norwalk! Other out-of-town newspapers, realizing the human interest value of the colorful, "almost fantastically romantic ballyhoo," gave generously of space to report syndicated wire stories of the Connecticut doings.

Just about three weeks in advance of the Connecticut celebration, the actual campaign got under way with the setting up of a giant billboard on the lawn in front of City Hall announcing the number of days to "Christmas in Connecticut." Enthusiasm spread fast as the merchants and the public injected a practical purpose in the event by establishing a campaign for early Christmas shopping. And nearly every merchant in the city decorated his store windows with Christmas displays. With the sun streaming down and the gals strolling the streets in play-suits and shorts, artificial snow, blue and green window lighting, Christmas trees, mistletoe and all of the appurtenances traditionally associated with the Yule season, became backgrounds for displays of gifts.

Warner Bros. exploitation men blended human interest with novelty when they caused a city-wide Christmas celebration in mid-August in the Connecticut city of Norwalk for the premiere of "Christmas in Connecticut." At right is view of a section of a parade which formed a procession two miles long. This was the lead-up to the spectacular gathering which drew thousands of people. This was one of the most picturesque and brilliant of the past year's exploitation drives. The campaign spread far across city lines, went even beyond the state-wide celebration which was proclaimed by Connecticut's governor, and caught on with the press to the extent that there was national coverage of the premiere.

The Warner crew organized committees to handle every angle of the campaign and then the publicity boys withdrew to the background.

Norwalk's newspapers went all out to support an event which the Governor had called "a great civic responsibility" and the Warner boys used every opportunity in the editorial offices to create news. The newspaper advertising departments embarked on their own to promote cooperative pages. This part of the campaign was, of course, suggested by the Warner men, who took no actual part in its execution,—merely directing the activities which resulted in six full pages in the Norwalk Sentinel, including the center doubletruck.

National radio programs played a large part in the preselling activities highlighted by a broadcast in which Barbara Stanwyck held a cross-country conversation with a wounded veteran. Governor Baldwin of Connecticut also spoke on a nationwide air show and proclaimed August 8th as "Christmas in Connecticut" to be followed the next day by mayors all over the state proclaiming the same day in their cities as "Christmas in Connecticut Day."

Detect and Collect, an American Broadcasting Company quiz program, featured servicemen and was tied in with the celebration. Margaret Arlen, a CBS air columnist was so enthusiastic about the plans that she devoted part of her talk several mornings to it. Don McNeil's Breakfast Club was heard via Mutual and on the day of the celebration the Yankee network carried a half-hour of the festivities, including a warm, congratulatory address by Governor Baldwin, followed by Mayor Robert B. Oliver of Norwalk. This broadcast included songs by Lawrence Tibbett, comedy by Col. Stoopnagle and interviews by the Governor and Mayor with local servicemen.

On the day that "Christmas in Connecticut" was celebrated, Warner Brothers really took over the town. Interest in the event was so high that a large group of newspapermen, magazine writers, photo and wire syndicate reporters went to the town from New York, Boston and Connecticut cities, and upon arrival were met by beautiful young Santa Claus assistants dressed in short red skirts.

The program went into full swing with a two mile long street parade with bands, Christmas floats, and all of the whoopla associated with parades and ceremonies. The parade and more than 20,000 persons then repaired to an adjoining park where a grandstand, platform, a real snow-man and an enormous Christmas tree had been set up. The radio program emanated from the platform and was followed by a jitterbug dance contest for servicemen and their girls; a rocking chair contest, distribution of gifts to the servicemen by Colonel Stoopnagle, Living Christmas Cards, an old fashioned square dance and then an ordinary dance session.

The day following the celebration the Norwalk Sentinel devoted its entire front and back pages to the event, with other stories on the society page, relegating such world-shaking events as the second atomic bomb exploding in Nagaski to the second page! Local interest was so high that, in the opinion of the editors, nothing surpassed news of the event!

UNITED ARTISTS—"I'll Be Seeing You"

For a versatile job of exploitation, the highly imaginative and shrewdly-slanted campaign set up for David O. Selznick's "I'll Be Seeing You" deserves a place high in the records of smart showmanship. The basic exploitation ideas were developed, and from them various exploitation specialists and theatremen in many situations throughout the country worked up outstanding selling drives.

In order to appreciate the flexibility of the campaigning for the picture, the campaign for the showing at the Capitol in New York must be considered in conjunction with drives in other large cities of the country by the Selznick-International and United Artists representatives for pre-release engagements of "I'll Be Seeing You."

In New York, approximately 6300 lines of free advertising, an unusual amount of free radio time, 52 full window displays, posters, radio contests, tent cards, menus, business clubs and other organizations aided in rounding out a really extensive campaign.

A highlight of this campaign was the Harman Watch tie-up with 300 dealers. It included five special window displays and window space in each of the remaining 295 stores! The watch tie-up also resulted in an unprecedented number of radio plugs when a Shirley Temple transcription was played 40 times a day for three solid weeks. A 600-line co-op ad in the drama section of The New York Times also was a feature of the watch company tie-up.

Arnold Constable, New York store, also hopped on the picture's title to introduce its "Miss Fifth Avenue Cotton Shop" with 3300 lines of co-op advertising and prominent Fifth Avenue window displays using the theme, " 'I'll Be Seeing You' at the Miss Fifth Avenue Cotton Shop, etc.," with plentiful use of picture stills and announcements about the stars and opening date at the Capitol Theatre.

Other New York stores saw the publicity value in the picture's title and capitalized upon it in a variety of ways. Lewis & Conger, for instance, found a way to promote the sale of hand made ceramics by decorating a window with spring flowers and a sign, "Spring Is Here," and "I'll Be Seeing You." Photos of the stars and scene stills were spread liberally. The tie-up was obscure, perhaps, but the store management was delighted, and certainly the Capitol Theatre showing benefited by the main window sign which named the picture, theatre and date of opening.

Woolworth stores devoted windows featuring blow-ups of Shirley Temple at a writing desk with the legend: ". . . A Personal Pledge to the Boys Overseas . . . I'll Be Seeing You when the war is won . . . In the meantime I'll Buy Bonds Every Payday . . . I'll . . . etc., etc." Picture title and playdate were featured prominently here, too.

A prominent florist shop devoted two large windows to the picture in one of which appeared a five feet high cut-out enlargement of Shirley Temple with other stills and a directory card.

The music was, of course, a natural tie-up. Many New York music stores featured the music, recordings, etc., in window displays.

The Childs Restaurant chain used IBSY star heads on 10,000 tent cards which were placed on the tables of their 34 New York stores. These tied up with the picture with the legend "Before the show . . . or after . . . I'll Be Seeing You at Childs." Numerous hotels and restaurants played up IBSY on menus with War Bond slogans such as, "Buy Buy Bonds . . . Bye, Bye Japs . . . By'n By I'll Be Seeing You with Ginger Rogers, etc., at the Capitol Theatre." Simple but good.

Two radio contests, one consisting of a simple guessing proposition in which several servicemen were gathered in one room of the radio station and three girl models in another. The servicemen were required to guess the near physical descriptions of the girls by the sound of their voices.

The Lions and Partridge Clubs of New York endorsed the picture in their weekly bulletins for one month as did the General Federation of Women's Clubs via bulletin to members.

For the Minneapolis showing at the Radio City Theatre, IBSY was tied up with a gigantic local promotion called "The Parade of Pennies," a fund being constantly augmented to show motion pictures of local football games and other civic events to Minneapolis servicemen abroad. A special morning matinee was arranged with all proceeds going to the special fund. The most influential newspaper columnist and radio commentator in that part of the country took the promotion under his wing and plugged it daily in his widely read column and in daily radio broadcasts. Many other important tie-ups were made in Minneapolis, but this was the highlight.

Just across the river in St. Paul the picture was launched by a USO promotion, sponsored by the Governor of the state and the Mayor of St. Paul as well as the director of the USO center. A special morning performance was arranged here, too, resulting in columns of extra newspaper space, several special broadcasts, chain phone calls about the picture to build receipts for the USO and other publicity benefits that could not have been obtained without this kind of tie-up.

A stunt used by sveral theatres in the early engagements of IBSY was placing ads in the personal columns of newspapers, such as: "MARY, I understand. 'I'll Be Seeing You' when you are free. ZACH." Other ads in similar vein followed on ensuing days culminating with one which read "ZACH. You've made me so happy! 'I'll Be Seeing You' tomorrow at the Liberty Theatre. MARY." The efficacy of these ads cannot be questioned. And they cost very little.

Detroit arranged an exceptionally timely contest with the Detroit Times in connection with the picture's showing at the Michigan Theatre in that city by which readers of the newspaper were asked, "What are the emotional problems of the serviceman returning to a woman's world? More specifically, what are the problems of Detroit men returning to Detroit homes—to the arms and hearts of wives, mothers, sisters? And how have Detroit women solved these problems?" The newspaper called it the "Heroes At Home" contest and devoted columns of space in it, believing that the questions asked of readers were important, aside from the reader interest such a contest would be bound to arouse.

Loew's Colonial Theatre in Reading also tied up the title and obtained approximately 550 free lines of cooperative advertising from a leading jewelry store. The copy read "I'll Be Seeing You at Schlecter's for that Diamond Ring," etc., and gave additional liberal space to a photo of Ginger Rogers, the picture's title and theatre playdate. Reading also localized the national Royal Crown Cola tie-up, obtained distribution of 300 window cards, especially printed by the local distributor.

Philadelphia was the scene of a stunt that enlisted the cooperation of a radio station, every newspaper in the city, the local Telephone Company, all USO centers and the amateur promotional aid of everyone in the city who has a friend or relative in uniform. Called "Servicemen's 'I'll Be Seeing You' Phone Calls" the event consisted of phone calls from servicemen to their out-of-town families from the lobby of the theatre.

Motion Picture Advertising Men Hit New High In Difficult Job of 'Glamorizing Glamor' With Outstanding Campaigns During 1945

MGM—"The Picture of Dorian Gray"

If the writers and the director who brought Oscar Wilde's "The Picture of Dorian Gray" to the screen had a delicate task to perform, there was no less adroit and sure touch needed when the advertising men of MGM settled down to plot the basis and indicate the treatment for the whole campaign that would be employed to exploit the picture at the theatres of the country.

At the outset of their deliberations, the advertising men concluded that the obvious and blatant treatment, such as a copy slant along the lines "The book that was read in secret, now on the screen," would be poison at the box-offices, as well as cause widespread harm in drawing the fire of the blue-noses who are always ready and eager to pounce upon the "movies."

What finally was developed for "The Picture of Dorian Gray" was a handling which amounted to two campaigns blended into one highly polished selling treatment, the combination consisting of the flaming youth approach and the murder-mystery horror angle.

Copy was patterned along the lines: "Youth must have its fling, taste of its absinthe-tinted cup of pleasure, live for the day"; and "Youth is a jewel to spend recklessly; The story of a man who lived and loved dangerously for pleasure alone, etc."

Mystery-Horror Slant

Highlighting the murder-mystery-horror slanted ads was copy that followed the general theme: "He killed what he loved most," and "Behind a fascinating face lived the soul of a killer." Other copy lines included in this optional angle of the campaign were: "Oscar Wilde's sensational story of a man's mad urge to destroy those women that he loved most" and "Behind locked doors in a secret room is the shocking revelation of a man's evil soul."

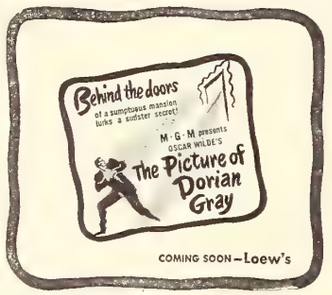
In selecting illustrations for the advertising, photographs were used sparingly and were chosen for their efficacy in carrying out the theme contained in the art work and in setting up a mood of realism, rather than conveying anything mystic or macabre. Realism was produced by having a love clinch almost photographically modern, suggesting youthful abandon in romance for its own sake.

In layouts and choice of lettering and type, MGM created a series of ads that reached almost third-dimensional quality, capable of standing almost alone on the amusements pages of newspapers. In the New York City campaign, the ads were coupled with the Capitol Theatre's stage show displays in such a way that the reader's eye was immediately carried to them. One important factor being a simple, wavering outline, adroitly set in from the newspaper's normal column rules! Crisp, actionful illustration and copy completed the selling job. Deep, narrow ads and wide shallow ones were prepared for this outstanding campaign thus to afford almost every type of operation sufficient freedom to adapt the ads to theatre budgets and newspaper space limitations.

The choice of hand lettering for display advertising was not a deliberate departure from established style, for MGM never has attempted to set up a distinguishing style, per se, but rather has adopted a lettering for its ability to sell a particular production or individual sales angles as the pictures came along. The lettering for this campaign had an indefinable quality that enhanced the mode created by copy and art.

A series of "Hold Over" ads allowed space for one critic's quotation. One of these boldly shouted an endorsement signed by the manager stating "You will remember this unusual picture as long as you live!"—strong stuff, but effective.



The posters which were devoid of selling copy except for the catchline, "Youth's adventure in living," depended upon illustration to do the job. The illustrations were somewhat similar to those used in newspaper ads but in the three-sheet the illustration reached real "adventure in living" heights, depicting a flimsily clad girl in the arms of a more than ardent, tail-coated swain. The one-sheet showed the same girl in a reclining position and in the impressionistic background is shown a giant pair of moist, leering, evil eyes. The six-sheet showed another love-clinch with somewhat more abandon than that in the newspaper ads, but was an adaptation of the illustration that ran throughout the newspaper ad campaign. The 24-sheet presented an illustration of the girl in a half-fainting pose clasped in the arms of a possessing lover.

20th-FOX—"A Royal Scandal"

In the laudable effort to convey to amusement seekers that the 20-Fox picture, "A Royal Scandal," which was produced by Ernst Lubitsch, has substance as well as froth and frivolity, the advertising men for the company that made and distributed the picture hit out in the right directions to achieve a campaign which merits a place in the spotlight of good advertising jobs well done.

It took a sure touch to put over a campaign that would "sell" filmgoers on "The Picture of Dorian Gray," but the MGM advertising men were equal to the task, as indicated by the variety of appeal in these four ads.

The adult prankishness, spice and "class" which is known as "the Lubitsch touch" was captured in terms of illustration, copy and treatment by the 20th-Fox advertising men in the press book material for "A Royal Scandal." A typical example of the gayety which marked the advertising is shown above.

Slanted to bring smiles with generous use of such adjectives as saucy, gay, tantalizing, luscious, blushing, amorous, shocking, romantic and scandalous, the copy writers really let themselves go in composing a compelling set of ads. And despite the sly attitude with which they approached the task, the reflection of the copy and the most of the picture itself was caught by artists, letterers, etc.

One still photo, the Tallulah Bankhead-Bill Eythe clinch, was the basis for several ads. In this one Tallulah and Bill acted as though they weren't acting, and the kiss was really something. One of the teasers stated in startling script that "this is the KISS a nation whispered about. . . ."

Another teaser showed the couple in an "about-to-do-something" pose with copy reading ". . . this is the Lubitsch Touch that means so much. . . ." The third teaser showed Tallulah, flat on the floor of her boudoir, and with Eythe looking indignantly toward her. . . . Copy stated: "This is the THRILL that knocked a Queen off her throne. . . ." And the fourth teaser showed Eythe looking at his Queen who stands, laughing, with a glass of champagne in her hand. Copy teases again by stating "This is the SHOCK that made a continent gasp. . . ."

The entire campaign gave readers something to giggle and chuckle about, which is a feat in itself but in addition it accomplished the all important mission of making readers want to know more about Catherine of Russia's "affairs de l'amour." An example of sly fun that did this job was one of the displays in which four separate illustrations banged away at readers with such audaciously delineated copy as ". . . Saucy as a Wink of the Eye . . . Scandalous as a Keyhole Peek" with smaller copy reading, ". . . a blushing romance, from Lubitsch—who gave you 'Heaven Can Wait'—about a woman whose heart couldn't." The largest illustration showed Tallulah and Eythe in a more or less intimate pose with a bit of yearning in their eyes and the real touch was added with a smaller head of Anne Baxter, her head and eyes turned directly to the reader with a balloon saying "One more kiss—and she'll give him the throne." Charles Coburn's startled expression was shown in this one, too, with a smaller pose of the two lovers indulging in a much more casual embrace than usual in the campaign.

Other copy followed the same line. One ad that occasioned more chuckles, perhaps, than any other was illustrated with Miss Bankhead and Eythe in a pose that obviously immediately follows an ignominious fall to the floor with the couple awkwardly entwined. The copy reads ". . . The Queen could do no wrong!—(But, brother, how she tried!)" Coburn's sly wink and a small cartoon of the Queen kissing the reluctant Eythe gave this one a touch almost of genius in conveying to readers just what the copy writers and artists meant to convey! Lines such as "Ah-h! A Tantalizing Lesson in Love" and "She Gave the World Something to Whisper About," "I haven't my crown and sceptre now . . . only my lips . . . my arms . . . but I still command" . . . were climaxed by declaring " 'A Royal Scandal' (is) . . . the blushing love affair of a dazzling Queen . . . whose every command he obeyed with pleasure!"

Holdover ads adhered to the same theme. One, for instance, headlined "Holding! 2nd Blushing Week!" and used the main clinch as illustration. Body copy in this was short and very much to the point. It read, "The delightful love affair of a glamorous queen and her handsome lieutenant . . . who obeyed her every command with pleasure!"

Layout and art decorations throughout were handled with a light touch, using thinly penned cartoons, lightly lined borders, etc., and generous amounts of white space to set them apart from competitive displays on amusements pages. The mixture of photographic montage, wash drawings and the pen and ink decorations were shrewdly conceived and carefully delineated, the headlines set apart to do their jobs by position rather than by heavy emphasis.

The teaser ads were almost entirely photographic illustration, set apart from the usual photographic presentation by a deckled edge and surmounting a cartouche outline of the picture's title.

PARAMOUNT—"A Medal for Benny"

An unusual advertising campaign for an unusual picture—that about sums up the treatment which was developed by Paramount for the newspaper selling on "A Medal for Benny," especially as applied to the New York engagement for the John Steinbeck screen play at the Rivoli Theatre.

There were several elements selected as primary appeals in the campaign worked up on this picture. These included a scorching love story—at least on the part of Arturo de Cordova for Dorothy Lamour (who, however, had been promised to the immortal Benny, and she was determined to keep that pledge, at least while Benny lived). These conflicts were cleverly played up in the advertising.

The misery, the squalor in which Steinbeck's Paisano characters lived was avoided, and the ads featured the inevitable chase of hero for heroine.

Particularly notable was the series of teaser advertisements. In the first of these there was a layout with an over-cut line reading "The whole town's talking about Benny." The illustration was a semi clinch of de Cordova and Lamour, while the copy used dialog from Steinbeck's script, which read: "Sure I like love, but not with you . . . I like it with Benny." The theme continued with copy reading, "Maybe he isn't true to me. . . . Maybe he'll make me big troubles . . . but Benny's the man I love. I'm going to wait for Benny."

The "service" advertisements in the more conventional style,

An unusual story called for unusual advertising treatment, and the Paramount advertising men made good on the assignment when they settled on the romantic appeal as a medium for expressing the striking conflicts which abounded in "A Medal for Benny." Here is one of the samples of the advance advertisements which featured the campaign for the picture at the Rivoli theatre, New York. The crisp, picturesque dialogue of the Steinbeck characters made ideal copy for the advertising designed to build advance interest in teaser style.

Joel McCrea

had sparkle and appeal and were directed toward arousing speculation about the torrid romance between the two stars. Four of the advertisements were slanted along these lines. One showed a series of progressively more ardent clinches with a headline reading, "The temperature is going up and up and up . . ." with the word "up" progressively larger until the final repetition showed the two letters bursting into heat waves. Body copy in this display read, ". . . de Cordova may be the wrong guy, but he says the right things at the right time to lovely Dorothy Lamour in John Steinbeck's sensational romance." Another ad in this series showed a clipping from a newspaper indicating that it had been torn from the weather forecast section. Copy read: "Very warm . . . with a heat wave coming any second." This display featured an illustration of the stars in a close embrace.

Arturo de Cordova was shown mischievously pleading with skeptical Dorothy Lamour in an illustration for the third ad in the "torrid romance" series with a headline . . . "That Love Pirate is prowling again . . . and his beautiful prey this time plays 'Hard to Get'" . . . Then across the illustration type matter read . . . "He's got IF . . . and She Says MAYBE!" The fourth ad in this group used the "He's Got If" line as its head and body copy gave a "remember" treatment to de Cordova with copy . . "The love pirate of 'Frenchman's Creek' is on the prowl again . . . and his only rival is Benny!"

The entire ad campaign was cleverly directed toward establishing the mythical Benny as, in the words of the copy "quite a guy," and by so doing it placed Lamour as a gal who liked love, in a nice way, of course, and who was not sure that Benny was her guy.

Other ads in the campaign were angled toward establishing the timely "conflict" about the girl promised to a servicemen being pursued by a man at home. Some of the headlines served to establish this angle immediately. For instance, "Joe's stinging kisses on her lips . . . but Benny's on her mind!" . . . set off one of the displays, illustrated with a hot clinch! Body copy in this one further built up the mental conflict angle: It read . . . "Kissing one man—dreaming of another . . . Has it ever happened to you? . . . What's the answer, when the boy you're promised to doesn't write—and the man at home won't wait?" Several ads in the campaign were along these lines.

The complete "A Medal for Benny" advertising campaign accomplished just what it set out to do. It established the fact that a torrid romance existed between the stars. It indicated a "conflict" angle . . . and the teaser campaign sold the fabulous story of Benny and his many sided personality as a fighter, ne'er-do-well, but particularly as a lover. The layouts were a departure from Paramount's well established style and were designed to stand out on competitive newspaper amusements pages.

20th-FOX—"The Keys of the Kingdom"

Since it was a picture that made a star, rather than having the advertising power of a previously established marquee name, "The Keys of the Kingdom" offered its problems to the advertising men. Of course, the real star factor was the title of a book on which the picture was based, but in picture theatre business there is nothing like the name of a popular player for the illustrations and the headlines.

In hitting on a central sales approach for the screen version of A. J. Cronin's best seller about a missionary priest in China, the 20th-Fox advertising men realized that a different angle than that used so successfully for "The Song of Bernadette" had to be employed. However, due to the outstanding results which developed from the pictorial theme used for "Song of Bernadette" and which was based on a painting by Norman Rockwell, it was decided to repeat the technique of having characters from the picture portrayed in a painting by an artist of national renown. So, many months in advance of the completion of "The Keys of the Kingdom" at the 20th-Fox studios in Hollywood, the advertising men commissioned Douglas Crockwell, famous American artist, to execute a painting in which would be grouped the portraits of the principal characters of the Cronin story as created for the screen by Gregory Peck, Rose Stradner, Thomas Mitchell, Vincent Price tand the other leading players in the picture. When completed, the picture so faithfully expressed the characters of the story and likenesses as developed on the screen by the actors and actresses, that it automatically took possession of the planned advertising for "The Keys of the Kingdom." And, the more the advertising men worked with the picture as the keystone of all their displays, the more flexible did they discover the painting to be as a source for the various elements of posters and newspaper displays.

The painting, in montage form, allowed rearrangement of the figures to suit mechanical requirements of emphasis and space. It is notable that the beauty and effectiveness of the illustration were not marred in any way by such rearrangements.

In the copy, the same broad canvas had to be painted as was contained in the illustrations with tight, punchy headlines and body text using as few words as possible, but necessarily taking advantage of the popularity of the book, and keying the entire campaign to forceful, honest selling.

While it was important to put its best foot forward, the copy could not alienate any specific group or groups from seeing the picture. It would have been easy to have fallen into the danger of playing up an infinitesimally small portion of the picture, such as the brief romance or some similar sequence in an attempt to sensationalize it. No such mistake was made, however. The copy was notable for its vigorous selling of the class and bigness of the picture and its story.

Headlines such as "The Screen Opens New Frontiers of Emotion and Adventure" and "Magnificently Courageous—Overpoweringly Stirring!" and "Drama Undreamed Of . . . An Emotional Experience You've Never Known!" emphasized the mood of exaltation and depth of feeling, of adventure—important entertainment factors in the story.

The teasers comprising eight ads of from 100 to 152 lines were striking for simplicity of layout, type faces, illustration and copy. The copy was particularly effective. "Here is wondrous adventure which the human emotions are seldom privileged to experience!" and "An entirely new and undreamed of experience in a motion picture theatre!" are but two samples of the punch, the compulsion of this phase of the campaign.

Fairly large ads were prepared with blank spaces for local theatres to insert favorable quotations from newspaper reviews. Using the same theme as prepared for the newspaper campaign, and differing only insofar as mechanical contingencies of the different printing media were concerned magazine ads in color began to appear two months before the localization of the campaign in newspapers in the cities where the picture had its pre-release showings. Additional space was used in 14 religious publications, including several Christian denominations, in line with the spiritual theme of the production.

MGM—"Bewitched"

The advertising created by MGM for the mystery story, "Bewitched," looked very good indeed when first observed in the advance proofs of the press book. But that the advertising was even better than it appeared when first observed "in sample," so to say, became evident when the Criterion Theatre in New York used these displays for the engagement of the picture. In competition with other current picture advertising, the "Bewitched" displays stood out with clarity and a crispness which made them excellent messengers for the mystery starring Phyllis Thaxter.

There was "mood"—or atmosphere, if you prefer—as well as dramatic significance to the advertising designed by MGM for "Bewitched," as indicated by the example above of one of the displays which stood out in the amusement pages of New York papers during the run of the picture at the Criterion Theatre.

There was an overall theme both to copy and illustration used in the various advertisements in the "Bewitched" campaign. Featured in copy was a series of "thought quotations" of dialog by the girl who appeared in all of the advertising displays. The dialog was presented in hand-drawn script and was enclosed in quotation marks to give added force to such lines. Thus, a headline such as "Sometimes They Never Find Out" was followed with quotations set in the contrasting script type to emphasize the mood of drama and mystery. Such a headline would be supported by a quotation such as, "I led two lives, one for my family, one for myself. Many girls keep their secret, but the other side of me was too strong. Strange yearnings led me to a love I killed for!"

The "strange yearnings" phrase is probably the most provocative angle used. The illustration in this ad portrayed Phyllis Thaxter, casually clad in a trench coat, without a hat and conveying worried, introspective, but peculiarly appealing facial expression. She leans against a brick wall, almost facing the reader. This illustration was used in every one of the entire series of ads, varying only in so far as space required cutting the full length illustration of the girl to her waistline! Even the small 20-line ad was essentially the same as the 600-line ad! —less, of course, the amplified selling copy possible in the larger displays!

The brick wall motif, aside from whatever symbolism may have been intended, was given utilitarian usage by MGM's layout artists, serving as a background whereon they inserted staggered boxes in one of which copy read simply, "An MGM Thriller." The center staggered insert contained the title, cast, essential credits and a selling line bringing Arch Oboler into the picture—identifying him as the writer, director and producer. The third, smaller insert gave the playdate and the theatre, with address.

As mentioned previously, the layouts varied only insofar as space limitations required minor changes. The copy, however, contained many changes of thought, each continuing to build an atmosphere of eerie, mounting terror.

The second largest ad in the series depicted Miss Thaxter in character as in the other ads, this time quoted as stating, "I'll confess . . . will you?" and the sub copy, also a quotation, continued "I come from a good family. Nobody knows but myself the two personalities within me. The one a good girl. The other full of strange yearnings. Yes, I'd kill for love!"

Another ad developed the theme with copy, "Not All Good . . . Not All Bad!" and the body copy in quotations depicted the girl's thoughts, "You thousands of girls who hear my story will understand. The other side of me was too strong. Strange yearnings led me to a love I killed for!"

A smaller ad featured the headline, "I come of a good family," and body copy read: "There are many girls who will recognize my story, my strange yearning to live a secret life. Sometimes we're never found out. Sometimes—like me—it grows deeper and we kill for love."

In the smaller ads, where headlines alone were used, with some connecting copy and credits. In one of these the headline read. "My strange yearnings led me to kill for love." This, like all of the other headlines, was lettered script, which served to focus additional attention to the displays. One of the smaller displays, using the same, fundamental layout, presented a head, "I'll confess—I'd kill for love!"

No other film advertising campaign within recollection had used one photograph to illustrate the entire series of displays. The photo was unusual, fitting almost exactly into the mood of the copy which, incidentally, faithfully followed the mood of the picture. The copy was stimulating, suggested sex conflicts, the possibility of murder. In short, it dressed up the picture's actual selling points and presented them to the public in he most appealing manner.

UNITED ARTISTS—"Spellbound"

Direct and fortnight, whereas in unskilled hands the displays might have become cluttered and complex, is the advertising that is currently in use for presentations of the Selznick-United Artists picture "Spellbound."

The picture has been pronounced by critics as "especially good Hitchcock"—or, in other words, a screen show that throbs with suspense and vigorous love romance. That the advertising men have been able to impart these elements to strikingly simple displays is something worthy of note. With what seems a minimum of copy and visual flourish to the illustration, the advertisements have a sombre mood and each display appears to contain the elements of terror and confusion that race through the thoughts and emotions of the character portrayed on the screen by Gregory Peck.

The device used to instill a mood of suspense and even of terror is nothing more than the blade of an old-fashioned straight razor, held menacingly in the hands of Gregory Peck—sometimes at a distance from Miss Bergman, sometimes in one hand as his arms embrace her.

The Salvador Dali surrealistic art, used in the dream sequence of the film, is also suggested pictorially in a few of the ads, with the symbolic, mysteriously menacing eyes appearing in the background of dark, cloudy atmosphere.

Another effective art device that succeeds in giving the effect of space, mystery and enormous distance is a series of diverging lines, disappearing into the distance with the confused figure of Peck in almost minute proportion. An enormous head of Miss Bergman appears in these, contrasting vividly with the figure in the background and giving the feeling of Peck's distraught, confused mental turmoil.

The twin elements of suspense and love romance are given unique exposition in the advertising designed for the Selznick International-United Artists picture "Spellbound." At left are two advertisements which illustrate the manner in which these qualities are evident in a style which is typical of the entire campaign. In the ad at lower left, the odd pictorial elements of the Dali surrealism (which features one of the sequences of the picture) are used to great effect. The "clinch" which dominates the display reproduced at upper left is tied in with the suspense element of the open razor held in the man's hand. This latter element is repeated in various ways in other advertisements for the picture—as is also the figure of the man seen in the center background.

Copy has been held to a minimum. What copy has been used is forceful, intriguing and at times fascinating. A headline used often in the campaign is an example: "The Maddest Love that ever possessed a woman," and that's all the copy there is! The illustration is a clinch, which shows Miss Bergman's face as she is held in Peck's arms. His face is hidden. In his hand (behind her back), as he holds her tightly in his arms, is the straight edged wicked looking razor!

Another display uses the same threatening clinch illustration, with superimposed copy reading, "Haunted . . . by a Memory! Hunted . . . by the Law! Harrowed . . . by a Secret they dared not disclose!"

One of the ads is so arranged that converging white space at the side and base concentrate attention of readers on a menacing, full length figure of Peck holding the razor and gazing up in bewildered terror toward the much larger full length figure of Miss Bergman, who appears against a shadowy background. The copy reads, "Darker and Darker grows the shadow of fear! Body copy continues, "Hideaways . . . this woman of science, this man without a name. Loving him . . . a madness she could not deny . . . mentally tortured though he was . . . murderer though he might be!" This ad, as well as most of the larger displays contains a small reproduction of the Academy Award statue won by Miss Bergman last year with the copy, "Ingrid Bergman's first picture since winning The Academy Award."

One exceptional display is lifted right out of the film from a tense, dramatic scene in which Peck is seized with one of the aberrations which momentarily brings him close to the past. He has seen a series of parallel lines on a bed's white coverlet, which reminds him of something in his past. Miss Bergman tries to bring this fleeting memory closer to him. Peck grasps her wrists threateningly but, unafraid, she looks up at him and implores him to think. This scene is reproduced just as a piece of newspaper advertising, including Miss Bergman's spoken plea, "Think . . . think . . . why does color white frighten you! Why do lines frighten you! Think of white . . . white WHITE!" The scene imparts the impression of stark, intense drama.

Smaller ads in the series follow the theme established by the larger ones, using a minimum amount of selling copy, depending in larger degree upon the effectiveness of illustration and layout to do the selling job on the theory that the larger ads, previously used, will have established the mood intended. Most of the smaller ads use the clinch illustration, with the prominently displayed razor, with copy. "These two together will hold you . . . "SPELLBOUND" and the eye is carried from a break in the copy after the word you" right down to the picture's title to complete the message. Another small ad with the same illustration uses just one word—"Suspense!" as its selling message. Another states "Forever . . . Irresistibly . . . Spellbound!"

Teaser ads follow the same theme, eliminating the names of the cast, director, theatre, etc., with the intent of arousing interest, in preparation for the displays which will follow.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces with pride a new and most unusual Short Subject—

"FALA AT HYDE PARK"

A PETE SMITH SPECIALTY IN TECHNICOLOR

Even more delightful and heart-warming than the first "Fala" short subject, is this one. Fala's first offering, filmed at the White House, was one of the most successful shorts ever made, and now the beloved canine companion-in-chief to the late President Roosevelt takes audiences on a Technicolor tour of the world-famous Roosevelt estate at Hyde Park. An especially appropriate attraction to commemorate F.D.R.'s Birthday, January 30th.

CURRENT OBSERVATIONS

The recent years have witnessed increased effort and expenditures by the major and independent distribution companies for what is generally called "pre-selling." Great gobs of money have been and are being spent on elaborate national campaigns to put the potential movie patron in a frame of mind to buy the particular piece of entertainment merchandise when it finally reaches his local movie theatre.

That this effort is not wasted in impressing the exhibitor has been proved by our recent Leaders poll in which the theatremen express their opinions on what they think is good pre-selling.

But the boom years have brought about a strange condition in which too many theatremen appear quite content to let the companies pre-sell the attractions while they (the theatremen) sit back and wait for the crowds to buy tickets. Too little effort is being put forth by showmen to tie local campaigns to the pre-selling job done by the distributors.

It is now generally conceded that the wave of super-prosperity is due to level off, not to depression figures, but to a more normal and wider-spread volume. If such is the outlook for the future, it is high time that a large segment of our showmen got started on a refresher course in show-selling. Some have been away from it so long that one wonders whether they will be able to recapture their former facility for selling shows through the medium of smart showmanship.

It is important that theatremen, individually, start to employ some of the showmanship for which they earned fine reputations. They must aggressively sell their pictures in their communities, using whatever mediums are at their disposal, including some good, old-fashioned ballyhoo. It's been a long time since we've seen much ballyhoo of the sort that made many of today's top showmen outstanding.

Now that the war is over and transportation expected to ease up, we are looking ahead to the first definite signs of peace, (world peace, not industry peace), in the form of a national exhibitors' convention.

It will be held in St. Louis early in April and will commemorate the beginning of the Theatre Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, something, we might add, entirely new in exhibitor conventions.

Attendance at this inaugural convention should be both interesting and novel for many reasons, not the least being the fact that there will be no passionate speech-making on the theme of saving the poor, downtrodden exhibitor or promising trade practice relief which the proponents and speechmakers know can never come to pass via the convention route.

On the contrary, the St. Louis Convention will feature everything for the exhibitor's interest EXCEPT fantastic promises and play-acting gestures.

Far more vital matters will be discussed especially the need for a united front on legislation and tax matters. A co-ordinated and well organized plan to consider and pass upon on requests for theatre participation in drives, collections and screen use.

And of equal importance, a well handled public relations job that will reflect due credit to the magnificent job you theatremen are doing for the good of your communities.

No exhibitor, independent or otherwise, should permit anything to interfere with his attendance at the St. Louis Convention because he owes it to himself and his industry to get the TRUE facts and determine whether or not he wants to be a part of the TAC.

If we can't promise you miracles we can at least promise you a new kind of a convention with a brand new kind of theme all handled on a common-sense, business-like basis and minus all the theatricals that have been featured in so many pre-war exhibitor meetings.

Yes, something new is going to be presented and you should be there to see the birth of this new idea and new organization. It may be the very thing you have been seeking but never expected to find. Time will tell.

Announcement has just been made that Ben Serkowich, who, for the past few years, has headed the Capitol Theatre advertising department, has been appointed Director of Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation for Columbia Pictures.

Ben brings to that post a wealth of valuable experience particularly in the field of showmanship and merchandising entertainment to the public. His background will undoubtedly stand him in good stead. We look for Ben to do the same fine sparkling job that has resulted from his handling of every assignment he has tackled during a long and eventful career in film business.

RKO to Release 16-mm Films to Commercial Theatres Abroad

Speculation as to the imminence of general use of 16-mm. film in the commercial domestic theatre field increased in tempo this week with the announcement by Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of foreign sales for RKO Radio, that his company will establish a policy of 16-mm. service of RKO films to mobile and permanent installations in foreign countries. The Reisman statement made it plain that experimentation and research in the 16-mm. equipment field had been going on by his company for three years. How far the major companies have gone with respect to plans for application of 16-mm. to domestic distribution for commercial theatres remains a mystery.

RKO Radio follows Loew's International in adopting a 16-mm. policy for the distribution and presentation in foreign countries of all pictures made by these companies.

The Reisman statement stressed that installations and film service in no way were to compete or interfere with present 35-mm. exhibitors, regardless of their attitude toward RKO or its product. "Exhibitors will be encouraged," he added, "to expand their present operations to outlying unserviced areas to supplement present income and to eliminate the possibility of undesirable 'fly by night' operators from entering the field."

Inaugurated Extensive Tests

Reisman's decision, the announcement stated, to supplement 35-mm. exhibitions with 16-mm. films was occasioned by the limited number of 35-mm. outlets which reach only a small percentage of the vast audiences available. Because the cost of providing 35-mm. facilities in many areas not being served with motion pictures would have been prohibitive, the RKO executive three years ago inaugurated extensive tests of all available equipment which proved that although present equipment gave satisfactory performances on a limited operation basis, a heavier, more professional type of projector would be needed. Equipment manufacturers are now developing 16-mm. equipment for theatre operations.

In announcing the program, Reisman pointed out that plans for product are in the formative stage, indicating that action, eye appeal and films which lend themselves to off-stage narrations will be given preference. Dubbing and superimposing of titles will be decided as results of tests now being made are tabulated.

Maroney to Head Program

R. C. Maroney, associated with Reisman during the past five years in setting up the programming and distribution of the Office of Inter-American Affairs films, will head the 16-mm. program. Connected with the industry for several years, having been associated with Educational, Pioneer Pictures, Inc., and Selznick International, Maroney joined the Office of Inter-American Affairs in 1940 to assist Reisman in operating the government's 16-mm. informational program in the other American republics.

Representatives for 16-mm. program are being sent into the field as the occasion requires. A. Bothner-By is already enroute to China to set up plans for the program in that territory, while R. Ycaza, well known in consular and diplomatic circles, will leave shortly for the other American republics.

Canadian Film Section of WFC Holds Final Meet in Toronto

The farewell to the Motion Picture Section of the Canadian National War Finance Committee was observed this week at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, when the Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Federal Minister of Finance, paid tribute to the support and cooperation of the Canadian film trade group in connection with the war effort. Heading the motion picture section were J. J. Fitzgibbons, president of Famous Players Canadian Corp.; Vice-President T. J. Bragg, acting president of Odeon Theatres of Canada, and Secretary Ray Lewis.

Film exchange, circuit and independent exhibitor representatives, as well as officials of various government departments identified with the financing and actual prosecution of the war, also attended the closing gathering of the film organization.

Republic Purchases Northwest Franchise From J. T. Sheffield

Republic Pictures Corp. has purchased the franchise rights for the distribution of the company's pictures in the territories served out of the Seattle, Portland, Salt Lake City and Denver branch offices from J. T. Sheffield of Seattle, it was announced this week by James R. Grainger, vice-president and general sales manager.

Personnel in the Sheffield-Republic exchange offices will remain intact Grainger said, and Republic will officially assume charge of the exchanges January 26. Francis A. Bateman, western district sales manager, is in Seattle supervising final details.

Williamson, Jr., Resumes As Warner Atlanta Branch Manager

Reappointment of W. O. Williamson Jr. as branch manager for Warner Bros. in Atlanta, effective immediately, was announced by Ben Kalmenson, general sales manager, on his return from the coast Monday. Williamson succeeds Henry G. Krumm, who resigned recently.

Williamson, who just received his Navy discharge as a Lieutenant (Senior Grade) following two and a half years of service, managed the Atlanta office before joining Uncle Sam.

B & K Increase Matinee Prices

Necessitating the use of emergency tickets of admission until new rolls can be obtained from the printers, week-day admission prices at Balaban & Katz Chicago theatres have been increased on an average of five cents. Matinee price for "A" houses is now 44c; "B" houses, 40c; "C" houses, 35c.

Eastman Made UA District Mgr.

Clayton Eastman, former Paramount Albany branch manager and a veteran of 25 years in the industry, has been appointed United Artists district manager in charge of the Boston and New Haven branches, it was announced this week by J. J. Unger, general sales manager.

TAC Meets April 1-2

The first national convention of the Theatre Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry will be held at the Chase and Park Plaza Hotels, St. Louis, April 1 and 2. The dates and hotels were fixed by agreement between S. H. Fabian, interim committee chairman; Ted R. Gamble, arrangements committee chairman and Harry Arthur, chairman of the convention committee.

Sue to Upset Sale of Theatre to Goldman

A suit to upset the sale of the 69th Street Theatre, Philadelphia, to William Goldman Theatres and to force Goldman to sell the house to the plaintiffs, was filed in the Philadelphia Federal Court last week by Frank and Sara Blum, operators of the Stonehurt Theatre. Pending the requested forced sale to them, the plaintiffs ask that Goldman be enjoined from selling the property or from dealing with the tenants.

In seeking to upset the sale, negotiated last month with the trustees of the Patrick J. Lawler estate by the Goldman interests, the plaintiffs contend that they had an agreement to buy the property for $50,000 cash and to take over a $603,500 first mortgage. They allege that William Goldman, president of the theatre company bearing his name, induced the trustees to "cancel" the agreement and sell to him for $75,000 plus the mortgage.

Purpose of the Goldman company in obtaining the property was to bring pressure on the Stanley Company of America, tenants of the 69th Street Theatre, the complaint alleges. William Goldman Theatres are engaged in litigation with the Stanley Company, it was stated.

Edmund C. Grainger

(The Man on the Cover)

President of Shea Enterprises, Inc., since October, 1940, who is celebrating his 30th year in the film industry. Born in Medford, Mass., 52 years ago last week, Grainger graduated from Boston University Law School and in 1916 entered the industry with his brother, James R., as a State Righter. Service in France with the AAF followed and in late 1919, Grainger became general assistant in the New York office for the Exhibitor's Herald. In 1921 he left to enter the sales contract department of First National, remaining for a year, when he joined Samuel Goldwyn in the same capacity. Upon the merger of Goldwyn with Mayer in 1925, Grainger joined Fox Film Corporation where he advanced from special sales representative to circuit sales head for all New York circuits and finally eastern division manager in 1932. He left the reorganized Fox company in 1936 to join Shea Enterprises as general manager, and on the death of Shea, was made president in October, 1940.

Closeups of Names in the Industry News Spotlight This Week

Benjamin Serkowich

Maurice Grad

S. Barret McCormick

Louis S. Lifton

Outstanding in the news this week were the four men pictured above. Benjamin Serkowich, who has been in charge of promotion for MGM Loew's first-run Capitol Theatre in New York, was appointed director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Columbia Pictures, succeeding David A. Lipton, who resigned to join Universal. Another post was filled at Columbia, that of M. J. Weisfeldt, resigned, when Maurice Grad was named sales executive in charge of the organization's short subject sales department with the title of short subject sales manager. Expected back in New York from Hollywood next Monday (January 28) is S. Barret McCormick, RKO Radio director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, who has been conferring at the company's Coast studios during the past five weeks on campaign plans for forthcoming RKO Radio product. Lou Lifton, advertising and publicity director for Monogram, with headquarters in Hollywood, arrived in New York last weekend for important meetings of Monogram heads in the east.

Paula Gould Appointed Capitol Publicity Head

Paula Gould, for the past five years publicist for Loew's State and Loew's New York circuit, was this week appointed publicity director for the Capitol Theatre to succeed Benjamin Serkowich, who resigned to assume the post of advertising and publicity director of Columbia Pictures.

Jerry Sager, Loew's Criterion publicist, will take over the State Theatre assignment. Sager will be succeeded by Teddy Arnow, Loew field publicity man.

Al Longo, who handled ads and publicity for Loew's Boston theatres before joining the Marines, will become a member of the Loew's home office publicity staff February 4.

Bright Lights Dim English Theatre Grosses, Rose Says

Theatre business in England has dropped approximately 15 per cent from the same period in 1945, because of the lifting of the blackout ban, David Rose, Paramount managing director in Great Britain said this week on his arrival in New York. Rose added, however, that the general overall outlook for theatre business during the next few years is good.

Paramount will make three films in England each year, with the company negotiating for a studio and hopeful of starting production in June, Rose disclosed.

Chicago Censors Viewed 1065 Features, Banned 6 in 1945

The Chicago Police Censor Board reported last week that 4,405,000 feet of film was reviewed by that body during the year 1945. The footage included a total of 1065 features, from which the censor made 193 cuts, gave pink slips (suitable for adults only) to 14 and rejected only six during the entire year.

Tradeshow 'Jones' February 11

Warners have set the national tradeshow of "Cinderella Jones" for February 11. The film co-stars Joan Leslie and Robert Alda, with Edward Everett Horton, S. Z. Sakall, Julie Bishop and William Prince.

Grad Succeeds Weisfeldt As Columbia Shorts Sales Executive

Appointment of Maurice Grad as sales executive replacing M. J. Weisfeldt was announced this week by A. Montague, Columbia's general sales manager. Grad, who has been director of sales promotion for Columbia for the past 13 years, will head the short subject sales department with the title of short subject sales manager.

The new sales executive joined the company in 1932 as assistant to the sales promotion director and was made director of sales promotion the following year. Before coming to Columbia, Grad had been associated with the Graham-Paige International Corp. and with Graham Brothers, automobile manufacturers, as advertising and sales promotion manager.

Earlier in the week Columbia stockholders re-elected the present board of directors at the company's annual meeting held in New York. Members of the board who will serve again are Harry and Jack Cohn, A. Schneider, A. Montague, N. B. Spingold, L. M. Blancke and Donald S. Stralem. The stockholders also approved the issuance of the new preferred stock and again named Price-Waterhouse to act as auditors.

Monogram Gives New Positions to Arthur Greenblatt and Nat Furst

Arthur Greenblatt has been promoted from central division manager to eastern sales manager of Monogram and Nat Furst to New England district manager, it has been announced by Morey Goldstein, general sales manager.

Furst has been with Monogram in Boston and New Haven and is also branch manager in New York. He will remain in charge of the New York branch in addition to his duties as New England district manager.

'Dimes' Drive Start

The industry's 1946 March of Dimes campaign got off to a fast start this week with over 13,000 theatres participating. An acute shortage of raw stock limited the number of trailers available to this number, but in some situations the trailers will be routed to subsequent-run houses where collections will be made a week later. The goal is to top last year's all-time record of $5,978,939.

20th Names Peppiatt District Manager

C. E. Peppiatt, formerly 20th-Fox Washington branch manager, has been appointed a district manager with headquarters in Philadelphia, to supervise that branch, Washington and Pittsburgh, it has been announced by William J. Kupper, general sales manager. Peppiatt will serve under A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern sales manager.

The new district manager succeeds Edgar Moss, veteran 20th-Fox sales executive, who is on a leave of absence. C. Glenn Norris, former Washington salesman, has been named to succeed Peppiatt as branch manager of the Washington exchange.

William Humphries, sales manager of the Philadelphia exchange and with 20th-Fox for 15 years, has resigned to devote all his time to the operation of his theatres in Catasawgua and Lewistown. Samuel E. Diamond, who will work under Sam Gross, branch manager, has succeeded Humphries. Howard Minsky, recent service dischargee, will manage the 20th-Fox Buffalo office, succeeding Ira Cohn, who has been recalled by the home office for special duties. Minsky was formerly with Warners.

Elect 3 to Loew Foreign Board

Three new members of the board of directors of Loew's International Corp. were elected by board members this week. They are David Blum, for the past 15 years director of the company's publicity, advertising and exploitation and who is also studio advisor on MGM productions as they may affect overseas markets; Lt. Colonel Orton H. Hicks, recently named head of Loew's International 16-mm. department and Lt. Colonel George Muchnic, administrative assistant to Arthur M. Loew, company president.

RKO, Loew's Book Film Classics

Loew's Theatres have booked Film Classics' re-issues of two Sam Goldwyn pictures for a circuit run beginning February 5. Films are "These Three" and "Condemned to Devil's Island." RKO's Greater New York Theatres have booked two others, "Come and Get It" and "Beloved Enemy," both starting January 29.

Serkowich to Head Col. Adv., Publicity

Benjamin H. Serkowich, for the past several years in charge of promotion for MGM-Loew's first-run Capitol Theatre in New York, was this week named director of advertising, publicity and exploitation for Columbia Pictures, succeeding David A. Lipton, whose new affiliation with Universal was reported recently.

Originally a newspaper editor and feature writer, with a journalistic career that included the managing editorship of the Peoria Journal and Transcript, the city editorship of the Omaha Bee, a star-reporter role with the Chicago Evening American and staff membership on newspapers in Des Moines, Kansas City, Minneapolis and other principal cities, Serkowich joined Balaban & Katz Theatres in Chicago as a promotion expert and specialized in the creation of spectacular opening campaigns for the circuit's new theatres. These campaigns, first planned and executed by Serkowich, became accepted standard practice, and a "Serkowich opening" became a show business byword.

When B & K and Paramount-Publix merged, Serkowich was placed in charge of all theatre openings nationally and personally supervised the debut campaigns for many of America's principal theatres. Serving as a home office executive for Paramount-Publix in New York, he later joined the RKO Theatres circuit as a special roving theatre executive to "spark-plug" lagging theatre grosses. He resigned to enter his own independent film distribution business, later becoming promotion manager for the Capitol, the post he held prior to his Columbia appointment.

Serkowich, one of the younger pioneers of modern showmanship, particularly in advertising and development of new stars, theatres and films, is one of the industry's most widely-known and popular personalities with publishers, editors, theatre managers and circuit operators. He was active in all the industry's war activities, and a winner of a Sixth War Loan Prize for Showmanship.

New RKO-Pathe Sound Pact Covers Television Recording

A contract covering the rights to record sound films for television as well as theatre presentation, was concluded last week between RKO-Pathe, Inc., and RCA. The new pact provides for the delivery of new RCA sound film recording equipment to the new RKO-Pathe studios, now under construction in New York.

Under the new contract, films bearing the Pathe trademark, such as Pathe News, "This Is America" series and RKO-Pathe's short subjects and industrial films, will continue to be recorded by the RCA Sound System. It is the first pact to be concluded on RCA's new contract basis and provides for license arrangements which RCA expects will stimulate production of sound films for television.

13 1st-Run 'Forest' Bookings

PRC's sales department has completed 13 first-run key city bookings on "The Enchanted Forest," the company announced last week. Among the theatres set are the Strand, Brooklyn; Paramount, Springfield, Mass.; Empire, New Bedford, Mass.; Palace, Jamestown, New York; Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind.; Broadway, Lubbock, Texas; Cactus, Lubbock, Texas; Rialto, Allentown, Pa.; Queen, Wilmington, Del.; Strand, Brownsville, Pa.; State, Jersey City; Century, Rochester, N. Y. and Paramount, Syracuse, N. Y.

Goldhammer Enroute to Coast

Nickey Goldhammer, Film Classics vice-president and general sales manager, is enroute to the coast from New York with stopovers at Chicago and Detroit on business.

Strikes No Hindrance

The General Motors and other industrial strikes which have kept thousands idle in Detroit, some for more than two months, has failed to affect movie theatre box-offices as much as was feared. In some cases, houses have shown substantial increases, and all of the widely publicized films have received outstanding box-office support. Most notable among these were "Spellbound," "The Stork Club" and "The Lost Weekend."

Study Theatre Books To Increase Taxes

In an effort to find new means of revenue, Milwaukee's committee on taxation and financial matters will study the income of film theatres in that city.

Object of the investigation, during which theatre tax returns will be examined, is to set up a graduated scale of license fees for all theatres in the Milwaukee area. At present the theatres pay a flat rate of $30 per year.

The assistant city attorney advised the committee that operators of motion picture theatres have six scales to pay for workers, depending upon income, and it has been suggested that theatres be taxed on the same basis instead of a flat rate.

UA to Add 35-50 Veterans To Its Exchange Personnel

United Artists will increase its field personnel by adding between 35 and 50 people to its exchanges, it was disclosed last week by Gradwell L. Sears, vice-president in charge of distribution, at a two-day meeting of district managers at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, New York. Absorption of returning servicemen will be a major factor in the new hirings, with two men being added to branch sales staffs in some cases and a minimum of one in all other instances, Sears disclosed.

The meeting was highlighted by a discussion of current and forthcoming product and company sales policy. J. J. Unger, general sales manager, was in charge of the sessions which were addressed by Edward C. Raftery, president, and Sears.

UA Will Hold Regional Sales Meeting in Chicago Jan. 25-26

The first in a series of regional meetings of United Artists' sales force will be held at the Blackstone, Chicago, January 25 and 26 with Maury Orr, western sales manager, assisted by Rud Lohrenz, district manager, in charge. Meetings will be attended by branch managers, salesmen, office managers and bookers from Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee and Minneapolis.

Subsequent regional meetings will be held to include the entire western territory, while similar meetings will be conducted in the east by Jack Goldhar, eastern sales manager. The southern exchanges will meet under the supervision of Fred M. Jack, district manager.

NTS Adds Furniture Line

National Theatre Supply will be the exclusive distributor in the theatre field of Royalchrome furniture products, under a contract recently concluded between the equipment dealer organization and Royal Metal Manufacturing Co. of Chicago.

'Rebecca' at Victoria March 1

Re-release of David O. Selznick's "Rebecca," first released in 1940, is scheduled to open around March 1 at the Victoria Theatre, New York.

Demand Foreign Films Be Sold Separately

One hundred and thirty exhibitors representing 200 theatres at the annual convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in Columbus this week adopted a resolution demanding that foreign pictures be sold on separate contracts and not included in blocks with Hollywood-made product. Exhibitors declared that they had no objection to foreign films but felt the product should be sold separately, especially in view of the large number of such features expected during the year.

Striking at the recently formed Theatre Activities Committee, the convention passed a resolution declaring that any national theatre group cannot pledge theatre screens for any purpose not acceptable to the membership. The resolution opposed a "self-delegated committee seeking to foist any hidden propaganda" through the members' screens.

Another strongly-worded resolution condemned the practice of affiliated theatre chains in acquiring, planning and building new theatres while the government suit is pending. P. J. Wood, ITO secretary, was instructed to transmit a copy of the resolution to each of the defendants, to the Attorney General and "such other officials as he deems advisable."

The convention also went on record as being totally opposed to theatre collections for various causes. Speakers included Maurice Wolf, MGM New England district manager; W. C. Gehring, 20th-Fox western division sales manager and Sidney Samuelson, National Allied director. Also Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel; Leon Bamberger, RKO sales promotion manager, and Dave Palfreyman of the MPAA. All officers, including Martin G. Smith, president, were re-elected.

American Brotherhood Week Plans Nearing Completion By Skouras

Nationwide organization of the industry for American Brotherhood Week, February 16-24, is rapidly being completed, it was revealed this week by Spyros P. Skouras, 20th-Fox president and national chairman of the industry committee. Sam Shain will be executive assistant to the chairman. Joseph R. Vogel, Loew vice-president; Harry Brandt, ITOA president and Harold Mirisch of RKO Theatres will serve as national co-chairmen of the exhibitors committee.

Charles M. Reagan, Paramount vice-president in charge of distribution will head the distribution committee. Leonard H. Goldenson, also a Paramount vice-president, will be chairman of the home office committee with Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres advertising and publicity director, serving as national chairman of the advertising and publicity committee.

Republic to Hold Regional Sales Meeting in Cleveland Jan. 28-30

Edward L. Walton, Republic's assistant general sales manager, will meet with Central Division Sales Manager Sam Seplowin and men from that division at a regional sales meeting January 28 to 30 at the Statler Hotel, Cleveland.

Branch Managers Sam P. Gorrel, Cleveland; George H. Kirby, Cincinnati; I. H. Pollard, Detroit and William Feld, Pittsburgh will attend, as will salesmen from these branches.

Mayer Joins MGM's 16-mm. Films

Appointment of Major Seymour Mayer as head of sales-promotion of 16-mm. entertainment films in MGM's world-wide program outside of the United States and Canada for the distribution of entertainment and educational pictures was announced in New York this week by Arthur M. Loew, president of MGM International Corp.

Asks Tax Reduction

A request for a reduction in theatre admission taxes to two per cent instead of the present 10 per cent, was made at Jackson, Miss. last week by Governor Thomas L. Bailey of Mississippi in a joint address to the House and Senate. The present tax has been branded as discriminatory by theatre interests, who were represented in large numbers at Jackson when the Governor made his request.

'Cinderella Jones' Premiere in 20 New England Theatres Feb. 20

Twenty New England theatres will participate in the world premiere of Warners' "Cinderella Jones" on February 20. Bookings include the Strand, Albany; Roger Sherman, New Haven; Strand, Hartford; Warner and Merritt, Bridgeport; State, Waterbury; Strand, New Britain; Palace, South Norwalk; Garde, New London; Palace, Norwich; Palace, Danbury; Warner, Torrington; Capitol, Willimantic; Warner, Worcester; Capitol, Springfield and Palace, Lawrence.

The Boyd, Philadelphia, gets the picture February 21, and the New York Strand opening is tentatively set for the middle of March.

Maj. Chadwick Back from China

Major Lee Chadwick, former Hollywood agent and son of I. E. Chadwick, president of the Independent Producers Association, returned last week from China, where he was Intelligence officer for a fighter group. Upon his discharge in March, Major Chadwick plans to return to some phase of picture production.

O'Donnell Names General Committee for Tenth Annual Variety Club Convention

Formation of a general committee of 30 top industry executives for the 10th annual convention of the Variety Clubs of America to be held May 16-18 at the Astor Hotel, New York, was announced this week from Dallas by R. J. O'Donnell, national chief barker, who is sharing the executive chairmanship of the meeting with "Big Boss" John H. Harris, with "Chick" Lewis as assistant executive chairman.

Appointed to the general committee were Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Harry Brandt, Steve Broidy, Jack Cohn, Thomas J. Connors, George Dembow, Ned E. Depinet, Si Fabian, Leonard Goldenson, James R. Grainger, W. Ray Johnston, Ben Kalmenson, Harry Kalmine, J. J. Maloney, Abe Montague, Richard Owen, N. Peter Rathvon, Charles M. Reagan, Herman Robbins, William F. Rodgers, A. K. Rowswell, E. M. Saunders, Jr., Nicholas M. Schenck, William A. Scully, Gradwell Sears, Spyros Skouras, Harry Thomas, Joseph Unger and Herbert J. Yates.

A. K. Rowswell, chairman of the Humanitarian Award Committee, again stressed that no member of the Clubs is a member of the Award Committee, which consists of outstanding newspaper publishers, editors, commentators and educators. Each year the award winner selected by them is given a Silver Plaque, Scroll and a check for $1000. J. J. Maloney of Pittsburgh, chairman of the National Heart Committee, has requested each Tent to prepare its Heart (Charity) report for presentation at the convention and a committee of three will select the Tent which did the most outstanding charity job. This Tent will be awarded the annual Charity Citation Plaque. Last year's winner was Texas.

O'Donnell will meet with the general committee in New York in early February to further plans and to form sub-committees to handle convention detail and routine and the Humanitarian Banquet to be held May 18 in the Astor's grand ballroom.

Abe Dickstein Promoted By UA As Assistant to Schnitzer

Abe Dickstein, United Artists New York exchange office manager for the past three years, has been appointed assistant to Edward M. Schnitzer, home office executive, it was announced this week by J. J. Unger, general sales manager. Dickstein, who assumed his new duties immediately, joined UA's contract department in 1933 and was promoted to office manager in 1942. Herb Richek succeeds Dickstein as office manager under Jack Ellis, branch manager.

Hazen, Wallis Confer on Coast

Joseph H. Hazen, president of Hal Wallis Productions, Inc., is on the coast conferring with Wallis and Henry Ginsberg, Paramount studio head, on production plans for "Top Secret," atomic-bomb story. The budget on the film will exceed all prior Wallis productions made independently for Paramount.

Two B'way Openings Set

Columbia's "Pardon My Past" is scheduled to have its New York premiere at the Globe on January 26. On the same day, Paramount's "People Are Funny" will open at the Globe's sister house, the Gotham.

Caplan Added to Connor's Staff

Morris Caplan, 20th Century-Fox branch coordinator and with the company for 26 years, has been added to the personal staff of Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution. Caplan will serve as special statistical assistant.

Sokol Heads DeVry 35-mm. Sales

Lt. William R. Sokol, recently released from the U. S. Navy after three years service, has been appointed sales manager of the 35-mm. division of DeVry Corp., it was announced last weekend by W. C. DeVry, president.

Wagner Sign Service, Chicago, manufacturer of marquee displays and letters, has a new catalog, covering the company's complete line, now in preparation. It soon will be distributed in the theatre field.

'Bascomb,' 'Hoodlum' Tradeshows Set

MGM will tradeshow "Bad Bascomb" and "The Hoodlum Saint" in all exchange areas February 4.

Carolina Owners Name Ben Strozier President

FILM MEN AT CAROLINA THEATRE OWNERS MEETING. Seen above in attendance at the 34th annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, held in Charlotte, N. C., January 20-21, are (lr): Rovy F. Branon, local RKO branch manager; Frank Beddingfield of B & L Enterprises, Chief Barker of local Variety Club Tent; Cy Dillon, Republic branch manager and First Assistant Chief Barker; Leon J. Bamberger, RKO sales promotion manager, New York, and Louis J. Alleman II, local RKO publicity representative.

Attended by more than 450 exhibitors and other industry people, the 34th annual convention of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, held early this week at the Charlotte Hotel, Charlotte, N. C., elected Ben L. Strozier, of Rock Hill, S. C., president, to succeed A. F. Sams, Jr., of Statesville, N. C. George Carpenter, Valdese, N. C., and J. C. Long, Charleston, S. C., were elected first and second vice-president, respectively. Mrs. Walter Griffith was re-elected secretary-treasurer.

Directors named included P. A. Little, Sam Trincher, H. F. Kincey, H. H. Everett and H. D. Hearne, all of Charlotte; H. R. Berry, Hartsville, S. C.; H. E. Buchanan, Hendersonville, N. C.; Charles Arrington, Rocky Mount, N. C.; J. B. Harvey, Clover, S. C.; Glenn Davis, Louisberg, S. C.; Roy Rowe, Burgaw, N. C.; Ben Reeves, Sparta, N. C.; George W. Parr, Lancaster, S. C.

Henry Reeve of Menard, Texas, president of the Texas Theatre Owners, Inc., and Nat M. Williams, Thomasville, Ga., president of the Southeastern Theatre Owners Association, addressed the theatre owners, who protested the tendency toward independent salacious "road-show" films and passed a resolution condemning distributors' use of local checkers on percentage pictures.

Heads Studio Publicity

Frank P. Rosenberg has been appointed to the position of publicity director of the Columbia studio replacing Whitney Bolton, it was announced by Columbia Pictures. Rosenberg was formerly head of Columbia's exploitation department in the east.

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Swing Parade of 1946

Monogram Musical 74 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) An entertaining musical that has the jive of Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five, the singing of Connee Boswell and the comedy of the Three Stooges besides Gale Storm and Phil Regan in the leads, for the amusement of the average theatregoer.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: A top-flight musical worthy of a topspot in most situations.

Cast: Gale Storm, Phil Regan, Edward Brophy, Mary Treen, John Eldredge, Russell Hicks, Leon Belasco, Windy Cook, the Three Stooges, Connee Boswell, Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five, Will Osborne and his Orchestra. Credits: Produced by Lindsley Parsons and Harry A. Romm. Directed by Phil Karlson. Screenplay by Tim Ryan. Original story by Edmond Kelso. Photography, Harry Neumann.

Plot: A young girl is sent to a night club to serve papers that would close the place. This is all caused by a feud between the owner and his father, who is trying to stop his son's ventures into such undignified business. Instead of serving the papers, she is auditioned and lands a spot in the show. She and the owner fall in love and together they win the father over to their side.

Comment: This top-flight musical will entertain average audiences everywhere. It is a light, diverting comedy tunefully and attractively presented with several outstanding song numbers and music and jive by Louis Jordan and his Tympany Five. Among the songs presented are such melodic tunes as Just a Little Fond Affection, Stormy Weather and Oh Brother. Particularly good is Jordan's interpretation of the song Caldonia, which will please the jive addicts no end. Connee Boswell takes care of several numbers in her own inimitable fashion and Gale Storm and Phil Regan satisfactorily sing the others. Comedy gags, which are milked dry for laughs, are handled by the Three Stooges. Miss Storm is her usual able, attractive self in the romantic lead opposite Regan. With his understanding direction Phil Karlson has pointed up to advantage all the song and production numbers and interspersed the comedy and music well. Credit for this unusually good musical goes to Harry A. Romm and Lindsley Parsons, co-producers.

Face of Marble

Monogram Horror 72 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Voodoo spells to keep horror-minded fans on the edge of their seats.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Good for action houses and satisfactory companion feature for double bills.

Cast: John Carradine, Claudia Drake, Robert Shayne, Maris Wrixon, Willie Best, Thomas E. Jackson, Rosa Rey, Neal Burns, Donald Kern, Allan Ray. Credits: Directed by William Beaudine. Screenplay by Michel Jacoby from an original story by William Thiele and Edmund Hartman. Photography, Harry Neumann. Produced by Jeffrey Bernerd.

Plot: A scientist and his helper find the body of a sailor on a stormy coast, and bring him to life with a face of marble. A lightning bolt hits their experimental station, ruining the experiment. Meanwhile the housekeeper, devoted to her mistress, employs voodoo in murdering the scientist. When police get on the trail, she commits suicide.

Comment: This picture will get by as a secondary feature, and will fare best in neighborhood runs where kid audiences predominate. John Carradine does his best by often-stilted lines, and Thomas E. Jackson is excellent as the detective. Story is not as heavy on "horror" material as is usually prevalent in such offerings, and direction doesn't put stress on great suspense. Rosa Rey, as the hendish housekeper, is too dramatic in her histrionics. Claudia Drake and Maris Wrixon are adequate, providing feminine scenery for the male fans. The handsome Great Dane works in smooth style.

Universal Drama 89 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An absorbing drama whose split-personality theme should provide excellent entertainment for all types of audiences—especially the women.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Will make a satisfactory topper for the situations where a good drama is the main issue and give substantial support wherever name-draw is more important.

Plot: The shock of an assault upsets a young convent girl to such an extent that she becomes a split personality from then on. Shortly after she leaves the convent she marries, has a baby, and three times in the course of the next 20 years she disappears, and then returns of her own volition, without knowing where she'd been. On her last escapade she is found by her daughter living with a thief in the slums of Florence. She is killed in a jealous fight between another girl of the slums and a man she believes is her lover.

Comment: This English-made picture with an entire English cast is good entertainment for everyone. It will make a very satisfactory topper for the situations where an absorbing drama, with good performances, is the main issue. It will also give substantial support wherever the clientele seeks name pictures. Unlike many other British pictures on the market, there is no difficulty with the dialog—it is always clear and understandable. The theme of a woman with a split personality or what one would call a "Jekyll and Hyde," is one that should appeal not only to metropolitan audiences but to many in the small towns, for stories of this type have a definite attraction for most women. Direction is good, performances outstanding and in one of the leading roles is Patricia Roc, the young lady who recently played a role in Universal's "Canyon Passage." This should help to familiarize the American public with her face and acting ability.

A Guy Could Change

Republic Drama 65 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Dull for the most part but may satisfy some segments of the movie-going population, those for instance, who do not demand plausibility in their screen stories and characters.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Obviously designed for double bill programs.

Cast: Allan Lane, Jane Frazee, Twinkle Watts, Bobby Blake, Wallace Ford, Adele Mara, Mary Treen, Joseph Crehan, Eddie Quillan, Gerald Mohr, George Chandler, Wm. Haade, Betty Shaw. Credits: Associate producer and director, William K. Howard. Photography, John Alton. Screenplay by Al Martin based on a magazine story by F. Hugh Herbert.

Plot: Allan Lane's wife dies at the birth of their daughter, Twinkle Watts, and although he provides well for the child he becomes embittered and sees as little of her as possible. The youngster goes to Lane's employer and complains that the hard work assigned to her father permits him no time for his daughter. The employer, Joseph Crehan, admonishes Lane, who changes his attitude, aided by his falling in love with Jane Frazee. The two plan to marry, become embroiled in a gun fight with escaped convicts. When Lane gives a tranfusion to Miss Frazee the daughter is satisfied with the wedding plans, since she argues that Miss Frazee's blood will be the same as her own.

Comment: Trite dialogue and miscasting on the part of Miss Twinkle Watts, change this picture from what might have been at least a fairly entertaining film into a dull, uninteresting one. While Allan Lane and Jane Frazee do well with the parts assigned to them and the supporting players are capable, the whole thing falls apart each time that Miss Watts appears on the screen. In this film she is singularly unattractive, and reads her lines very badly. She might do well in another part but in this one Miss Watts is most inept. The situations are unconvincing and there is no conviction in the transition of Lane's character from a man whose pleasant disposition changes at the death of his wife to a guy who is sour on the whole world and who blames his unhappiness on the birth of his daughter treating her unkindly, to say the least and who later realizes the errors of his ways and becomes the kindly parent.

Three Strangers

Warner Bros. Drama 92 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) The ingenuous plot, excellently acted, will intrigue adult audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The three marquee names will attract initial attention, but the film will require concentrated exploitation activity to get the most out of its possibilities.

Cast: Sydney Greenstreet, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Peter Lorre, Joan Lorring, Robert Shayne, Marjorie Riordan, Arthur Shields, Rosalind Ivan, John Alvin, Peter Whitney, Alan Napier, Clifford Brooke, Doris Lloyd, Stanley Logan, Holmes Herbert, Ian Wolfe, Connie Leon, Colin Kenny, Olaf Hytten, Eric Wilton, Keith Hitchcock, Leslie Denison, Leyland Hodgson, Alec Craig, Reginald Sheffield, Benny Burt. Credits: Original screenplay by John Huston and Howard Koch. Directed by Jean Negulesco. Produced by Wolfgang Reinhardt. Photography, Arthur Edeson. Musical director Leo F. Forbstein.

Plot: Geraldine Fitzgerald picks up Sydney Greenstreet and Peter Lorre in London during a Chinese New Year's Eve celebration for the express purpose of carrying out the tenets of a Chinese legend which states that three strangers brought together on this evening may make a wish and the wish will come true. They buy shares in a Sweepstakes ticket, and draw a starting horse. Greenstreet, a solicitor, has misused funds entrusted to him, faces prison and tries to sell his share of the ticket before the race. Lorre, in a drunken stupor, becomes involved in a murder and goes to jail to await sentence. He is cleared however, and hearing of the ticket's success in the draw goes to Miss Fitzgerald's apartment in time to witness Greenstreet's demand for the ticket's sale before the race and his murder of Miss Fitzgerald when she refuses to sell by terms of their original agreement. The two hear the race results, via radio, discover their horse has won but that they cannot cash the ticket, the only thing that can connect them with Miss Fitzgerald's murder.

Comment: The very ingenuousness of the involved plot, the manner in which the parts dovetail cleverly at the denouement and the excellent script, direction and performances make this a stand-out picture. It has been given everything possible in the way of production facilities and values and has been handled by the director and players in top-drawer fashion. Had star names been added, the film might not have been improved as far as entertainment is concerned, but might very well have acquired additional drawing power. However, its box-office chances are not bad. Sydney Greenstreet, Peter Lorre and Geraldine Fitzgerald are excellent as are Joan Lorring and Alan Napier in supporting roles. The picture is good, suspenseful entertainment and should prove to be thoroughly entertaining for adult audiences, particularly the more sophisticated.

The Virginian

(Color)

Paramount Western 90 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Contains all the elements of the standard western plus several high dramatic moments and should please all types of theatregoers.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: This superb version of the Owen Wister classic is capable of hitting the high spots in box-office results, particularly since it is buttressed with such substantial draw names as Joel McCrea, Brian Donlevy, Sonny Tufts and Barbara Britton.

Cast: Joel McCrea, Brian Donlevy, Sonny Tufts, Barbara Britton, Fay Bainter, Henry O'Neill, William Frawley, Bill Edwards, Minor Watson, Tom Tully, Vince Barnett, Martin Garralaga, Paul Guilfoyle, Marc Lawrence, James Burke, Al Bridge, Nana Bryant. Credits: Screenplay by Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett. Adaptation by Howard Estabrook based on the novel by Owen Wister and the play by Kirk LaShelle and Owen Wister. Photography, Harry Hallenberger. Technicolor color director, Natalie Kalmus. Associate, Robert Brower. Produced by Paul Jones. Directed by Stuart Gilmore.

Plot: The time is 1885, the place Wyoming, to which Barbara Britton comes to teach school. She falls in love with Joel McCrea, although she violently disagrees with his interpretation of law and order typified by his hanging of Sonny Tufts, his best friend, for cattle rustling. Brian Donlevy, leader of the outlaws, who escapes at the time Tufts is captured, shoots McCrea from ambush and months later challenges him to "get out of town." In the ensuing gun battle Donlevy is killed and Miss Britton come to realize the necessity of such methods until established law and order eliminate violence in the western territories.

Comment: The classic, and many-times tested, Owen Wister classic of the old west here receives a quality of direction and acting which makes the dramatic moments stand out in a film that in itself is a standout. The picture gives the highly melodramatic romance a lighter touch than has been accorded this play in previous productions. This, if anything, adds to the compelling factors of the story. Joel McCrea's interpretation of the central character is more realistic than the earlier screen rendition by Gary Cooper, with a result that gives more life to the character and adds immeasurably to the attractiveness of The Virginian. How much of this new attractiveness can be attributed solely to acting ability of the star, rather than to his own magnetic personality, it is difficult to estimate. However, McCrea's The Virginian, is one that will prove delightful to all types of audiences. Brian Donlevy as Trampas is sufficiently menacing as to convince anyone. Sonny Tufts, too, is excellent as the irresponsible cowhand whose easy-money proclivities causes his death at the hands of his best friend, and Barbara Britton is sufficiently beautiful and prim as the school-teacher whose New England law-and-order background gives her many horror-stricken moments at the violence and lawlessness of the time. Production is excellent and the Technicolor outdoor photography is beautiful. Much of the production's excellence may be attributed to the fine directorial effort of newcomer Stuart Gilmore, whose steady, deft handling of the players and situations creates the convincing moments of deep suspense with which the film is invested. Paramount's inclusion of the famous line, "When you say that, smile," undoubtedly will bring snickers to some audiences, but without the line it could not be "The Virginian." This is bound to do much better than good at the nation's box-offices. Strong exploitation efforts should be accorded it.

They Made Me a Killer

Paramount Drama 64 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A good murder drama for average audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should make a satisfactory companion offering on any bill.

2000 Attend Bronx Brotherhood Rally

BROTHERHOOD SPONSORS. These clergymen participated in American Brotherhood Week Rally show held at the Skouras Park Plaza Theatre, Bronx, New York as a forerunner of Motion Picture Industry participation in American Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, to be held nationally February 16 to 24. Left to right: Father John Manning, pastor of Holy Spirit Church; Rev. Robert E. Schwenk, Featherbed Lane Presbyterian Church; Rabbi Simon E. Kramer, Hebrew Institute of University Heights; Dr. Alpheus C. Robbins, Minister Calvary Methodist Church; Rabbi Edward Schoenfeld, Jewish Center of University Heights and Capt. Stanley E. Smith, Chaplain, Second Service Command USA.

Focussing national attention on the coming American Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, February 16 to 24, the Skouras Park Plaza Theatre, Bronx, New York City, conducted a rally and special show which was attended by civic and religious leaders last week.

The theatre opened its doors at 10 o'clock the morning of the rally, with 2000 neighborhood school children from 12 to 16 years of age admitted free. The youngsters were accompanied by teachers, members of Parent-Teachers Associations and others interested in cementing inter-faith relations.

Public, high and parochial schools were dismissed early to permit the children to attend the show with Sisters of the Holy Spirit Parochial school in charge of groups from that institution and the higher grade students and teachers of MacCombs Junior High School also attending in a body.

Five carefully chosen short subjects comprised the show including the now famous "The House I Live In" starring Frank Sinatra; "Beachhead to Berlin," "Palestine Problem," "Vatican," and "It Happened in Springfield" all accenting the message of inter-faith unity.

At the conclusion of each film, clergymen representing different faiths made brief addresses.

School authorities and religious bodies expressed satisfaction and pleasure with the initial rally and promised full cooperation in forthcoming inter-faith events.

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management

The Know-How of Public Relations

By Jack Jackson

The vastly important activity known as public relations is here discussed by a showman who has to his credit many very notable achievements in that field of endeavor. Cited as examples of men who never neglected the all-important Public Relations work are outstanding showmen who immediately will be recognized as members of the top flight figures of the amusement world and they can be an inspiration to the younger men in theatre work as well as living proof that there is a definite connection between "public spiritedness" and success in show business.

"Just what does a fellow get out of being one of those active, credible citizens you're always talking about other than a lot of hard work and undeserved criticism?"

That question was recently put to me by a theatreman who has spent many years in the business and who now owns and operates three small theatres.

I gave him what I considered an intelligent answer but way back in the recesses of my mind I could not keep from thinking that here, standing before me, was an excellent example of the difference between a theatre operator and a showman. Here was an "in the flesh" illustration of the absence of sound thinking that marks the abyss between the self-centered mentality of a commercial introvert and the relatively cosmic vision and aims and deeds of the E. V. Richards, the Elmer Rhodens, The Karl Hoblitzelles, the Marty Mullins, the Phil Chakeres, the Tony Sudekums and others who have won lasting distinction not only as successful theatre operators but as leaders in community affairs and as public benefactors.

This man before me is the walking, talking prototype of poor citizenry and failure. Perhaps his bank balance is sound enough, but his mental balance is so shaky that he is no asset to the community and thus is a social failure while his prospects of ultimate real business success are far from rosy.

This writer has always been a militant advocate of an adage—proven so often that it deserves rating as an axiom—to the effect that no community will ever manifest more interest in a business or an endeavor of any kind than the amount of interest the said business or endeavor manifests in the community. In plain common horse sense, this means that if you want to succeed, you have to go out of your way to show the folks that you are one of them; that you are with them in their adversity as well as their prosperity; that you are not only willing to carry your full share of the load of community responsibility, but stand ready to take on a little extra from the fellow who falls by the wayside. You just can't expect success if you are only a "fairweather" friend to the people you serve.

There are unquestionably many other theatremen who have doubts about the benefits to be derived from participation in community endeavor—who feel effort of this kind to be "thankless."

Mr. Manager (or Mr. Owner), one of the most important phases of theatre operation is in the department of Public Relations and participation in, yes, taking the leadership and assuming the bulk of responsibility for the success of charity drives, welfare crusades, cleanup programs, church activities, convention planning, etc. That is the surest and fastest way of cementing your public relations maneuvers into an integral part of community progress.

That fellow I started talking about up front may as well have asked me: "What can public relations do for my business?" And the answer to that question is worthy of considerable discourse.

As a theatreman your first line of public relations is, of course, the service staff. The other activities that go to make up the program of this department are, for the most part, extraneous to actual theatre operation. The functions are many and varied.

Probably the most ticklish of all public realtions to handle is the political office

Keep Sidewalks Clear, House and Lobby Warm

Local ordinances and the ever-present police officer who sees to it that theatres, as well as every business organization, keep their sidewalks clean of snow and ice takes care of some of the accident prevention precautions that should always be in the mind of every theatre manager. And if the police department doesn't enforce the law the insurance company will. But the theatre manager should enforce such a regulation himself.

It is well to remember that whether a person is a patron of the theatre or not, if he slips and falls in front of a theatre, because of accumulated snow or ice, the theatre and often the theatre manager is liable for damages.

Every theatre should be equipped with a snow shovel, scraper and broom and with a supply of rock salt to be used for no other purpose than the removal of snow and ice from the sidewalks for which the theatre is responsible.

In addition to cleaning the sidewalks, other precautions should be taken, including the removal of accumulated snow from the marquee. Serious accidents have happened from such accumulation. If the weather is above the freezing point, the snow may be flushed off with water, providing there is an outlet for the water (as there should be.) If, however, the temperature has fallen below the freezing mark, or if there is no outlet capable of handling large amounts of water, shovel the snow into the street, being careful to rope off areas so as not to give some passerby a snow bath.

As long as snow is on the ground the theatre should have rubber runners in the lobby so that snow caked on feet will come off on the runner, rather than on the theatre carpeting. Runners with corrugated surfaces are preferable. Avoid runners punched with holes; they often catch high heels.

If the theatre has the facilities, it is advisable to establish a checking service for rubbers, galoshes, umbrellas and other storm appurtenances.

The theatre may be subject to drafts which in many cases may be eliminated by the installation of a set of storm doors in the front lobby.

When snow is deep, a tieup with public transportation facilities is indicated. A two-way tieup by which the theatre's screen advises the use of busses, trolley cars, etc., usually will be acceptable to the transportation companies which will carry your current or coming attraction posters free, in return.

Weather can be terrific opposition to any theatre, but when every step is taken to make things more comfortable for patrons, some of the weather curse is eliminated.

King Goodwill Cole

An ex-GI himself, Manager George Cole of Skouras' Nemo Theatre, has taken on the appearance of Santa Claus in welcoming returned servicemen who hail from his theatre's neighborhood in New York City. It all began back in the days when Gothamites were being inducted into the Army. Cole, in cooperation with the local draft board and friendly neighborhhood merchants, provided going-away parties at the theatre for the boys. Now that they are back, Cole is again on hand to greet them at the Nemo with welcome-home parties as his personal guests.

Safeguarding Theatre Against Emergencies Urged

Few Managers, It Is Held, Have Sufficient Knowledge of Theatre to Avert Disasters

One tremendously important thing that constantly should haunt every theatre manager is the possible worry that he and his staff might be "caught short" in an emergency. When the occasion has occurred, everyone around the indigent theatre suddenly has become unusually efficient in "passing the buck"! But alibis and buck-passing are simply other ways of admitting that a theatre manager is totally unfit to handle the job he holds. All of which is an introduction, (and, it is hoped, one that stimulates thought) to a subject called "safeguarding the theatre against emergencies."

What can constitute the most important elements of theatre operation from the standpoint of safey for patrons and for the theatre itself may be broken down roughly into two sections: safety devices, per se and every other possible thing remotely connected with safety!

In a preliminary breakdown something like this is discovered: standpipe hose and connections: fire extinguishers, sprinkler controls, asbestos curtain and fire doors if a full stage is present, electric switches (regular and remote control), emergency lighting equipment fire escapes, panic bolts or other emergency door-opening devices, and last but of perhaps greatest importance, electric master switches.

Results Were Surprising

A few years ago a spot check was made in the form of a survey to find out the percentage of managers who could locate or who even knew about the number of switches existing in their theatres. The answer was surprising and shocking, the positive percentage was so small! Master switches located in projection booths were left to the experts there; those backstage were left to the stage hand, the maintenance man or even to the janitor! In many cases switches located in the cashiers' cages controlled the marquee lighting and other front lighting and the manager didn't even know they existed!

Some managers may resent the implications contained here, but if they are well enough informed about their own operations to know exactly the locations of all switches, they constitute the choice few who rate compliments from immediate superiors about their knowledge and understanding of their own theatre operations.

But They Were Wrong

On the other hand, some managers included in the survey were of the opinion that it was silly and even stupid for them to have to spend their valuable time finding out where every switch was located when various members of their staffs were responsible for those switches. But they were wrong—definitely and positively wrong! As much control as the manager wishes may be delegated to various responsible members of his staff, but it does not relieve him, in any degree, of the necessity of knowing where they are located and what they serve. The occasion may arise when that knowledge may save a theatre from destruction by fire.

Another startling revelation came to hand when it was discovered that out of the managers queried only three knew when their extinguishers had been charged! None had tested standpipe hoses or connections, and only a few of the several who had full stages in use had tested the efficiency of their asbestos curtains or had inspected the mechanical contrivances that made them work. Only about half had inspected the panic bolts on their exit doors (as part of their regular inspection system) and practically none (exactly two) were present when port-hole shutters in booths were tested. Neither of these two, incidentally, had made any rule about the dates when these inspections must be held! None of these managers with full stage theatres had ever inspected or tried out the stage skylight windows, a vitally important factor in the case of fire. Most of them knew where frequently used switches were located, while about half knew where most of the master switches were, and what they served.

These facts may seem to be a blanket indictment of showmen concerning their lack of sufficient knowledge of their operations to handle any kind of emergency that might occur in their theatres. And as far as the few managers questioned is concerned, it definitely is an indictment. It is safe to assert that panic and at least considerable theatre damage would occur should any of these theatres be visited with an emergency—panic and damage that could be averted or at least lessened had these men known their jobs and responsibilities thoroughly.

Must Be Proficient

Let's get down to cases. Operating a theatre is a man-sized job, and no one can honestly claim to be a real manager and to progress in his chosen field if he is not proficient in every phase of theatre operation. Some men are top-notchers in exploitation—they can sell a show. Others are whizzes at front house operation. But it takes a good combination of the two to make the really expert manager.

The old gag about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure has never been better applied than in preparing for theatre emergencies—the damage in life and property can be so great as to scare the thinking man nearly to death.

Preparing for or preventing panic or other emergencies is a matter of nothing more or less than regular routine. It starts with periodical inspection of the theatre itself and all of its appurtenances, together with those employes charged with some specific responsibility. As a rough series of suggestions that may be added to in many ways in accordance with the requirements and physical makeup of individual theatres it might be well to start this way:

Inspect All Outside Ladders

Get up on the roof and see that no rubbish has accumulated that might start a fire or clog the drains. Then inspect all outside ladders to make sure that they haven't started to corrode. Take a good look at the flashing and roofing material to discover possible leaks. Then get into the hanging ceiling, if the theatre has one, and see if lighting coves or fixtures need relamping. See if the cat-walks are properly protected and if there are securely fastened hand-rails in place for employes who might have to use them.

Hanging fixtures that are lowered or can be reached from the hanging ceiling should be done over regularly. The winches should be inspected and the cable should be gone over inch by inch for fraying and possibly imminent breaks. Just the possibility of one of those hanging chandeliers dropping into a theatre audience should give a manager the shivers—thinking about it a moment should be sufficient to prevent any accident, if the thoughts are carried out into inspection and repair.

Flashlight, Overalls, Determination

There are unlimited numbers of suggestions that could be included here but the few that have been presented should be enough to stimulate thought along the lines necessary to keep a theatre in good enough repair so that the possibility of serious accident is eliminated insofar as human ingenuity can do it. By grabbing a flashlight and putting on a pair of overalls, together with a good bit of determination, any manager can get acquainted with his theatre. The acquaintance will pay dividends. What is there to wait for?

MANAGER'S CHECK REMINDER
Fire Prevention

☐ Fire extinguishers. . . . Refill and impress location upon staff.

☐ Are fire doors and shutters in good condition and in good working order?

☐ Inflammable material. . . . Closets and backstage are flagrant violators. Booth must be absolutely devoid of stoves or inflmmable material. Allow no papers to be placed in shutter windows of booth as these may be an impediment to the easy and quick closing of the shutters when fusible link on chain that holds shutters melts.

☐ How long has it been since the staff participated in a fire drill? These drills should be held at least once a month.

☐ If smoking is permitted in the balcony, be sure an attendant is on duty at all times, and that a fire extinguisher is nearby, in case a flame starts in some way from a lighted cigaret.

☐ Inspect all sections of the theatre, including store rooms, janitor's room and other places where storage might cause spontaneous combustion.

Check Water Tank

Now may be a little late for the suggestion. Nevertheless, if the top of the theatre water tank has not been inspected this winter it should be done immediately to determine if it is in good condition to stand the rest of the season's rigors. The ladder, platforms and other tank parts also should be thoroughly inspected. The insulation on the supply pipe should be particularly checked to see if it is in good enough shape to prevent freezing.

holders and aspirants. Adroitness, reserve and diplomacy of exceptional order are required if you are to hold your business on a neutral basis so far as selection and election of political candidates are concerned and still develop and maintain strong, healthy social and personal contacts with members of the body politic.

It has never been and never will be good business practice for a theatre, its manager, its owner or its personnel to be partial in the interest of any candidate, issue or office. Yet, it is highly essential that the theatre as a whole manifest an active impartial interest in all political movements that affect the community. You can be friends with all candidates by the simple process of using the facilities at your disposal to encourage your patrons to go to the polls and exercise their sovereign rights as American citizens on election day. By running trailers and using lobby display boards to encourage registration or the payment of poll taxes to insure their right to participate in coming elections. Use your screen to impartially present vital information about bond issues, etc. In this way you will have the respect of all politicians and yet maintain a healthy neutrality that will protect your interests regardless of the outcome of any contest or issue.

Power of the Screen

Every political aspirant or office holder has a healthy regard for the power of the theatre screen and by the simple process of your using it only for the purpose of getting voters to pay attention to coming events (not in any way attempting to influence their decisions) the working followers of each side or candidate you are impressing all with your sense of fairness while at the same time demonstrating the tremendous power of the weapon you alone can wield.

You cannot afford to be one of those thoughtless business men who often remark that they abhor and refuse to show interest or take part in politics. Politics is the machinery that operates your government and unless the "good" citizens manifest an interest and take active part in the election of officials, they will find themselves governed by laws enacted by the "bad" citizens, who for selfish reasons will take active part in "Politics." Always do your best to get the good citizens—your patrons—to vote. Always go out of your way to emphatically illustrate the strength of screen messages as a vital factor in influencing public opinion. Only in this way can you be certain to win and hold the wholesome respect of political aspirants and office holders.

The very glamor attached to theatre business; the carefree atmosphere we purposely create to mask the hard work that goes into the operation of the theatre; our own false claims that we are in the AMUSEMENT business puts us in the unmerited category of NONESSENTIALS and makes us a mark for every kind of tax that can be conceived in the minds of tax-crazed politicos.

Really theatres do not belong in the AMUSEMENT category but deserve classification as PLACES OF RECREATION—and Dame Nature herself is authority for the recommendation that one third of the period of worldly existence should be devoted to recreation.

Capitalize on Political Friendships

Such reclassification is well to keep in mind whenever you find your business being treated unfairly in tax assessments. But of greater importance is the capitalizing on the political friendships you make through impartial screen messages followed by personal and social contacts. Don't wait until you want something to make the acquaintance and cultivate the friendship of office holders. Start early in their respective careers as office seekers and you can be assured of an attentive audience and a sympathetic ear being given your outpourings of trouble.

Let me caution right here about being unfair yourself in your attitude about taxes, etc. and against any impression I may have left with you that all politicians are out to impose on theatres. The tax situation is always highly controversial and most unfair proposals against theatres are not born of malice. It's simply a burden that everybody wants to dodge, and when John, the shoe dealer, goes to his friend Jim the politician and explains that his business should be relieved of a particular tax burden, Jim has to find some other fellow to take it over, and that somebody usually is one who "don't want any part of politics."

Yell Like Hell

Always be ready to assume your full share of equitable taxation—and that means taxes that are indiscriminately assessed against all citizenry. But get up on your hind legs and yell like hell when they single you or your business out to assume some special issue in which other businesses are not required to participate. Nine times out of ten—if you have been impartially active in politics and enjoyed friendly, social relations with office holders—it will only be necessary for you to point out the unfair position in which your business is placed in order to get the merited relief from proposed tax or ordinance.

I said you should yell like hell but be diplomatic in your yelling. Don't threaten. If you've handled your own political participation impartially the fellow you're talking to is overly conscious of the potency of your screen as an instrument to run him out of office should he gain your enmity through unfair or questionable methods.

When I started this article it was my intention to brush over the general scheme of the more important items comprising "public relations," but the subject is too vital and too intricate to cover in any one episode. There is so much in the way of tax proposals facing theatre operation that additional space is needed and an attempt to discuss and analyze the impending situation will be made in a follow-up article.

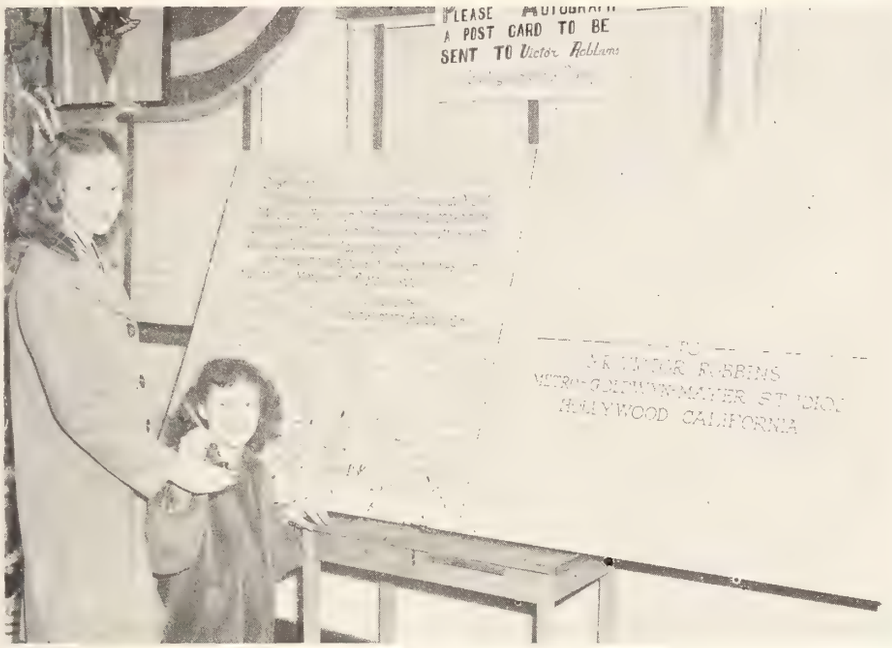
In the meantime let me advise that if you don't know your state and national Representative and Senator, you cultivate their acquaintance at the earliest possible moment. You're going to need them and need them badly. Also that, if you and your entire staff of employes are not considered among the best liked folks in the vicinity of your theatre, begin rehabilitating or making changes until you and your organization become a formidable factor to be consulted and solicited to participate in any and all civic ventures affecting the welfare or living conditions of the people who are your customers.

Clough Sponsors Basketball Club

Herbert (Bert) Clough, manager of Golden State's Lorin Theatre, Berkeley, California, has added to his many self-assigned jobs for community welfare the sponsorship of the South Berkeley "Bull Dogs," basketball team of an inter-racial group of youngsters. Clough is equipping the team with uniforms by the expedient of inducing each South Berkeley merchant to sponsor one boy.

Clough took on this latest assignment after having completed one of the most vigorous and fruitful community efforts for the holiday season. He gave 2000 kids of the neighborhood a free show, plus presents for a Christmas gift, distributed 1000 presents to various children's hospitals and homes—all of which he promoted through merchant cooperation. He tried to promote some Christmas decorations for the town square and when this didn't jell, Clough borrowed a P.A. system, hung the horns over his marquee, and flooded the entire square twice daily, for half-hour periods, with music.

Cahalan Wins CC Award for 'Service to the Community'



Francis J. Cahalan, manager of the Magnet Theatre, Claremont, N. H., received the award for "distinguished service" to the community presented annually by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of the town.

The presentation was made at a "silver anniversary" banquet of the Junior Chamber held in Claremont on January 18, and at which Governor Dale of New Hampshire was the principal speaker.

Enforce 'No Smoking' Rule

In certain areas of the theatre the "no smoking" rule should be rigidly enforced, particularly in the booth and backstage. A frequent check will reveal whether or not the rule is maintained. Prominently posted "No Smoking" signs will help.

HAIL HOME TOWN BOY WHO MAKES GOOD. When a local Parsons, Kansas, boy made good in MGM's "Twice Blessed," Arthur Turner, Parson Theatre manager, set up this huge postcard in the lobby and asked everyone in town to sign their names under the congratulatory salutation. Needless to mention, everyone in town did sign.

Des Moines Tribune Pleads for Theatre Movie Programs for Special-Age Groups

The fight for special movie programming for certain age groups is currently finding favor in isolated houses throughout the country. With parents' and teachers' associations threatening to keep their children from the nation's theatres due to the influx of unsuitable films, theatremen have been showing hour-long programs packed full of cartoons on their matinees in an effort to draw little Johnny and Jane from their parents' protective censorship. The Beacon Theatre in New York went as far as to appoint a special staff of officials, social workers and child educators and allow them to designate what they thought suitable fare for the kiddies of their community. But these are only isolated cases.

'Best Cater to Mass Demands'

The power of the press forced the issue in Des Moines, Iowa, where the Tribune, in an editorial that pulled no punches, claimed that theatres had best cater to mass demands. Said the editorial: "Programming is aimed not at a single age group with its special needs, but at the whole mass of moviegoers, with the result that at times no part of it is very well served."

The article also called attention to the fact that two other groups were not being well served, particularly at Des Moines which has almost 20 theatres operating, and that those two groups comprised patrons who liked single features and those who would like to see a good foreign film occasionally.

"The American enterpriser's habit of catering to mass demands is one of the most important factors in sustaining both our prosperity and our democracy," the Tribune said, "but sometimes it has its inconvenient side. For example, here in Des Moines we have almost 20 theatres, yet it is rare to be able to find a whole program at any one of them suitable for young children."

The editorial admitted that practically all of the theatres have suitable children's films occasionally, but the companion feature "often as not is something boring, scaring, or over sophisticated for youngsters." It also claimed that foreign films at any one of the commercial movie houses are rarer than a blue moon, and foreign films other than English are practically non-existent.

"Cities as big as New York, Chicago and Boston have theatres which run nothing but foreign films and apparently make it pay—and because demand in Des Moines isn't heavy enough for that, we get almost none," the Tribune complained. "We aren't calling any names about this. We know the movie people have thought this out carefully and are always watching for new trends in public taste."

Relenting for a moment, the paper pointed out that there was considerable choice available to the movie-goer—between high-price and low-price shows; between new and old; between romance, comedy, musical and western; between different stars who are well known and loved.

"But we suggest that one of the developments of the years to come might well be to broaden the choice. Why couldn't there be occasional whole programs suitable for small children, if only two or three times a year? And other whole programs suitable for 'Teenagers? And others for adults and we don't mean 'Men Only' peepshows!"

12 Noted Artists in 'BelAmi' Competition

By sponsoring a competition among twelve distinguished artists who are at present engaged in painting a single subject, The Temptation of St. Anthony, Loew-Lewin Productions are focussing national interest on their new production, "Bel Ami," based on Guy de Maupassant's novel and starring George Sanders.

In February the 12 canvases will be submitted to a board of three judges, Alfred H. Barr, Jr., Marcel Duchamp and Sidney Janis, all authorities on modern art, who will select the best painting which will appear in an important sequence in the film and which will win for its artist first prize of $3000 of the $8500 in prizes in the competition. All other artists will receive $500 and the paintings will remain their property but will be loaned to the Loew-Lewin organization for a two-year exhibition tour of museums and art galleries of this country and abroad.

The competing artists, several of whom are noted surrealist painters, represent half a dozen countries in addition to the United States. They include, Ivan Le Lorraine Albright, Chicago; Eugene Berman, born in Russia and now in Hollywood; Leonore Carrington, English painter and writer now in Mexico; Salvador Dali, Catalonian, whose art is becoming familiar to motion picture audiences through his work in "Spellbound" and other films; Paul Delvaux, Belgian; Max Ernst, who escaped from Germany during the Hitler regime and who now lives in New York; Leonora Fini, Rome; Louis Guglielmi, New York; Horace Pippin, West Chester, Pa.; Abraham Rattner, New York; Stanley Spencer, England; Dorothea Tanning, New York.

Loew and Lewin previously have made films in which art of a high standard has been an important subject including "The Moon and Sixpence," commonly supposed to have been based on the life of Paul Gauguin, and the recent "The Picture of Dorian Gray," directed by Lewin for which he brought Ivan Le Lorraine Albright to Hollywood to paint the portrait used in the Oscar Wilde story.

Production on "Bel Ami" will start in early Spring with Albert Lewin directing.

Loew Circuit May Set Co-Op Ad Record on 'Spellbound'

Partially announced plans for the exploitation of David O. Selznick's "Spellbound" throughout the Loew Theatre Circuit indicate that this picture will set a record for cooperative advertising obtained from local merchants. The Boston plans, for instance, were decided at a meeting at which Division Manager Charles Kurtzman presided and which was attended by George Kraska, Je Di Pesa, Phil Engel and Selznick's representative, Herb Berg.

An increased budget for newspaper advertising, radio announcements, a beauty contest on the stage, many cooperative ads, radio interviews, distribution of large quantities of heralds, a special theatre front give only a brief picture of the huge campaign, final details of which are now being placed in operation.—BO.

Excellent 'Cornered' Contest

For the showing of RKO's "Cornered" at the Palace, Columbus, O., prizes were offered to soldiers and ex-servicemen for letters telling their most thrilling experiences in which they had the enemy cornered.—CO.

Exploitation Campaign of the Month

December 1945

THEY WERE EXPENDABLE
(MGM)

MGM's 'Expendable' Campaign Takes Over Washington With An Intense Barrage of Events

An outstanding demonstration of how a group of experienced and resourceful theatremen can dominate the thinking of a metropolis for a period of days by thorough planning and minute attention to detail, with the result that newspapers, radio and every other medium of publicity devote reams of space to an event toward which the theatremen's planning was directed, was the world premiere of MGM's "They Were Expendable," essayed at Loew's Capitol Theatre, Washington, D. C.

Loew's Division Manager Carter Barron, Publicist Henry Shields and MGM's Field Exploiteer Tom Baldridge handled the campaign under the direction of Howard Dietz, MGM vice-president and director of advertising, publicity and exploitation, and William R. Ferguson, MGM exploitation manager. The campaign dominated Washington for four successive days, was enormously successful and has been selected by a panel of showmen for SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW as the Exploitation Campaign of the Month for December, 1945.

To plan a campaign so that every minute of four days is to be accounted for with some sort of activity that will add to the momentum of rapidly moving events has come to follow a sort of pattern, with the planners usually going into conference with one or two basic ideas from which the details eventually spring into being. So it was with the MGM and Loew Theatre crews when the plans for "They Were Expendable" were discussed. Continuing to follow the pattern they assigned various members of the crew to specific jobs, received promises of cooperation from the U. S. Navy, the Treasury Department and from radio and newspaper executives who sat in on the meetings.

The basic idea that merged was called a Salute to the Navy and was to be staged in connection with a Victory Bond Premiere of the film. That was all, but it turned out to be more than plenty! When the Loew and MGM boys told the Navy what they thought should be done, it might have been with a background of slight trepidation—the program was that ambitious, but they got all and more than they asked for. The Navy brass issued orders and, brother, the Navy hopped! One section of those orders insured the presence at the Washington premiere and at other cities where the film had its first showings, of Commander John Bulkeley, commander of the PT Squadrons around which the action of the film revolves, and the most decorated hero of the Navy. Personal appearances of this hero indicated the importance attached to the film's premiere by the Navy and also the public's interest in it.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer came through to the extent that Robert Montgomery, recently discharged from the Navy, and who stars in the film, was to be present at the premiere accompanied by Donna Reed, who plays the love interest. Plenty of their time and activity were included in the celebration, with Miss Reed, particularly, appearing on so many radio programs and making so many appearances at hospitals, canteens, etc., during the four days it is a wonder she found time enough to sleep.

On the Sunday before the opening the Navy moved its Victory Bond Selling train into Washington and opened it for public inspection. This consisted of three exhibits. "Death From the Air" occupied three tracks of the B & O Terminal and showed a Boko, VI and V2 bombs. "Trophies From Tokio" occupied two tracks and showed Japanese amphibious tanks and other military equipment, and another track nearby showed "Hidden Death," consisting of various types of booby traps.

The arrival of the train was made the occasion of a national radio program via the Columbia Broadcasting System on which Under-Secretary of the Treasury Bell and Assistant Secretary of the Navy Hensel were featured speakers while skywriting airplanes overhead etched out the figures of the Navy anchor and the Treasury Department's V. The broadcast also was the occasion of the presentation of a Distinguished Flying Cross to AMMC Plotner Gedney by Rear Admiral H. B. Miller. All of the speeches mentioned the coming premiere of "They Were Expendable." Representing the War Finance Committee were Ted Gamble, Edward Shugrue and others.

On Monday Donna Reed arrived in Washington and was greeted by the commander of the Victory Train, which was the occasion of another radio broadcast. Then press and radio representatives were guests on a PT boat on a cruise down the Potomac River where they witnessed captured Japanese planes simulating a strafing of other PT boats with a Navy blimp overhead broadcasting the activity. A Navy helicopter also demonstrated an air-sea rescue of a man overboard.

Following a luncheon for the press and radio representatives aboard the PT boat it was docked for public inspection and later in the day Miss Reed started on her tour of visits to naval hospitals, the Washington Stage Door Canteen, etc. Miss Reed continued these visits during her four-day stay in the Capitol.

Luncheons, receptions galore for Washington big-wigs, Navy brass hats, the press, members of the House of Representatives, the Senate, Justices of the United States Supreme Court, Treasury Department officials and others continued right up until the evening of the premiere.

Starting five days before the premiere Washington's radio stations started a barrage of special broadcasts about the Salute to the Navy and "They Were Expendable." Nine full half-hour broadcasts were features of the bombardment with innumerable gratis spot announcements assisting in building up an expectant theatre audience.

The theatre lobby, front and foyer took on

Hat Display Splurge on in New England for 'Saratoga Trunk'

In addition to installing an elaborate window display plus Sunday and daily newspaper ads featuring models of hats worn by Ingrid Bergman in Warners' "Saratoga Trunk," one of the leading Boston specialty shops for women, Wethern's plans similar displays in its branch shops in Brockton, New Bedford, and Brookline, Mass.

Window displays will feature stills of scenes from the picture, as well as the special Look magazine brochure on 'Saratoga Trunk." Newspaper ads will carry credit lines for the local playdate and will be augmented by publicity stories.

Students' Art Helps to Sell 'China Sky' for Chas. Howard

Employing a tieup with a high school during National Book Week, Manager Charlie Howard of Schine's Avalon, Easton, Md., used this medium as a showcase to exploit RKO's "China Sky."

Besides an exceptionally well-attended benefit, Howard initiated a poster-drawing contest with drawing classes, and proffered the students press books to guide them. The posters were placed on display throughout the town's store windows, all of which provided a merry jingle at the Avalon box-office.

'Coming Hits' Publicity

Knowledge of coming attractions will keep the patron in close touch with the theatre in order that he will be sure not to miss them. If outstanding films are on the way, then it would be wise to publicize the fact. In Hartford, Conn., Lou Cohen of the Loew-Poli Theatre gave the Hartford Times a roundup of forthcoming hits that ran for some 17 inches of swell publicity.

War Trophies, Identification Stunt Sell Two Films for Max Cooper

Taking advantage of available props and angles, Max Cooper, manager of the Cove Theatre, Glen Cove, N. Y., put across a clever, inexpensive exploitation campaign for RKO's double feature "First Yank into Tokyo" and "George White's Scandals." Through the local American Legion Post, he was able to secure enough war trophies, including captured Jap flags and other souvenirs, for an impressive lobby display which attracted advance attention. Going a step further, he secured the cooperation of the first local boy to enter Tokyo, in selling bonds in the theatre lobby on opening day. Newspapers gave the item considerable space.

For "Scandals," Cooper engaged an attractive model and sent her on a shopping tour opening night, dressed in an exact duplicate of Joan Davis' costume in the picture. The first ten shoppers in each store to recognize her received free guest tickets to the theatre, cost of which was paid by the stores participating in the promotion.

That 'Don't Tell' Angle

Napkins, doilies and teaser cards, all offering the "Don't tell what she did!" gag, effectively publicized WB's "Mildred Pierce" at Schine's Auburn, Auburn, N. Y. Manager Ray Corcoran coupled the using of these eye-catchers, which he sent out to restaurants, lunch counters and places where crowds congregated, with a special card, which he mailed to a sportsmen's meeting, tying in the meeting and a plug on the film.

College Scene Exploits Film

By exploiting the fact that a scene in 20th-Fox's "House on 92nd Street" was taken at Ohio Wesleyan University, Manager George Ramsdell of Schine's Strand Theatre, Delaware, Ohio, enticed the college to support the showing and at the same time erected a special display at the school.

'Expendable' Events Excite Washington

Navy coloration, with battleship blinker signals erected atop the Capitol and Palace Theatre marquees flashing messages about the premiere. Eight hoists of flags decorated the Capitol front, spelling out appropriate code mesages about the film and the Bond Premiere. A 40-foot banner was strung across the marquee front the day of the premiere and photographic three-sheets and one-sheets gave the theatre an appearance of excitement. The Navy's 800-million candle power searchlights with 10-mile-high beams that were visible for more than 100 miles were located and operated just across the street from the theatre the night of the premiere.

In the lobby a PT boat torpedo and a model of the boat itself were displayed a week in advance and a Naval escort of two men were on duty at all times to protect the equipment and to answer questions about the PT boats.

Because of the tieup with the War Finance Committee and the Bond premiere, Loew's was enabled to distribute special trailers about the Salute to the Navy and the premiere to 42 theatres in the Washington area, thus obtaining unprecedented screen coverage in opposition theatres!

Away from the theatre itself 300 Washington street lamp posts were decorated with bunting and 22x28 offset cards advertising the premiere. More than 350 Washington house organs were serviced with stories and mats. Other outside displays included 250 street car cards and 6000 window cards.

Government Bureaus Cooperate

Most government bureaus and agencies cooperated by utilizing their bulletin boards, interoffice loud speaker systems and departmental publications to publicize the event, and the District Commissioner's office passed a resolution authorizing the theatre to block off a portion of the street for the Naval exhibit.

Department store windows were decorated with a combination of Christmas and Navy material and book store windows were given in abundance. Comander Bulkeley autographed 100 copies of the book which were sent to newspaper editors, radio program directors, commentators and columnists.

So many other tieups were made by direct mail to schools, colleges, etc., that space limitations prevent their listing here, but an indication of how successful the campaign was is evidenced by the sales of more than $750,000 in E Bonds for the premiere performance. Interest was so great that crowds waited outside the theatre until the end of the evening's activities just to see the celebrities leave. Among the 3511 persons attending were 48 admirals, seven general officers, two cabinet officers and one supreme court justice.

'Tracy' Late Show Sold By Comic Strip Tiein

Newspaper and radio tieups were in a large measure responsible for the large turnout for the single midnight showing of RKO Radio's "Dick Tracy" at the Senate Theatre, Harrisburg, managed by Bob Sidman.

Sidman arranged with the Harrisburg Telegraph to run an eight-column ad under the Dick Tracy comic strip three days in advance of the opening, and also mortised into the regular strip a slug giving the theatre name and playdate.

The midnight show was plugged via radio, but not in conjunction with the serialization of the comic strip, since Sidman well knows that little boys and girls should be home and in bed at midnight.

IT'S LO AGAIN. Loew's State Theatre, Providence, uses the "Lo!" so often seen in Loew's New York City theatre advertising, to educate Providence moviegoers in the currect pronunciation of L-O-E-W to rhyme with Lo. Simple isn't it? The device also serves to get eye attention on newspaper advertising pages and succeeds admirably. The ad itself is a nicely designed announcement.

Discount Card Week Held Business Aid

Proving to be one of the more effective stunts in the tried and tested pages of 'showmanship,' the staging of "Discount Card Week" is revived and suggested to theatremen who are going slightly grey trying to hypo patronage. Enlisting the aid of merchants in a cooperative tieup, discount cards are offered, whereby discounts in merchandise can be received at local stores, with each purchase of a theatre ticket.

These cards contain the names of the merchants offering reductions on their merchandise for the week or month, as the case may be. In return, the stores carry attractive displays and window cards advertising theatre tieup. Also suggested are cooperative ads in local dailies, prominently publicizing the tieup.

Special jubilee sales can be conducted, with the theatre placing a booth in the cooperating stores, where an attractive young lady in fancy costume can personally greet patrons and present guest tickets to the theatre. Appropriate signs showing theatre, picture and playdate credit should be well placed.

Gilman Gives Picture A Lavish Campaign

A lavish campaign preceding and during the three-week run of "Weekend at the Waldorf" was arranged by Sam Gilman, manager of Loew's Regent, where the picture played in Harrisburg.

Newspaper space, both paid and free, was almost tripled, and special stunts called attention of moviegoers to the picture. A holiday season midnight show provided the impetus for considerable advance publicity in theatre columns of city papers, with favorable reviews and, in the Harrisburg Telegraph, a full column of MGM hits of the season, headed by "Weekend."

Gilman issued special tickets for the holiday showing, which were imprinted with faces of the stars. He provided 40x60s, 12,000 throwaways, a trailer, and set up a ticket booth at a city dance palace.

Jewelers and photographers cooperated in newspaper advertising, both using photographs of the stars, and radio spots on the three city stations were obtained, with WKBO naming the picture the "film of the week," and distributing guest tickets to lucky listeners.

Displays in all hotel lobbies, a luncheonette, and music stores and counters were arranged both in advance and for the first week of the run.

Gilman called attention to the Look magazine promotion by placarding all newsstands and counters.

Although the theatre does not usually use valances, a beautiful white and blue silk drape was used around the marquee, with the title as the principal copy. Names of the stars occupied the marquee spot in lights.—HA.

Nelson Deserves the Credit

Exploitation for day-and-date attractions at the Grandin and Lee theatres, Roanoke, Va., is handled by Walter Nelson, manager of the Lee, with Fleet Robinson, manager of the Grandin, handling newspaper publicity. Thus Nelson deserves the credit for arranging the swell photo contest on "The Dolly Sisters," which was pictured in a recent issue of STR (Dec. 29).

UNUSUAL DISPLAY. This startling departure from conventional automobile design is a three-wheeled car with its wheels arranged in imitation of the landing gear of 3-wheeled fighter planes. It was displayed in the lobby of the Hawaii Music Hall Theatre, Hollywood, during the run of "Blithe Spirit." The car was featured in the theatre's newsreel and its display in the theatre lobby, with news photos in newspapers, focused attention on the theatre and its current attraction.

Modern Alger Makes Good With Novel Ad

'Tis said by many men that Horatio Alger, in his day, was top man in his field when it came to thinking up successful money-making ideas. Even so, he had nothing on a modern Alger named Jack, publicity manager for the Majestic Theatre, LaSalle, Ill., who recently cut himself a well-sized niche on his namesake's legend by adding a new twist to a co-op ad on Paramount's "Duffy's Tavern."

Paid for by a local bistro called "Duffy's Tavern," Alger's ad in a LaSalle paper featured copy inviting patrons to come-see-and-compare, to wit: "See Duffy's Tavern at the Majestic; after the show come to Duffy's Tavern and see what Them Movie Actors Got That We Ain't Got??? Poisenality??? Compare the character in the movie with the real McCoy at Duffy's in LaSalle."

According to Alger, LaSalle citizens crowded the portals of both the theatre and the tavern, which put a smile on the faces of the respective managers, and another successful chapter in the Alger book.

Perfume and Music Ad Tieup Sells 'Rhapsody' in Champaign

An attractive, distinctive full-page advertisement, circumscribing various brands of perfume with apropos song titles taken from "Rhapsody in Blue," was prominently featured in all three Champaign, Ill., newspapers by Robeson's department store in a tieup with the Rialto Theatre concurrent with the showing of the Warner musical at that house.

The ad layout displayed a group of large musical notes, each encircling a bottle of perfume, with the brand name within the oval and the Gershwin song title on the stem.

UA Sets $200,000 Ad Budget for 'Scandal in Paris'

The advertising budget for Arnold Pressburger's "A Scandal in Paris," has been set at $200,000 by United Artists. The allocation covers newspapers, magazines and trade publications.

Paul N. Lazarus, Jr. advertising and publicity director, outlined the campaign to UA district managers at their meeting in New York earlier this week.

A STATEMENT by W. A. SCULLY...

WE think the time has come for all exhibitors to realize that pictures with universal entertainment value, no matter where they are made, have box office potentialities.

We are releasing these six English pictures, firstly, because they are very fine pictures and conform to any competitive standard of entertainment.

SECONDLY, we are releasing them because we feel they will be commercially successful and will do well at your box office if you augment the promotion effort we are planning to give them.

Furthermore, we believe that in these pictures there are personalities who will inevitably reach stardom in this country because they have proved, by their box office stature in England and other parts of the world, that they have what it takes.

WE don't ask you to take our word for the quality of these pictures and for the box office content contained in them. We only ask you to shake off any pre-conceived notion you have, and see these pictures so that you may better understand their possibilities.

There is something good in all pictures. Certainly if you consider your job important, then it is important you see these pictures!

William (Bill) Coons, Film Row druggist, is planning a trip to Florida, to enjoy the sunshine and improve his health.

The Indianapolis Variety Club will install its newly elected officers February 4th in the Antlers Hotel ballroom. There will be a buffet luncheon and dancing following the ceremonies.

Al Blocher, of the Y. & W. Circuit, is in Chicago on business.

DENVER

Charles M. Reagan, vice-president in charge of sales, headed the New York delegation that attended the Paramount sales meeting held in Denver Monday and Tuesday. The meeting was attended by home office executives, several exchange managers, and others. Sales policies and production plans occupied the time. Reagan declared the public is more receptive to realism in films than it was a few years ago and that was why movies are following novels more closely than they formerly did. "Several years ago, we couldn't have made a picture like "Lost Weekend" and expected it to be a commercial success," he said. "But movie fans who prefer the lighter fare need not be afraid of a steady diet of serious films. We're still in business to make money, so we'll still produce musicals and light comedies. Movie makers feel a responsibility to produce pictures showing the American way of life as it really is, rather than as many people in foreign countries think it is." Attending the western division sales meeting were Reagan, George A. Smith, Claude Lee, Curtis Mitchell, Oscar Morgan, Pat Scollard, Joe Walsh, Fred Leroy and Lester Coleman, all of New York; Ralph LiBeau, district manager, Kansas City; Del Goodman, district manager, Los Angeles; Hugh Braly, district manager, Denver; C. J. Bell, manager, Denver; Herb Kaufman, manager, Seattle; Jim Clark, manager, Portland; Jess McBride, manager, Omaha; Neal East, manager, San Francisco; Al Taylor, manager, Los Angeles; Harry Hamburg, manager, Des Moines; Ray Copeland, manager, Kansas City; Morris Schweitzer, manager, St. Louis; Ish White, sales manager, Los Angeles, and these salesmen, office managers and others: Frank Smith, Henry Haustein, Rube Rosenblatt, James French, Max Hadfield, John Hurley, Loyd Leiser, Ted Reese, Al Chaffee, John Koenig, Ralph Hayden, William Haarman, Miss Hannah Trater, Mrs. Tillie Chalk, Robert Blair and F. S. Gulbranson, Spanish version representative.

Charles P. Manley, Kansas City popcorn machine manufacturer, died in Denver while on a visit to the National Western Stock Show. The body was removed to Kansas City for funeral and burial.

The Acme, Riverton, Wyo., has been sold to Tom Knight by Mrs. Lee Mote. Knight has been with the theater for 14 years.

Kenneth Powell of Wray, Colo., has been spending several weeks in California on a vacation.

PHILADELPHIA

Everett C. Callow, Warner Theatres advertising man, has worked up another stunt that should bring in plenty more dimes for the March of Dimes campaign. He has organized a group of pretty girls, known as the Night Club Commandos, who will swarm around the town's bright spots and round up customers for the infantile paralysis fund. This is just one more way the entertainment field in Philadelphia is working to bring in those precious dimes.

Sam Stiefel, former theatre biggie in these parts, who departed for the west coast for bigger things, is now behind a group of race horses, and has named J. Herb Schock as his trainer.

John Goller, head of the Hollywood exchange, is going to Florida because of ill health. He has taken in Carl Munzer as an associate to conduct his affairs while he is away.

Harry Goldberg, now national head of the Warner Theatres publicity department, but who originated from here, is receiving congratulations on his appointment as a member of the board of directors of the National Anti-Defamation League.

At an affair at the Bellevue Stratford Hotel on Benjamin Franklin's Birthday, January 17, Ted Gamble was awarded the Poor Richard Club's annual gold medal of achievement for his great work as "history's greatest salesman" in the sale of War Bonds during all the War Bond Drives. Roger Clipp, president of the club, made the presentation and bought from Gamble the one billionth E Bond which was of a $1,000 denomination and announced that it would hang in a frame in the Poor Richard Club.

DETROIT

Film Classics, is in Detroit on a brief business trip that called for conferences with Albert Dezel, manager of the Detroit-Cincinnati-Cleveland circuit for the organization.

With the expected early return of 2 more United Detroit Theatres employes from the armed services, only one will be outside the fold, as the Earl Hudson organization laid plans for a postwar program second to none ever attempted in Michigan. Those expected back soon are Harold Brown, booker, Army; Leo Ward, manager of the Norwood Theatre, Marines. James Easson, former manager of the Palms State, will be the only member outside the civilian fold. He has been wearing khaki only a year and the date of his discharge can't as yet be approximated.

Of interest to Michigan movie exhibitors is the new $30,000 theatre being erected in Perry, Mich., a community of less than a thousand population.

Before launching the "March of Dimes" drive, Detroit and Michigan movie executives met with officials of the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation in the Statler Hotel and saw demonstrations of muscle re-education by Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, medical director of the National Foundation. Greer Garson's appeal for the drive will be featured on all Detroit and Michigan screens throughout the drive. Chairmen for the drive in the theatres are J. Oliver Brooks, Butterfield Theatres; Paul Schlossman, Muskegon, Mich.; David Newman, Co-Operative Theatres of Detroit; Frank J. Downey, and Jack Goldhar, United Artists Corporation.

CLEVELAND

Sol Schwartz, general manager of RKO Theatres, spent a day in town last week, this being his first visit to Cleveland in almost a year. He arrived just in time to see big crowds filling the Palace Theatre for the first stage show presented there since last November when the vaudfilm policy was shelved for straight pictures. Milt Harris, former local publicity director and now managing the Miami (Florida) Drive-In, writes to invite all Clevelanders Miami bound, to look him up.

Dorsey Brown, ex-serviceman and former MGM office manager, is back with the company.

Variety Club, under the leadership of PRC Branch Manager Edwin R. Bergman, last week presented Crile General Hospital with a greatly needed new motion picture screen. Motion pictures are used extensively and with marked success in the hospital's pschychiatric ward.

Mrs. Jack Soog, wife of the local MGM branch manager, left over the weekend for Santa Fe, New Mexico, to get first hand information about her newly arrived grandson.

H. L. Tracy was around last week introducing C. M. Boyer, to whom he has sold his Temple Theatre in Willard. Tracy is on his way to Hot Springs, Ark. for an extended vacation.

Home on leave are Gloria Sogg Albert and her husband, Lt. (j.g.) Gerald Albert.

August Ilg of the Ohio Theatre, Lorain, was in town for the trade screening of MGM's "Ziegfeld Follies."

B. Rose, owner of the Sunbeam, died last week. His son Bernard, continues to operate the house.

William Shartin arrived to take over the management of the local United Artist branch, but his wife and daughter Iris, went on to California.

Sherman Germaine of the United Artist New Haven office has been assigned as acting office manager here until Lester Dowdell has regained his health.

J. Maxwell Joice, Paramount exploiteer, really took over the ITO convention in Columbus, what with his banners in the convention hall, a cocktail party with a brunette hostess tagged "Kitty," a blonde hostess named "Susie Slagle," a musician in Spanish costume with "Masquerade in Mexico" on his sash and paper cocktail napkins imprinted "Lost Weekend."

Nat Wolf, Warner zone manager, made two trips to Portsmouth during the week to see about correcting the $7000 damage to the Laroy Theatre caused by fire.

Abe Kramer, one of the top officials of the Associated Circuit, had the pleasure last week of seeing his daughter, Hope, on the screen. She is starred in PRC's forthcoming "Flying Serpent."

WASHINGTON

Theatre owners of the District of Columbia, have thrown their full support behind the United National Clothing Drive now under way. All theatres are publicizing the campaign by the use at each show through January 31 of the United National Clothing Drive trailer, and eighteen local and suburban theatres will hold special clothing matinees.

Van Johnson has been announced as the first screen star scheduled to appear in Washington for the events which will be dedicated to the memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt on January 29 and 30.

George Page, manager of the Colony, will be married January 26 to Frances Scudiere.

Warnerites who attended Variety Club Tent No. 11's induction of officers luncheon on January 14, were George Crouch, who will be on the board of governors for 1946 and is chairman of the special committee and a member of the welfare and finance committee; Frank La Falce, who is also on the board of governors for 1946 and is chairman of the publicity committee, and a member of the ways and means committee; Harry Lohmeyer, Alan Bachrach and Frank Sobotka. Warnerites who will play an important role in Variety Club's affairs in 1946, in addition to those mentioned above, are John J. Payette, on the executive committee and A. J. Brylawski, on the speakers and distinguished guests committee, and the executive committee.

Dorothy Kolinsky, Warner publicity dept., will resign February 2 to begin her new duties as secretary to Variety Club Tent No. 11.

TORONTO

The Cinema Theatre in Toronto's North End has reduced its admission prices in what is believed to be the first to adopt a lower scale since the war. Matinee admission price is now only 18 cents, while the early evening ticket costs 25 cents, the later price being 30 cents, amusement tax included in all cases. Manager W. J. McMillan made the announcement for the Cinema, which is a part of 20th Century Theatres.

Regarded as the leading union in the Dominion, Toronto Local 173 of the Moving Picture Operators Union, held its annual election of officers at which almost a new board was chosen. Art Milligan, long at the Imperial Theatre, was again the selection for the presidency while others included: vice-president, Art Kerrins, Uptown; financial secretary, George Jones, Tivoli; recording secretary, Pat Travers, Broadway; business agent, William P. Covert; executives, Jack Hill, Capitol; Carl Wells, Uptown; Ed Shields, Bellevue and Lou Lodge, relief operator.

Warren, one-time president of the MPTA of Ontario. At the invitation of Jenkinson, Arch H. Jolley of the Ontario Association, spoke before the Lions Club of Aurora, the gathering comprising 53 members and guests. Morley McPhee, manager of the Strand Theatre, New Market, was one of the guests.

ST. LOUIS

Henry Holloway's Gem Theatre had its scheduled grand reopening January 16 ruined, when members of the St. Louis Theatrical Brotherhood, Local No. 6, an affiliate of the IATSE began picketing the house because Holloway had refused to employe a union stage hand at a special rate of $55 per week. When Local No. 6 threw a line of four pickets in front of the house, the two union projectionists, Elmer Bruno and J. Anthony, refused to pass through the line and the house could not commence operations.

Fred Wehrenberg, head of the Wehrenberg Circuit of eleven neighborhood and suburban houses, said that many of the smaller theatres of the city and county would be forced to close if Local No. 6 insists upon the employment of a stage hand. Each closing of a union house would automatically throw out of employment two members of Local No. 143, since all but three of the theatres in the St. Louis area use two projectionists per shift. Other motion picture theatre owners also stated the smaller houses would be forced out of business by the campaign outlined by Elmer Moran, business agent for Local No. 6.

Three members of the St. Louis Theatrical Brotherhood, Local No. 6, IATSE affiliate, have died within the past ten days, bringing to seven the total of members of the organization who have departed this life during the past three months.

The performance at Fanchon & Marco's Fox was interrupted for two hours on January 16, as the result of a fire at the Union Electric Company of Missouri. Some 1300 persons were viewing the show and all but 300 remained until the house resumed operations. About 300 patrons had their admission price refunded because of the interruption.

An arbitrator will soon be named to hear the complaint filed with the St. Louis tribunal of the American Arbitration Association by H. E. Webster, owner of the Princess, Percy, Ill., and the New Webster, Steeleville, Ill., that since April, 1945, Loew's, Paramount, RKO Radio and Warners have refused to license their pictures to the two theatres on a reasonable clearance basis. He has asked that the AAA set availability dates for the two houses and to fix a maximum clearance period for the opposition houses after the territorial release date of pictures.

Walter and John Mullan, two veterans, are constructing a new neighborhood theatre in Mattoon, Ill. They are personally doing part of the construction work and are hopeful the house will be ready for opening early in February.

Ed Terhune is RKO Radio's new publicity man for this territory.

ITOA Meet Personals

Paramount copped the choice spot back of the speakers' dais with a banner reading: "May you always have 'Blue Skies' . . . and plenty in the 'Kitty'."

RKO Division Manager Harry Schreiber of Cleveland and newly-appointed Loew's Great Lakes Division Manager Mike Cullen, were among convention visitors.

Quote from Sidney Samuelson: "I'm getting blankety-blank tired of film salesmen dangling film contracts in one hand and in the other, pledge cards for the greater glorification of someone in New York and to the detriment of the exhibitor's business."

Bill Gehring and Maurice Wolf got into a discussion at the first business session about how cold it was in their train which parked in the yards outside Union Station for 40 minutes in the early a. m. of their arrival. Bill said it was 14 below. Maurice said it was more like 40 below. Editor's note: It wasn't that cold, honest. The weatherman said it only got down to 1 above at 7:30 a. m.

Incidentally, Mr. Wolf, active member of Boston Rotary Club, strongly urged delegates to become luncheon club members in their home towns and take an active part in the club's programs. He was seconded by President Martin G. Smith.

LONDON OBSERVATIONS

By JOCK MacGREGOR

Four factors have influenced the British film scene in 1945 and combined to present a powerful challenge to Hollywood: (1) J. Arthur Rank. (2) All other British producers. (3) Critics. (4) Politicians.

As Pharaoh's Lighthouse dominates "Caesar and Cleopatra," so does J. Arthur Rank dominate the British cinema. Expansion of the Rank interests during 1946 traveled swiftly in all directions. Prevented by the Board of Trade from possessing more British theatres, he is building overseas. Equipment, radio, television and other entertainment enterprises have come under his control, while he tightens his grip on the distribution field. Today, there can be few if any British cinemas which do not deal with his organizations in some way—even if only for flour with which to make cafe cakes.

Rank's Master Plan

Rank's master plan is slowly becoming apparent. It would appear to be to make all the films required by his circuits, and secondly to sell them throughout the world. This would give him a bargaining weapon: "Take my product in the United States, or I won't take yours elsewhere!" His deals with Selznick, International and now Pathe, would strengthen this hand.

It is at Denham with its massive stages that Rank's troubles begin. Here have been made such Rank screen sermons as "Canterbury Tale," "I Know Where I'm Going," "They Knew Mr. Knight," and "Tawny Pipet." In fact, other than "Blithe Spirit," few films made there are standing on their own feet at the box-office.

Far from happy have been the results with the Rank prestige pictures. "Henry V" cost a lot, pleased the highbrows, bored the ordinary cinemagoer. "Caesar and Cleopatra" cost nearly a million dollars over schedule.

It is the money he has tied up in production that makes Rank fight so hard for the U. S. market. Systematically he is sounding the world's independent producers and making tempting offers. This is good business.

Independent British producers who release through other outlets have been highly successful. Herbert Wilcox has cleaned up with "I Lived in Grosvenor Sq.," which 20th-Fox will issue as "A Yank in London" in the U. S., and no less successful has been the Korda-MGM "Perfect Strangers" ("Vacation from Marriage"). The Anglo-American company has done nicely with a line-up of unpretentious offerings headed by 'Murder in Reverse" and "Waltz Time" which 20th-Fox will also release in the U. S.

In his productions, the successful films in the Rank line-up have been those made by the associated companies and in particular Maurice Ostrer's Gainsborough outfit. Ostrer tried to crash the U. S. market years ago, and lost. Now he concentrates on the home market and is making hits which because of their quality will get American releases. Much of the Gainsborough success is due to clever team-building over a period of years. They have groomed stock players like Margaret Lockwood, Phyllis Calvert, Patricia Roc, James Mason, Stewart Granger and Lilli Palmer into box-office personalities. Now they are developing Michael Rennie and Jean Kent.

It is the same on the technical side. They have lost Alfred Hitchcock and Victor Saville to Hollywood, but they have developed in their own studio, Leslie Arliss, Val Guest and Frank Launder and Sidney Gilliat who have formed Individual Pictures to give Rank one of his best films, "Rake's Progress."

If the producers can be accused of being out of touch with public sentiment, so can certain English critics. The old established critics continue to give sound service, but they joined in the mighty attack which swept "Objective Burma" from British screens.

The incident could not have occurred at a worse time. Politicians viewed the case, then viewed Hollywood as a whole and the money that was going there annually. The threats of restricted imports, added taxation and other controls have now died down, but inevitably will flare up again when the Government clears the present state of bills and the Quota Act comes up for revision. There is little doubt that the new one will be stiff.

Hollywood's prime task in 1946 is to regain the prestige she has lost in Britain. This is a harder task than may appear. She has to overcome J. Arthur Rank, the British producers, the critics—both the newspaper man and the discerning picturegoer, and the politicians.

Fabian and Milk Company Push March Of Dimes Collections

Fabian's Staten Island Theatres, the St. George, Paramount, Ritz, Palace, Capitol, Liberty and Stadium, have tied up with a large milk distributing company on the March of Dimes campaign for lobby display. The displays consist of 100 milk bottles in each theatre, with every bottle bearing the name of a different child. The copy reads, 'Give in the name of your child—1946 March of Dimes." All Fabian managers nave tied up with merchants to carry the theatre collection containers for the March of Dimes.

Manager Frank Rosana holds the record with 107 spots; Manager Bregoff, Palace, 36; Trachtenberg, Liberty, 31; Kemp, Paramount, 86; Suchman, Ritz, 54; Hamborsky, Capitol, 31 and Miss Fink, Stadium, 30.

Coast 'Victory Queen' Title Won By Hermosa Beach Brunette

Miss Gina Hunter, 22-year-old brunette secretary of Hermosa Beach, California, has been named "Miss Victory Queen" of the Pacific Coast States, according to Charles P. Skouras, western regional chairman for the industry in the recent Victory Loan Campaign.

Miss Hunter, who represented Southern California in the Victory Queen contest, receives as her prize a one-year contract at 20th Century-Fox studios in addition to the title she won in screen test competition with six other State Queens.

Hunter to Trinidad for Paramount

H. Donald Hunter, recently released from the Navy, has been appointed Paramount Trinidad branch manager and left by plane this week for his new post.

Fala at Hyde Park (Interesting)

MGM-(S-757) Pete Smith 11 mins.

Fala, the late president's Scotty, is starred in "Fala at Hyde Park" in which the famous little dog reminisces in the voice of Pete Smith about the good times he and FDR had on the huge Franklin Delano Roosevelt estate. The Technicolor short, made from a 16-mm. original, offers a dog's eye view of the pastoral settings and fields and woods overlooking the Hudson, the Library which the late president presented to the government and the hilltop cottage which he designed and built for himself. The short also contains fleeting scenes of the late President Roosevelt himself, said to be the only shots ever made of the war-time president in Technicolor. Directed by Gunther V. Fritsch from an original story by Margaret L. Suckley.

Strange Destiny (Good)

MGM (M-781) Miniature 10 mins.

Louis Jean Heydt plays Asa K. Jennings, a humble YMCA worker, in the strange story of a man who lived for 27 years after medical science had condemned him to death and who saved more than 350,000 lives when he helped evacuate the besieged city of Smyrna in 1922. Well directed by Paul Burnford.

Flicker Flashbacks No. 2 (Funny)

RKO (64,202) 7 mins.

Scenes from the tragic opus of the early 1900s "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" open the newest Flashback, giving audiences another opportunity to evaluate the early motion picture technique and at the same time nearly laugh themselves to death. Owen Moore, early silent star is seen in "His Duty" or "The Policeman's Dilemma," and he and his brother thespians emote to a fare-thee-well. The subject is lots of fun and high in audience appeal.

T.V.A. (Interesting)

RKO (63,102) This Is America 18 mins.

This issue will swell the hearts of everyone who sees it, for the Tennessee Valley Authority project is an endeavor of which every American may well be proud. Since the first settlers climbed across the Great Smokies into this valley, the menacing floods have gradually carried away the productive top soil, essence of fertility. Then came TVA. To most minds those letters mean just electric power, but as the film points out, they mean much more than that. With power secured, fertilizers were made which returned productiveness to the valley and the soil. In addition to this, the camera shows, by the use of ditches and levels, how rains were held in the earth. The now good earth resulted in the establishment of many new industries, such as packing houses, cattle raising and dairies. The labor was accomplished by the local townspeople and each industry was built by local capital. Poignant photography and stirring musical background add immeasurably to the reel, which is not only instructive and interesting, but shows the seemingly impossible that man can do, working together with man, to make a brighter, happier life for his family and the generations to come.

Melody Stampede (Good)

Univ. (1306) Name Band Musical 15 mins.

Spade Cooley and his peculiarly arranged, but pleasing orchestra are their usual good self in this new short in which Cooley and his gang perform musically and vocally and are the accompaniment for The Corral Cuties, Carolina Cotton, Jimmie Dodd, Carole and Jodie Gray, and the Pickard Family, each delivering a western or hill-billy number. Cooley's music is pleasing, well-delivered and the short is better than average with the exception of the closing number, which tends to slow the fast pace.

Our Old Car (Nostalgic)

MGM Passing Parade 10 mins.

A whole cycle of American progress passes before the Passing Parade camera beginning in 1901 when father picked up mother at her home in his first horseless buggy and popped the question. The development of the automobile as we know it today continues by stages as the progress of the family in the story marches side by side with the car's mechanical, safety and appearance improvement. A 1905 Holsman, capable of 12 miles an hour; a Stanley Steamer of 1910 vintage, which burned acetylene gas in the headlights and oil in the taillight and Lord-knows-what in the motor; the Ford model T of the 1920s, and eventually the modern car are depicted with delightful nostalgia. The short is a nice addition to any type of program.

BOX-OFFICE SLANTS

Based on an original story by Owen Franes. Produced by William Pine and William Thomas.

Plot: To prove their innocence of a murder charge, two nice young people elude the police and play a dramatic game of cat-and-mouse with a dangerous gang of criminals until, in a blaze of gunfire, justice is meted out.

Comment: This film reaffirms the fact that good, entertaining pictures can be made on a reasonable production budget. For here is a well-directed film that carries a high degree of natural suspense, with a cast who though they have no name-draw turn in satisfactory performances. Story is logically developed with a smooth-running continuity that holds the interest and William Thomas' direction makes the most of the incidents, so that they seem natural, convincing enough to ring true. Robert Lowery, in the lead role, handles his part well and Barbara Britton is very beautiful and very capable as the girl who helps him clear his name. In the supporting cast, good performances are essayed by Elizabeth Risdon, Lola Lane, Edmund MacDonald and Frank Albertson.

Six-Gun Man

PRC Western 59 Mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Fast moving and with plenty of action this should please the western fans.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Suitable for any double feature program, particularly for week-end bills.

Cast: Bob Steele, Syd Saylor, Jimmie Martin, Jean Carlin, Stanford Jolley, Brooke Temile, Bud Osborne, Budd Buster, Stanley Blystone, Roy Brent, Steve Clark, Dorothy Whitmore. Credits: Original screenplay by Harry Fraser. Produced by Arthur Alexander. Directed by Harry Fraser.

Plot: Bob Steele, U. S. Marshall, and his deputy Syd Saylor arrive incognito in a cattle town to investigate the complaints that cattle has been stampeded and stolen. They outwit and arrest the rustlers and restore order to the community.

Comment: Endowed with a standard western plot providing for plenty of hard riding and shooting, plus two rollicking fist fights, thrown in for good measure, this has the necessary elements to please the dyed-in-the-wool western fans. The dialogue is believable and the heroics more than satisfying. The love story between Jimmie Martin, son of a murdered cattle rancher and Jean Carlin is well enough done, but seems very obviously a mere added element to satisfy audiences who demand a touch of romance with their action. The love interlude does not interfere with the action, however. Bob Steele is good as the hard-riding, hard-fighting marshal, and Sid Saylor's antics add a touch of light comedy. The film as a whole is good, standard western fare and should please audiences who like action. Good for any double bill situation.

Hollywood Pictures in the Making

20th-Fox Lot Busiest With Nine Features in Work; Many New Films Readying; Returning Veterans Prominent in Current Studio Activity

COLUMBIA—Three films are rolling at this studio. They are "The Story of Al Jolson," which has been shooting over ten weeks; "The Walls Came Tumbling Down"; and "Boston Blackie's Private Ghost."

"A Close Call for Boston Blackie" and a Charles Starrett Western, "Frontier Gun Law," are set for late January release; while "Blondie's Lucky Day," "The Gentleman Misbehaves," "Notorious Lone Wolf" and "Roaring Rangers" are scheduled for February.

Returning veterans are contributing heavily to Columbia's efforts. After he gets out of an Army hospital in Atlanta, 21-year-old Michael Towne will begin work at the studio. Wounded in France, he is being operated on for shrapnel in his knee. Robert DeHaven, who flew for the Army in the South Pacific, recently was signed to an acting contract. Ross Hunter, Coulter Irwin and Loren Tindall are vets who have been out for some time, and have made pictures; Irwin was in the Canadian Army. Columbia actors who were under contract before going into service and who have resumed acting careers include Glenn Ford, William Holden, Willard Parker, Robert Stanton, Robert Stevens, Forrest Tucker, and Michael Duane. Still serving, but expected back soon are Jerome Courtland, Melvyn Douglas and Fred Graff. John Sturges is a newly inked director, just out of the Army; he will be handling Hollywood productions for the first time.

'The Yearling' Daddy (8 Months Before Cameras) of 4 Pictures Rolling At Culver City Plant

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER—In production now are "The Yearling," "Fiesta," a Technicolor feature with Esther Williams and John Carroll; "But Not Goodbye," with Frank Morgan and Keenan Wynn; and "Faithful in My Fashion." "The Yearling" has been in production for over eight months.

George Oppenheimer, formerly in the Army Air Forces, returned to the studio to start a new writing assignment for Producer Arthur Hornblow, Jr.

MONOGRAM—In production at this studio are "Code of the Drifter," Johnny Mack Brown special, and "The Shadow's Shadow." Brown's crew has been on location near Newhalls for this latest Western. Just completed is "Live Wires," a Bowery Boys picture; national release will probably come around February 26.

Huntz Hall and Bobby Jordan, two of the Bowery Boys, finished a personal appearance tour last week that carried them through the East and Midwest, as well as the South. Phil Regan was another player on tour. Freddie Stewart, lead in the "Teen-Age" series, produced by Sam Katzman, was singing at the Nevada-Biltmore in Las Vegas. Belita, star of "Suspense," is studying advanced ballet and skating in London, her childhood home.

PARAMOUNT—This company has three pictures working. They are "California," "The Searching Wind," and "The Perfect Marriage." At the end of January, Paulette Goddard's starrer, "Too Good To Be True," with Sonny Tufts, rolls, followed by "O.S.S.", an Alan Ladd feature. Scheduled soon is the next Bob Hope picture, "Where There's Life," with Signe Hasso.

Latest story acquisitions include "The Royal Family of Hollywood," a comedy-drama utilizing a Hollywood background, and "Dream Puss," a satire on the current crop of psychological melodramas.

The studio set a number of its stars on eight coast-to-coast radio shows last week, including Ray Milland, Veronica Lake, Roberta Jonay, Alan Ladd and Don DeFore.

Henry Fonda Faces Mikes and Cameras Again; John Wayne and Claudette Colbert Star Team

RKO RADIO—Four pictures are going strong at RKO at this writing, including "Till the End of Time," "Notorious," "Sister Kenny" and "Crack-Up."

Henry Fonda will make his first feature since getting out of the service when he does "Christabel Caine" with Joan Fontaine, starting this week. Also ready to roll are "Double Trouble," with Jack Haley and Anne Jeffreys; "Without Reservations," starring Claudette Colbert, John Wayne and Don DeFore, a LeRoy-Lasky production; and "A Likely Story," with Barbara Hale and Bill Williams.

Richard Wallace, veteran director, was signed to do the forthcoming Technicolor special, "Sinbad The Sailor," featuring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maureen O'Hara and Walter Slezak.

International Pictures begins "The Dark Mirror," starring Olivia De Havilland and Lew Ayres in early February. The film will be made at the Samuel Goldwyn Studios, after which the company will move to Universal City in a new housing setup.

John Klorer is writing the final script for Sonja Henie's next Technicolor spectacle, "The Countess of Monte Cristo," planned for an April start. S. P. Eagle produces and Orson Welles directs "The Stranger," starring Edward G. Robinson, Loretta Young and Welles. An orchestra of 85 will record the music for the production early next month.

UNITED ARTISTS—"The Strange Woman" and "Me and Mr. Satan" are the two pictures being produced for this company. "The Strange Woman," starring Hedy LaMarr, is a Hunt Stromberg production. "Me and Mr. Satan," a Charles R. Rogers production, stars Paul Muni, Anne Baxter and Claude Rains.

Andrew Stone signed Eugene List, G. I.

HOST TO STONEMANS. Harold Stoneman of the New England Interstate Theatres, and Mrs. Stoneman, were recent visitors at Republic's north Hollywood studios. The group above includes Allan Wilson, studio vice-president and Mr. and Mrs. Stoneman.

McKinney Joins Disney As Art Counselor

Roland J. McKinney, for six years art director of the Los Angeles County Museum, has been engaged by the Walt Disney Studio as art counselor. McKinney will headquarter in New York, where he will contact established artists in the interests of Disney and will search for outstanding young talent for the same purpose.

Disney, who plans to step up his features to two or three a year, has "Alice in Wonderland," "Peter Pan," "The Lady and the Tramp," "The Little People," "Midnight and Jeremiah," "The Emperor and the Nightingale" and several others in the development stage.

Romantic Duo in New 'Blackie'

"Boston Blackie's Private Ghost," latest in Columbia's mystery series, has Jim Bannon and Dusty Anderson in the romantic leads. Chester Morris has the title role and Jeff Donnell the feminine lead. D. Ross Lederman directs with John Stone producing under the supervision of Bennie F. Zeidman.

Barsha to Produce Musical

"Sing While You Dance," the Columbia musical to be produced by Leon Barsha under the supervision of Bennie F. Zeidman, will have Lynn Merrick and Robert Stanton in the leading roles. This will be Barsha's initial production since his discharge from the Marine Corps.

Paramount Signs Van Cleave

Paramount has signed Van Cleave, radio conductor and arranger, as a composer and arranger to work under Louis Lipstone, studio music department head.

'Josephine' Durbin's Next

"Josephine," a story idea suggested by Ferenc Molnar's play, "Jotundra," is being prepared by Universal studios and Producer Felix Jackson as Deanna Durbin's next picture. Jackson is personally writing the screenplay.

3 Films on Phil Ryan's 1946 Production Schedule

A 1946 production schedule, to follow release of Columbia's Pat O'Brien starrer, "Perilous Holiday," was announced by Phil Ryan, independent producer.

"Vicious Circle," adapted from the Hugh Churchill novel, will be the first production to go before the cameras, with "Crime Out Loud," a psychological mystery based on the unpublished play by Pablo Andrade, following. The third film will be "Early to Wed," a comedy in color, in which the screenplay will be based on the French short story of the same title by Pierre Croyons. Releasing arrangements are now being negotiated by Ryan with a major distributor.

PRC Sound Stages Relighted in Studio's New Construction Plans

PRC's relighting of seven sound stages has been virtually completed as the initial step in the company's plans for new construction and improved production facilities.

Arranged in series so that any area in any individual stage can be independently lighted, the lights will, according to engineers, improve safety and working conditions during filming.

Columbia Signs Spewacks

Bella and Sam Spewack, famed stage and screen writing team, have been signed by Columbia to write and produce an as yet untitled original. The Spewacks have to their credit such stage hits as "Boy Meets Girl" and "Leave It to Me" (with Cole Porter), and such screenplay collaborations as "Boy Meets Girl," "My Favorite Wife" and the current "Weekend at the Waldorf." The Columbia assignment will be their first as point writer-producers.

Goddard-MacMurray Co-Starred

Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray will be co-starred by Paramount in "Suddenly It's Spring," romantic comedy which will be put into production in February. Mitchell Leisen directs and Claude Binyon will produce. Binyon will write the screenplay from an original story by P. J. Wolfson.

Allen Renews With Paramount

Lewis Allen has been signed by Paramount to a new seven-year contract as a director. He first was signed in 1941, after a distinguished career in New York and London as director and production executive for Gilbert Miller. His current assignment is the Hal Wallis production, "The Perfect Marriage."

Warners Set 'Rich Man'

"A Very Rich Man," original story purchased by Jack L. Warner, Warners' executive producer, has been set as a starring vehicle for Sydney Greenstreet, Dane Clark and Martha Vickers. Fred DeCordova has been assigned to direct with Charles Hoffman producing.

Mitchell Set for 'Dark Mirror'

International has borrowed Thomas Mitchell from 20th-Fox for a leading role in the forthcoming Nunnally Johnson production, "The Dark Mirror," in which Olivia de Havilland and Lew Ayres have top roles. Robert Siodmak will direct the film which goes before the cameras early in March.

Gleason, Horton in Musical

James Gleason and Edward Everett Horton have been signed by Columbia for comedy roles in the Technicolor musical fantasy "Down to Earth," which stars Rita Hayworth with Don Hartman producing.

▶Betty Grable has signed a straight, no-option contract for another three years with 20th Century-Fox.

▶James Stewart has been signed by Robert Riskin Productions to star in "The Magic City," first feature from this new independent unit for RKO. This will be Stewart's second screen role following his return to civilian life and will start immediately after "It's a Wonderful Life," Frank Capra's initial production for Liberty Films, which Stewart begins in February. Riskin, who is writing the screenplay, will announce feminine star and director shortly.

PLEASANT VISIT. Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt are shown in the above photo when they visited with Robert Alda at the Warner Bros. studio in Burbank. The visit took place between scenes for "The Beast with Five Fingers," in which Alda plays a starring role.

▶Producer-director Alfred Santell's next production for Republic will be "That Brennan Girl," in top-budget class. Original story by Adele Rogers St. John a modern drama laid in San Francisco, will require the most extensive location shooting in the history of the studio.

▶Phil Silvers gets the comedy lead in 20th Century-Fox's "The Old Army Game," which Bryan Foy will produce. Others already signed for top roles are Lloyd Nolan, Faye Marlowe and Michael Dunne.

▶Mischa Auer was signed by Producer Warren Wilson for top feature role in the Universal Joan Davis-Jack Oakie starrer "Love Takes a Holiday," which is now under way with Charles Lamont directing.

▶Bebe Daniels' first streamlined color comedy for Hal Roach will be "The Fabulous Joe," which is being written by Jack Jevne, Arnold Belgard and Marshall Kester.

▶Craig Stevens reports to Director Jean Negulesco for his role of Monte in Warners' Joan Crawford-John Garfield starrer "Humoresque."

▶Greer Garson was signed to the starring role in MGM's "Chimes of Bruges," which Sidney Franklin will produce. Writers George Froschel, Erich Moll and Osso Van Eyss are working on the screenplay.

▶Top character actor George Tobias has been borrowed by RKO from Warners for a top role in "Sinbad the Sailor," Technicolor special starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maureen O'Hara and Walter Slezak. Tobias will portray first mate and close friend of Sinbad. Stephen Ames is producing.

▶Option on the Sons of the Pioneers has been exercised by Republic for the next 14 months, in which time they are to make eight films. First one under the new contract will be the Roy Rogers special, "My Pal Trigger."

▶Clifton Webb has been assigned the starring role in "The Band Wagon," Technicolor picture which George Jessel will produce for 20th-Fox.

▶Stanley Rubin was signed by Universal as a writer-associate producer and will be assigned to the Marshall Grant unit. He will develop and produce "Three Kids and a Queen."

▶Eleanor Parker has been given the feminine lead opposite Dane Clark in "Deep Valley," novel by Dan Totheroh which Henry Blanke will produce for Warners. Vehicle will be the third in which Miss Parker and Clark worked together.

▶June Storey has returned to Hollywood to resume her screen career with one of the important supporting roles in "The Strange Woman," Stromberg-Chertok production which stars Hedy Lamarr, George Sanders and Louis Hayward.

pianist star of the Potsdam Conference, to be featured in his forthcoming production, "The Bachelor's Daughters," an original drama with music.

"The Young Widow," Hunt Stromberg production, featuring Jane Russell, Louis Hayward and Penny Singleton, is scheduled for release in key cities about the first of March.

"Bel Ami," Loew-Lewin production, gets going in April. It stars George Sanders, and the story is from DeMaupassant, being set in the 1880's in Paris.

"A Scandal in Paris," an Arnold Pressburger picture, is in the editing stage and music is being scored for the film, which features George Sanders, Signe Hasso and Carole Landis.

Louis Schor, formerly with the Nat Goldstone Agency, has been signed by Sol Lesser to supervise the literary end and act as assistant in charge of writers and story properties.

Nine Features with Many 'Names' Before the Cameras at 20th-Fox; Set Roles for Flicka Sequel

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX—By far the busiest studio in Hollywood, 20th-Fox has nine features shooting at this writing. Most advanced is the Technicolor picture, "Three Little Girls in Blue," which begins its tenth week.

Betty Grable's latest, "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim," starts its ninth week. George Seaton directs this feature, also in Technicolor, and Dick Haymes adds his singing to the plot. Equally advanced in shooting is "Anna and the King of Siam."

"Somewhere in the Night," featuring John Hodiak, Nancy Guild and Lloyd Nolan, is being produced by Anderson Lawler. "The Dark Corner," produced by Fred Kohlmar and directed by Henry Hathaway, has a cast of favorites like Lucille Ball, William Bendix, Clifton Webb and Eddie Heywood.

More recently started are "Cluny Brown," with Charles Boyer and Jennifer Jones; "Strange Triangle," featuring Signe Hasso; and "It Shouldn't Happen to a Dog," with Carole Landis and Allyn Joslyn. The new Sol M. Wurtzel Productions unit has "Rendezvous 24" before the cameras.

The studio plans to make a sequel to the "Flicka" pictures called "The Green Grass of Wyoming." Leading roles have been assigned to Roddy McDowall, Preston Foster and Rita Johnson.

PRC—An exploitation feature and a Western are in production at PRC. "Devil Bat's Daughter," a sequel to "The Devil Bat," the company's original "horror" success, is rolling under the production guidance of Frank Wisbar, who is also directing. An untitled Buster Crabbe starrer is being made by Producer Sig Neufield and directed by Sam Newfeld. Al "Fuzzy" St. John handles the comedy element in this latest PRC release.

Excellent publicity breaks are accruing to "Queen of Burlesque," Alexander-Stern special, with a search for a feminine lead to play the role of a strip-tease artist who goes dramatic.

Eddie Dean, star of the studio's outdoor color pictures, has been signed for a series of personal appearances, with a January 28 date in Salt Lake City the first stop for the singing cowboy.

PRC will release Imperial Films product, it was announced last week. The new organization, headed by Pat de Cicco, is an all-servicemen group. First film scheduled for shooting is "Avalanche," featuring Bruce Cabot, with Irving Allen directing.

HAL ROACH—This veteran producer of comedy fare marks his re-entry into the field on March 4. First of the twelve features Roach has scheduled for 1946 release will be "The Fabulous Joe," based on an original by Hal Roach, Jr., with Bebe Daniels producing. Roach's executive staff is set, and producers Fred Guiol and Robert McGowan have been signed. Approximately $750,000 is being spent in adapting the Roach Studio, used during the War by the Army to make training films, to the technical requirements of the new all-color program and the installation of new, modern equipment.

Republic to Gild Budget for Novel Titled 'The Golden Tide'

REPUBLIC—The film nearest completion on this lot is "Lonely Hearts Club," featuring Jane Withers, James Lyndon, Grant Withers and Raymond Walburn. Starting its third week before the cameras is "Rainbow Over Texas," latest Roy Rogers starrer, with "Trigger," Dale Evans, George "Gabby" Hayes and the Sons of the Pioneers. Just started is another Western, "El Paso Kid," featuring Sunset Carson and Marie Harmon. The most recent serial of the Republic program, "Daughter of Don Q," went into production this month.

"The Golden Tide" has been set for extra budget. Recently purchased, it is a novel of California in the gold rush days of 1849 written by Vingie E. Roe.

Wide Range of Topics Covered In Ambitious Batch of Forty Stories on Warner Agenda

WARNER BROS.—In production at this studio are "Escape Me Never," "The Beast With Five Fingers," "Two Guys from Milwaukee," "Humoresque" and "The Sentence."

Zachary Scott has been given one of the male leads in "Cheyenne," next big Humphrey Bogart starrer. Also scheduled for early production is "A Kiss in the Dark," an original musical comedy inspired by the famous Victor Herbert classic. Charles Hoffman will produce. In all, forty stories are now in preparation for shooting, including "Life With Father," "Voice of the Turtle," "Ethan Frome," "The Fountainhead," "Mister Broadway," "Stallion Road," "Captain Horatio Hornblower," "The Story of Will Rogers" and "My Wild Irish Rose."

UNIVERSAL—This studio is currently the second most active on the production front, with four features and a serial in work. Features include "Design for Death," "Shahrazad," "Strange Conquest" and "Love Takes a Holiday," and the serial is titled "Lost City of the Jungle."

Scheduled for release in January and February are "Girl on the Spot," with Jess Barker and Lois Collier; "Because of Him," starring Deanna Durbin, Charles Laughton and Franchot Tone; "Ideal Girl," with Jess Barker and Julie Bishop; Abbott and Costello in "Little Giant"; "Tangier," starring Maria Montez, and "Gun Town," a Fuzzy Knight western.

Sayre to Write Original Story

George Sayre will write an original screenplay, "Sorority Girl," which will be produced by Alexander-Stern for PRC.

New Addition to 'Caine'

Phil Brown has been added to "Cristabel Caine," RKO film which stars Henry Fonda and Joan Fontaine.

GONE: BOOTS & SADDLES. "Wild Bill" Elliott doffs his boots and saddles for a fling at romance—and doesn't he look romantic, girls?—in Republic's forthcoming big-budget production, "In Old Sacramento," being produced by Joseph Kane. Here he is shown with leading lady Constance Moore.

'Black Gold' to be Initial Monogram Color Production

"Black Gold," a race track story, will be the first Monogram production to be filmed in color, it was announced by President Steve Broidy.

To secure a complete record of the running of the Kentucky Derby for use in the picture, Producer Jeffrey Bernerd will take a camera crew to Churchill Downs to photograph the race as well as background scenes at the track. Caryl Coleman will write the original story.

Talent Search Postpones Film

Starting date for the Alexander-Stern production of "Queen of Burlesque" at PRC, has been postponed to enable the producers to continue their search, in which the public is cooperating, for a suitable feminine lead.

Irwin in 'Night Editor'

Coulter Irwin has been assigned the second male lead in Columbia's "Night Editor," in which William Gargan stars, with Janis Carter and Jeff Donnell in the feminine leads. Robert Stevens will play a featured role. Henry Levin directs.

Fitzgerald-Ladd in Spy Film

Paramount's "O.S.S.," story of the Office of Strategic Services soon to go into production under direction of Irving Pichel, will star Geraldine Fitzgerald and Alan Ladd.

Catherine Craig in Wallis Film

Catherine Craig has joined the cast of the Loretta Young-David Niven co-starrer, "The Perfect Marriage," which Hal Wallis will produce for Paramount with Lewis Allen directing.

Taplinger Leaves Columbia

Robert S. Taplinger has received his release from his producer contract at Columbia and left the studio last week after completing an original treatment on "Come One, Come All."

'Glass Heart' Next Powell Film

RKO's "The Glass Heart" will be Dick Powell's third starring film of the hard-boiled type. James Cain, the novelist, has been signed to adapt the Marty Holland novel to the screen.

ADVANCE DOPE

THE DARK CORNER (20th-Fox) Mystery. Principals: Lucille Ball, William Bendix, Mark Stevens. Director, Henry Hathaway. Plot: When a New York detective and his secretary discover one night that they are being followed by a strange man, they uncover a murder plot which goes back many years to the time the detective was framed by his partner and sent to prison for three years. In order to do away with his wife's sweetheart, the partner is trying to frame the detective again and pin the murder on him. He almost succeeds, but the police trap him and he is killed by his wife when she discovers his crime.

SO DARK THE NIGHT (Col.) Mystery. Principals: Micheline Cheirel, Steven Geray, Paul Marion. Director, Joseph E. Lewis. Plot: A famous French detective, sent to a small village for a rest, falls in love with a young girl, who breaks her engagement to a local farm lad. Shortly after, both the girl and her former sweetheart are found murdered and the detective goes to work on the case. Back in the police laboratory in Paris, he puts all the clues together and realizes he himself is the killer—a psychiatrist confirms that he is sane by day, but an insane murderer at night. ANNA AND THE KING OF SIAM (20th-Fox) Drama. Principals: Irene Dunne, Rex Harrison, Linda Darnell, Gale Sondergaard. Director, John Cromwell. Plot: On a night in 1862, an English woman arrives in Bangkok to teach the children of King Mongkut of Siam. Her struggles against barbarian customs, woman's inequality and the indomitable will of King Mongkut, cover a period of many years. In the end she is rewarded when, on the death of the King, his son assumes the throne and asks her to help him abolish the old customs and civilize his people.

ARMY BRAT (MGM) Comedy-Drama. Principals: "Butch" Jenkins, Frances Gifford, James Craig. Director, Fred Zinneman. Plot: The small son of an Army captain is the pride of the entire company at the Army Post where he lives. His faithful confidante is the Chinese servant who takes the youngster under his wing when the mother dies, and the father is hard hit by the loss, to the extent of continually drinking and neglecting his son. It is the Chinese who induces the father to see the error of his ways and discard the bottle. Then the captain learns that his "servant" is in reality a General of the Chinese army and they are to serve together in China until the expected war with Japan should materialize.

GAY BLADES (Rep.) Drama. Principals: Allan Lane, Jean Rogers, Edward Ashley. Director, George Blair. Plot: Because he is in love with her, an ice-hockey hero lets a pretty young Hollywood talent scout maneuver him into signing a movie contract. He is exasperated with the many tests and lessons necessary for stardom, and she is annoyed by his rowdy ice-hockey friends. The break comes when he is the cause of an injury to one of his teammates during a game, but it makes the girl see that she is interested in him as a man, not just so much screen-star material, and they make plans for a future together.

STRANGE TRIANGLE (20th-Fox) Mystery-Drama. Principals: Signe Hasso, Preston Foster, John Shepperd. Director, Ray McCarey. Plot: The chief witness in a murder trial is a young Army veteran who tells of accepting a job as supervisor in charge of a number of banks; of the beautiful wife of one of the bank managers, and how she lured him into covering up her husband's cash shortages. When the time came that he could no longer conceal the thefts, the woman killed her husband and attempted a getaway, taking the money and forcing the supervisor to go with her. An accident wrecked her plans and she is tried for the murder of her husband.

THE CAT CREEPS (Univ.) Mystery. Principals: Noah Beery, Jr., Lois Collier, Fred Brady. Director, Erle C. Kenton. Plot: A star reporter is assigned to investigate a tip to his editor that a 15-year old suicide case was in reality a murder. Accused of committing the crime is the father of his fiancee. The crime involves a huge sum of money. The trail leads to a lonely island, marked by more killings, where a pet cat helps turn up the murderer and clear the reporter's future father-inlaw.

I'VE ALWAYS LOVED YOU (Rep.) Drama-with-Music. Principals: Philip Dorn, Catherine McLeod, Felix Bressart. Director, Frank Borzage. Plot: The talented daughter of a famed musician is given a piano audition for a world-renowned composer-conductor. He takes her as his pupil on a tour of Europe and South America, and remains oblivious of the fact that she has fallen desperately in love with him, while he flaunts his many love-affairs before her. When she makes her musical debut and excels him, he angrily orders her away forever; she returns to her home and marries her childhood sweetheart. Twenty years later she again meets the composer and is relieved to discover her complete mastery over him—musically and emotionally.

WALLS CAME TUMBLING DOWN (Col.) Mystery. Principals: Lee Bowman, Marguerite Chapman, Ludwig Donath, Lee Patrick. Director, Lothar Mendes. Plot: A priest and his sister are murdered because they own a Bible which contains code messages giving the location of a fabulously valuable painting. A columnist, whom the dead priest had befriended, starts a private investigation, contacts the daughter of the man who first owned the painting, retrieves the treasure and wins the girl.

CLUNY BROWN (20th-Fox) Comedy-Drama. Principals: Charles Boyer, Jennifer Jones, Sir Aubrey Smith, Helen Walker. Director, Ernst Lubitsch. Plot: A Czech refugee and an English parlor maid meet at the home of her titled employers, and become firm friends. He promotes her romance with the town's young druggist, a very proper, smug young man. The engagement is called off when the girl embarrasses his mother's guest by repairing the plumbing. When the Czech decides to go to America, she realizes it is he she loves, and she sails with him.

NOTORIOUS GENTLEMAN (Univ.) Mystery. Principals: Kent Taylor, Virginia Grey, Jane Adams, Milburn Stone. Director, Charles Barton. Plot: An ace attorney gains acquittal for a young playboy on trial for manslaughter, and then celebrates by giving an expensive bracelet to his actress fiancee. She drops him, however, to romance with the playboy because she wants the lead in a new stage production backed by his uncle. The attorney, furious, kills the uncle and then plans to kill his rival, but is trapped by the district attorney.

HOME ON THE RANGE (Rep.) Color. Principals: Monte Hale, Adrian Booth, Bob Nolan and Sons of the Pioneers. Director, Robert Springsteen. Plot: There is bad feeling against the owner of western land because he refuses to allow hunting on his property. His only supporters are his young son and an employe of the Forestry Service. When the man is attacked by a bear and killed, the boy and his friend believe the tragedy was a result of a plot by the crooks who hope to acquire the land. They run down the clues, expose the villain and give the land to the State for a Memorial Park.

CHARLIE CHAN AT ALCATRAZ (Mono.) Mystery. Principals: Sidney Toler, Benson Fong, Mantan Moreland, Teala Loring. Director, Phil Karlson. Plot: Charlie Chan is asked to conduct a reinvestigation into the case of a man sentenced to death for murder of a bank guard. The man had been convicted on the strength of fingerprints left on the vault doors, and Chan formulates the theory that they were forgeries. He uncovers a gang of forgers with a prison guard as their leader, and frees the innocent man.

THE GREEN YEARS (MGM) Drama. Principals: Tom Drake, Charles Coburn, Selena Royle, Hume Cronyn. Director, Victor Saville. Plot: This is the story of the childhood of an Irish Catholic orphan, sent to Scotland to make his home with his Presbyterian grandmother and her ill-assorted household. Only the great-grandfather is human enough to make the sensitive child feel welcome, and the two strike up a warm and fast friendship which continues through the years of struggle, unhappiness and deprivation. The old man dies when the lad is 18, and leaves his small bit of insurance tc the boy who uses it to realize his desire tc study medicine.

THE LAST CROOKED MILE (Rep.) Mystery. Principals: Donald Barry, Ann Savage, Adele Mara, Tom Powers. Director, Philip Ford. Plot: Two bandits are fleeing from a bank which they have robbed of $300,000, when their car topples over a cliff and they are killed, but the money is not found. Later on, their car is exhibited as a sideshow attraction and two men are very anxious to buy it. A private detective suspects the money is hidden in the car and when he meets the former sweetheart of one of the crooks, he works on the case until he uncovers the evidence that she is the guilty person, working with the bank manager.

GILDA (Col.) Drama. Principals. Rita Hayworth, Glenn Ford, George Macready, Joseph Calleia. Director, Charles Vidor. Plot: This is a story of international intrigue, conducted in a South American gambling casino, and of the sadistic owner of the house who commits murder when he sees that the enemy is closing in on him. Frightened, he fakes a suicide and his beautiful young wife remarries, this time to her husband's best friend. The first husband reappears, very much alive but insane, and tries to kill the young couple. He loses his life in the attempt, and the two return to the States.

THREE LITTLE GIRLS IN BLUE (20th-Fox) Technicolor. Principals: June Haver, Vivian Blaine, George Montgomery. Plot: Three sisters, beautiful but poor, fall heir to a small sum of money and rashly plan to blow it all on a hunting expedition for millionaires. Posing as a wealthy woman, her secretary and maid, they descend on Atlantic City and immediately begin looking for wealthy prospects. In the end, they turn up with husbands—not all rich—but the girls decide that it's love they've interested in, not money.

CURRENT OBSERVATIONS

HAIL COLUMBIA! There isn't the least doubt in the world that anniversaries or birthdays are far more interesting to the celebrants than to anybody else. But, from the purely personal standpoint it seems to us that the anniversary of a film company is something of decidedly general appeal and interest. We've noticed this before—what with celebrations of film company anniversaries last year in such profusion. But we notice it very emphatically right now because Columbia Pictures is marking a twenty-fifth anniversary with fitting enthusiasm and gusto.

This, surely, is a picturesque company, this Columbia Pictures, with its two rugged pilots—the Cohn brothers. This company has what it takes in its history of progress from a shoestring beginning through a career of brilliant achievement in artistic successes on the screen and aggressive as well as progressive policy in distribution.

Columbia is without a peer as a mover of boundary posts in the field of artistic treatment of the popular entertainment form on the screen. Columbia, as you all well know, started entertainment "cycles" at a rate that is unchallenged—with "It Happened One Night"; with "One Night of Love," "Lost Horizon," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," "A Song to Remember" and others, including in the short subject field the first "Mickey Mouse" and first "Silly Symphony" cartoons.

With Harry Cohn holding forth at the studio, with Jack Cohn at the helm in the home office, and a roster of as able an aggregation of executives as you'll find in any company, the history Columbia will write in the present and near future is certain to be as lusty, exciting and eventful as that which stands on the record of Columbia's colorful past.

ADD SHOWMANSHIP. Observations on this page in last week's issue hardly had time to get off the press when some very significant matters became public via news releases. The first, of course, was Bill Rodgers' declaration to salesmen and exploiteers of his company during a convention gathering in New York. The second was a bit of information from New York University authorities regarding the interest in the course being offered at that seat of learning in theatre management, exploitation and advertising.

Now Bill Rodgers, as everybody who has had any acquaintance with him well knows, is not given to popping off or making statements that are to be taken with several grains of salt. Bill has been as frank—in his very magnetic, polite way—as anybody we have known around this industry. So when the same Mr. Rodgers flatly states that those exhibitors who do not give his product the kind of advertising and showmanship support it deserves, why those exhibitors may not be sold the MGM product, you can bet that such things could happen (and will, if some old customers start getting lazy and fall down on the job of merchandising the films when they play the old customers' theatres).

Then, as to that information about the long distances from which men are willing to travel to attend the NYU course in theatre management, that bit of news adds to the vigor of the writing on the wall, which says very plainly that theatremen who are in business will stay in business only if they put on some real showmanship.

There is no doubt that the lush years of war boom business has dulled the keen edge of many a showman's exploitation weapon. However, there is no reason why this business should stand still out of affection for "old acquaintance." Cruel as it may seem, there will be some familiar faces missing from the showmanship ranks unless the old timers meet the challenge and start right now to sell their shows to a fare-thee-well in order to hold the customers won during war years.

That conclusion is inescapable. Because: 1. Film companies are going to demand and get aggressive point-of-sale advertising to tie up with their big pre-release campaigns for the bigger pictures; 2. a lot of enterprising young men are very partial to the theatre field and they are in there taking courses and going about the business of becoming showmen.

SOURCE MATERIAL. As a reminder to showmen—vets as well as newcomers—we'll say again that no matter how long they've been in the business or how much stuff they have on the ball, there's a sure way to keep "fresh." That is to keep informed about what the other fellows are doing and consult the sources of material for new applications of tested ideas and for a "refresher" on the all-important job of public relations, personal management, showmanship that wins and holds patrons for the theatre. We provide such source material every week in our "Selling the Picture" and "Theatre Management" departments.

Studio Heads Tell AFL Council Union Pact is 'Armed Truce'

Yates in Hollywood Calls for Studio Closedown Until End Of the Jurisdictional Battle

The Hollywood studio labor situation in existence since calling off the prolonged strike which started last March, has been an armed truce rather than a peace, and a potential powder keg that could explode into another strike, it was implied by Eric A. Johnston in his remarks to news reporters in Miami Wednesday, following his appearance before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. The head of the Motion Picture Association of America, told newsmen that while no general break between unions and the studios was imminent, a shut down of studios might follow work stoppage unless some final peace arrangement can be worked out between the warring unions.

Studios Avoid Taking Sides

Johnston appeared with several producer representatives before the AFL council. Those who joined him assured the Council that the studios have been particular in efforts to avoid taking sides in jurisdictional disputes and that the producers are anxious to have the Federation clarify and resolve the jurisdictional issues. Among the Hollywood leaders who appeared were: Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount; E. J. Mannix of MGM; Benjamin Kahane, Columbia; Maurice Benjamin, attorney for the MPAA and Joyce O'Hara, Johnston's assistant. The executives expressed themselves as desirous of having the AFL lay down lines of demarcation between jobs so that the unions will stay on the job.

William Green stated that the difficulties arose from differing interpretations by the carpenters', painters' and stagehands' unions over the award by the council's committee which ended last year's strike. Richard F. Walsh of the stagehands' union told the council that the union was willing to abide by the committee's report. The painters, through L. P. Lindelof, assured the council that they will abide by the award so far as their own work is concerned, but that they will back up the carpenters in case of a fight among the unions representing the building trades. William L. Hutcheson of the carpenters disapproved part of the committee's award as well as the procedure in arriving at its decision. The committee then proceeded to make a fresh appraisal of its report in light of the registered complaints.

Asks Closedowns to Force Peace

Complete stoppage of production until rank-and-file union workers who want to work would force their leaders to arrive at an equitable solution to the present studio jurisdictional disputes was urged this week by Herbert J. Yates, Republic president, who declared that producers, caught in the middle, were unable to aid in solving the difficulties. Republic's efficiency during the 1945 strike was cut 35 per cent at a cost of from $750,000 to $1,000,000, Yates said.

U. S. Tax Collections Set All-Time High During 1945

A new all-time high in Federal admission tax revenue collections was established in 1945 by the Internal Revenue Department, with taxes collected being almost 25 per cent more than the previous high year, 1944. Taxes collected in 1945 totaled $375,306,023 against the prior high of $300,515,911.

Taxes collected in December failed to equal those collected in 1944, with $29,862,687 collected last year against $31,182,977 in 1944. New York tax collections were higher by $26,890 in 1945 than in 1944, with the amount collected being $4,638,078 against $4,611,188.

Silverman Buys Stern Interests In Essaness Theatre Circuit

Purchase of the interests of Emil Stern in the Essaness Circuit, Chicago, by Eddie Silverman, president of the corporation, was reported this week. Stern will remain as general manager.

Silverman also concluded a deal for a 20-year lease on the Oriental, a 3217-seater in the Loop, from its new owners, the Northwest Engineering Corp., which recently bought the house for $2,800,000. Annual rental is reported to be $150,000. Jack Hunt will remain as manager, while H. C. Costello, managing director for the last five years will retire.

Reagan Conducts 3-Day Divisional Sales Meeting in Chicago

Paramount concluded a three-day central division regional sales meeting at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, last weekend, attended by home office executives and district, branch and sales managers, together with newly appointed office managers from Cleveland, Dallas, Chicago, Oklahoma City, Memphis, Detroit, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Cincinnati. Meetings were conducted by Charles M. Reagan, vice-president in charge of sales, who stressed sales importance and outlined forthcoming product.

Harrisburg Committee Proposes Curfew on Juvenile Attendance

A proposal to recommend a curfew on attendance of children at evening movies is reported under consideration in Harrisburg, Pa., by the joint State Government's Commission sub-committee on child welfare laws.

Another recommendation under consideration for presentation to the State Legislature is a law which would prohibit youths under 16 from attending theatres during school hours. The present age limit is 14.

Boston Testimonial Honoring Broidy

A testimonial dinner honoring Steve Broidy, president of Monogram, will be held February 5 at the Bradford Hotel, Boston. Top state, city and industry executives are listed among the guests and speakers. Maurice N. Wolf, MGM district manager, will be master of ceremonies.

Legislation, Public Concern Exhibitors

That the effectiveness of independent exhibitor groups in handling legislative matters affecting their interests, and ways and means of strengthening public relations are prime considerations became apparent this week when it was learned that these two topics, also prominent in the program of the proposed Theatre Activities Committee which meets in St. Louis April 1, will be the highlights of the annual meeting of the Allied States board of directors annual meeting at the Warwick Hotel in New York, February 11-13.

Other matters on Allied's agenda are the election of officers, the annual report of officers and directors, a report by Col. H. A. Cole on alleged checking abuses and proposed remedies, a report on Allied's Caravan committee, a discussion on film rentals, business conditions, 16-mm. threats, and a resolution by the Ohio ITO concerning affiliated theatre expansion during the pendency of the New York anti-trust suit.

William L. Ainsworth, Allied treasurer, will attend a Pacific Coast Conference meeting in San Francisco which will be held concurrently with the New York meeting. A meeting of the Conference of Independent Exhibitors Associations, including Allied and the PCCITO, will be held in the spring. Distribution companies will be presented with the recommendations and the report of Col. Cole on checking, provided the board approves it.

Booking Combine Planned by 5 Northwest Independent Circuits

Five leading independent theatre circuits with headquarters in Minneapolis are formulating plans for a booking combine. The circuits, which operate 45 theatres in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin, will have Ted Bolnick, general manager of the Berger Circuit as head of the combine and Lowell Kaplan, Welworth booker, handling the booking and office management.

Circuits involved besides the Berger Amusement Co. and Welworth Theatres, Inc., are Frank and Woempner, the Ben Friedman Circuit and Volk Brothers. Ben Berger indicated that more members will be added.

McCarthy to MPAA as Price Aide

Colonel Frank McCarthy, former secretary of the General Staff of the U. S. Army and military secretary to General George C. Marshall, has been appointed assistant to Byron Price, vice-president of the Motion Picture Association of America in charge of the Hollywood office.

Release Dates Set on 3 WB Films

Release date on Warners' "Three Strangers" and "Burma Victory" has been set for February 16, and "Cinderella Jones" is set to go out March 9.

Two Divisions Added To Loew's Theatres

The creation of two new divisions and several managerial changes, including the promotion of two assistants, have been made by Joseph R. Vogel, in charge of all Loew Theatres.

William Phillips, manager of Loew's State, Newark, will head a division including Newark, Jersey City, North Bergen, Loew's State Criterion, Sheridan, Commodore and Avenue B in New York. Jack Harris, manager of the Victoria, Harlem, will supervise the Victoria, 116th Street, Burland, Bedford, Brevoort and Boston Road theatres. Bernie Feinberg, Paradise assistant, has been appointed manager of the Boston Road and Louis Kramer, assistant at the Pitkin, will manage the Avenue B, succeeding Stanley Marks, resigned.

Managerial transfers include Edward Burke from the American to the State, Newark; Wilfred Simon, Palace, Brooklyn, will be a relief manager; Ken Grattan goes from the 46th Street to the Palace; Murray Sharf moves from the Alpine to the 46th Street; William Nitchke goes from the Triboro, Astoria, to the Plaza, Corona, replacing Allan Isaacs, resigned. Sam Pearlman moves from the Kameo, Brooklyn, to the Triboro, Astoria; John Cusack from the 86th Street to the Kameo; Ed Crawford from the Olympia to the 86th Street; Joseph Citron from the Apollo to the Olympia; Francis Doherty from the Canal to the Apollo; George Daniels from the Grand to the Burland, replacing George Ruggles, resigned; Larry Samuels, out of service, goes to the Victoria; Harry Weiss, from a relief managerial assignment, goes to the Warwick and Harvey Everett from the Warwick to relief assignments.

Pennsylvania Allied Protests On Percentage Film Checkers

Meeting in Philadelphia this week for the eighth annual convention of Allied of Eastern Pennsylvania, 55 exhibitors representing 200 theatres issued a strong protest against the alleged elimination of contract clauses which provide that no local checkers be used on percentage pictures. The exhibitors asked that these clauses be re-instated and authorized a resolution to all home offices condemning their withdrawal. The convention opposed the auditing of books after a three- to four-month time limit and asked that all information be kept confidential except where legal action is filed.

The Theatre Activities Committee was the object of a resolution attacking the use of screens for propaganda, and newsreels were notified to that effect. All theatre collections under Allied sponsorship were banned, leaving the matter to the individual house. It was urged that foreign pictures be licensed on separate contracts and that distributors cease withholding approval of contracts for a long period of time. Theatre expansion by circuits during the pendency of the Government anti-trust suit was also attacked. New members were elected to the board and some old members were re-elected.

Virginia MPTO Meets in Richmond

The first meeting in four years of the MPTO of Virginia got under way in Richmond, Thursday at the John Marshall Hotel. Principal speakers were R. B. Wilby, Atlanta; Leon Bamberger, RKO; Ted Gamble and William Crockett. Representatives from all Washington exchanges are in attendance and Virginia's Governor, William Tuck, as well as members of the legislature, were guests at a dinner party the first evening of the convention.

'Forever' Set for Winter Garden

International's "Tomorrow Is Forever" starring Claudette Colbert, Orson Welles and George Brent will open at the Winter Garden, New York, February 20.

Korda Acquires British Lion Film Corp.

Described as one of the biggest industry deals in England's film history, purchase of British Lion Film Corp., Ltd. by Sir Alexander Korda through London Film Productions was announced this week. Coincident with news of the purchase it was revealed that Paul Nathanson, Canadian film man, and H. Burford-Judge, board chairman, will retire. Prior to World War II, during which activities were concentrated on distribution, British Lion was one of England's leading independent producers. The company recently announced plans to re-enter production, with two films scheduled to go before the cameras.

Publicity Boys Hunt for New Adjectives as Attendance Records Topple Previous Highs

While many trade observers warn that there is reason to expect a leveling-off of theatre attendance at the big first run theatres, the actual performance at theatres where the big pictures are playing far from matches any such gloomy promise. In fact, the continued breaking of records has the publicity boys of the theatres and the distributor home-offices performing all kinds of stunts to give a new twist to the now repetitious story of "new marks." For example, this week Paula Gould, new publicity chief at New York's Capital, rushed out a yarn on Tuesday informing that "The Harvey Girls" had, on the day before, set a new all-time high for Monday attendance at the theatre.

So many high marks have been set by pictures at the show-case houses, that it is small wonder there must be a new twist put on stories about approaches to the record marks, if not a new high set. Actually, however, there is no need for press agentry to smoke up a "prosperity story" about the picture grosses at the big houses. Not when the actual performance of "The Bells of St. Mary's," for example, starts its ninth week at the Radio City Music Hall. The RKO picture is the sixth to attain the eminence of a nine-week run at the big showhouse, hitting a pace which has equaled or bettered a $125,000 gross in every week of its engagement.

Records Set in Other Cities

But records were also being chalked up in other cities. Besides its New York strength, "Harvey Girls" was demonstrating exceptionally strong drawing power at the Capitol, Cincinnati; the United Artists, Chicago; the Capitol, Washington, and the Egyptian and Ritz, Los Angeles. "Leave Her to Heaven," playing the Roxy, New York, entered its sixth week Wednesday, still going strong. It set an all-time record in Los Angeles for the State, Chinese and Fox Uptown where it opened simultaneously. The same type record in money and attendance was set at the Warfield, San Francisco, and in Seattle and Spokane, where it played the Fifth Avenue and the State, respectively. The Fox, Philadelphia, played to 15,000 admissions in one day alone, and other all-time records were established at the Harris, Pittsburgh; Denver, Esquire and Webber, Denver; State Lake, Chicago, and Fox, Detroit.

Paramount's "The Lost Weekend" is also cracking records in key spots over the nation. In New York, the film is in its ninth week at the Rivoli and reports from Hartford, Middletown, Ohio, New Haven, Salt Lake City, Scranton, Toledo, and Wilkes-Barre indicate broken records. Even films which are not generally considered to have top drawing power are breaking records in first runs. "Colonel Effingham's Raid," for instance, in its world premiere at the Paramount, Atlanta, came close to setting a house record and the British-made "The Seventh Veil," at the Winter Garden, New York, is staying for a sixth week because of excellent business, instead of its scheduled four. The general axiom seems to be that a top-notch picture will still draw as well as it did in the lush war years and no noticeable slump in attendance for good product, properly exploited, can be discerned.

Dimes Drive Extended

Leading New York film circuits will continue their March of Dimes collections for four extra days through February 3, it was announced by Nicholas M. Schenck, national chairman, this week. In all out-of-town operations where films are being held for a second week, Loew's Theatres will also collect during the additional four days. The Western Union strike has resulted in only fragmentary reports being received, but these are encouraging, according to 'Dimes' officials. Nearly all New York theatres are running 10 to 20 per cent ahead of last year.

Universal's $3,910,928 Profit Largest in Company's History

Universal in 1945 had the largest net profit in its history and today is in the strongest financial position of its existence, the annual report of the company to stockholders disclosed this week. Profits for the fiscal year ended November 3, 1945 totaled $3,910,928, compared with $3,412,701 in 1944. Net profit equalled $4.86 a share on 804,219 shares of stock outstanding, against a profit of $5.15 a share on 662,592 shares the preceding year.

Rentals and sale of pictures totaled $51,149,428 against $51,561,504 in 1944. Foreign revenues reached an all-time high of $22,341,928, an increase of $3,166,945 over 1944. Working capital is at a new high of $23,030,555 over $18,798,687 the preceding year. Current and working assets are $28,212,871 and current liabilities are $5,182,316.

Equipment Show June 19-21

The Motion Picture Equipment Trade Show at the Chelsea Hotel, Atlantic City, June 19-21, will feature exhibits of between 75 and 80 theatre equipment manufacturers and dealers, it has been reported by the board of directors of New Jersey Allied, sponsors of the show. Over 20,000 square feet of space will be made available for the exhibits.

20th's Grassgreen in N. Y. Post

M. N. Grassgreen, formerly 20th-Fox Boston branch manager and a veteran of 28 years service with the company, is in New York to take over an executive post in the home office sales department, it has been announced by Tom Connors, vice-president in charge of distribution. Grassgreen will be succeeded in Boston by James M. Connolly.

'Bells' High in Academy Nominations

The Motion Picture Academy award nominations announced from Hollywood last week listed "The Bells of St. Mary's," RKO Radio release, in most of the top major classifications voted on by 9000 members of the industry. Nominated for the best picture of the year were "Anchors Aweigh," "The Bells of St. Mary's," "The Lost Weekend," "Mildred Pierce" and "Spellbound." For the best performance by an actor the nominations were for Bing Crosby in "The Bells of St. Mary's," Gene Kelly in "Anchors Aweigh," Ray Milland in "The Lost Weekend," Gregory Peck in "The Keys of the Kingdom" and Cornel Wilde in "A Song to Remember."

Named for the best performance by an actress were Ingrid Bergman in "The Bells of St. Mary's," Joan Crawford in "Mildred Pierce," Greer Garson in "The Valley of Decision," Jennifer Jones in "Love Letters" and Gene Tierney in "Leave Her to Heaven." Ballots for the final voting on the nominations will be mailed on February 7. Winners will be announced March 7.

'Brotherhood' Trailer

David O. Selznick has completed a three-minute film entitled "The American Creed," which will be available gratis to theatres throughout the nation as part of a national program of religious tolerance. Starring in the film are James Stewart, Van Johnson, Shirley Temple, Eddie Cantor, Katharine Hepburn, Jennifer Jones, Walter Pidgeon and Ingrid Bergman. Film companies and manufacturers have donated more than three million feet of film for the manufacture of 10,000 prints, and laboratories have donated their services in processing 50 negatives.

Robert Chambers, Michael Linden Join New York Staff of MPAA

Lt. Commander Robert W. Chambers and Michael Linden this week joined the staff of the New York office of the Motion Picture Association. Chambers will engage in statistical research and fact-finding on the industry and Linden will be the Association's librarian and reference consultant.

Robert Chambers

Chambers, after securing a master's degree from Harvard, did the advertising for a circuit of five theatres in and around Indianapolis before securing his doctorate through a thesis on theatre management, which led to his appointment to the faculty of the Harvard School of Business. More recently he was assistant professor of Marketing at Northwestern University. Linden, who holds a B.S. from Columbia's School of Library Service, was reference librarian in the Brooklyn Public Library's social service division before entering the Army.

Maurice Ostrer Arriving Here

Maurice Ostrer, production chief of Gainsborough Pictures, Ltd., one of the three major J. Arthur Rank Group production companies, is scheduled to arrive in New York on February 2. Ostrer, who will remain in New York for three days before leaving for a month's Hollywood visit to study the American film market, is the second of Rank's major executive chiefs to visit the U. S. recently.

UA Releasing 'Sun' Next Summer

A summer release by United Artists is planned for David O. Selznick's $5 million Technicolor film, "Duel in the Sun." Selznick has personally assumed the task of trimming the footage to the desired length.

Richey Back from Rites for Mother

Henderson M. Richey, MGM exhibitor relations head, has returned to New York from Auburn, Ind., where he attended the funeral of his mother, Mrs. Luella A. Moore Richey, 89, who died suddenly last Monday.

WAC Leaders Receive Plaques at Luncheon

Thirteen industry leaders received plaques attesting to their voluntary service as executives of the industry's War Activities Committee at a final luncheon and meeting of the WAC headquarters staff held Wednesday at the Astor Hotel.

Among those honored were George J. Schaefer, chairman; Francis S. Harmon, executive vice-chairman; Herman Gluckman, treasurer; S. H. Fabian, chairman theatres division; Jack Alicoate, chairman trade press division; Walton C. Ament, chairman newsreel division; Maurice Bergman, chairman public relations division; Arthur M. Loew, chairman foreign managers division; William D. Kelley, chairman print division; Gradwell L. Sears, chairman distributors division; Raymond Wemple and Henry Ferber, accountants. Bergman, Loew, Gluckman and Fabian, who are on vacations or business trips, received their plaques "in absentia."

Plaques were also awarded to Hollywood volunteer WAC executives, including John C. Flinn and Tom Baily, coordinators; John Cromwell, chairman Hollywood division, and Mary McCall, past chairman. Previous plaque recipients are Ned E. Depinet, William F. Rodgers and William A. Scully, distributor division heads; Oscar A. Doob, public relations; Joseph A. McConville, foreign managers, and Martin Quigley, trade press division.

NYU Theatres Management Course Stirs Interest Across Nation

Inquiries from all over the United States and Canada have given added enthusiasm to the New York University course in motion picture theatre management which is currently enrolling students for its second semester starting February 7. The only college in the country to give such training, NYU has been swamped with requests for information on the course, with queries coming from servicemen in the Pacific and European Theatres of Operation and from as far away as a theatre manager in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Students at the first semester represented personnel employed by Warners, Loew's, Trans-Lux, Brandt, Skouras, Raybond, Max Cohen and other circuit and independent theatre owners One student, currently building a theatre in Baltimore, commuted weekly to attend classes. The course is under the direction of Professor Warren Bower, assistant director of the Division of General Education.

Monogram's International Board Elects Edward Morey Director

Edward Morey was elected a director of Monogram International Corp. at a board of directors' meeting of the company last week, it has been announced by Norton V. Ritchey, president.

Directors, besides Morey, are Steve Broidy, chairman of the board; W. Ray Johnston, George D. Burrows, David D. Horne, William Jaffe, J. P. Friedhoff and Norton Ritchey.

Postwar Deflation

Excitement reigned recently on the parking lot of the Vogue Theatre, Indianapolis, when 15 car-owners who attended a performance found their tires flat. The wails of the motorists brought Carl Niesse, operator of the house, who found equipment to transfer air from spares to flats. Some of the motorists, however, had to replace the flats at nearby filling stations. The tire deflations were termed juvenile delinqueny in a mild form.

Rodgers Warns That Lack of Showmanship May Deprive Theatremen of MGM Product

Showmanship capitalized in every letter is a must order for every exhibitor in the nation if he expects to retain the lush war year grosses on motion pictures, William F. Rodgers, MGM vice-president and general sales manager warned this week at the final of four meetings with the company's sales representatives in New York. Pointing to the future, Rodgers indicated that promotion by every theatre owner and manager, little or big, was going to be obligatory for survival in the competitive years to come.

Keynoting this warning with a grim promise, Rodgers told the MGM salesmen and exploiteers that the company was on the march and was not to be stopped by lackadaisical selling on the part of any customer.

"Any pre-conceived idea that a customer of ours has a franchise for life on our product is untrue," the executive told the 52 salesmen and exploiteers from the south and west. "If a customer, with all things being equal, is not alive to his responsibility—the proper merchandising of our product—we are not satisfied to let it go at that. He must make the most of the opportunities we give him and if he fails we may take our product away from him. We have no idea of changing our accounts wholesale. That isn't what we're thinking. But we cannot stand still in the face of progress. With the best product we must forge ahead. Our product must eventually find its way into the best theatres. We are entitled to have our product shown in the best theatres and we will get it."

Severest Competitive Test

"Ahead of us," Rodgers declared, "the postwar period may present the severest competitive test we have ever been called upon to meet. Your customer must know this and can help you cope with it and not only maintain, but we hope, increase theatre attendance. It, therefore, becomes an automatic responsibility to aid your customer in the preparation of his local merchandising approach. He must be helped and he, as well as we, expects you to point the way for him to fully capitalize on the potential market we have created. Showmanship only again will be the barometer between success and failure. To achieve our objectives requires our full support. Our continued goal will be satisfied customers in greater quantities than ever before—confidence and respect of these customers for our product, our policies and our representatives."

Rodgers pointed out the dangers in trying to allow product to sell itself or to depend on the moviegoer's habits to drag him into a theatre every week. "We must never again permit theatre audiences to be diverted to other forms of entertainment," he said. "Actually, this business isn't going to suffer any kind of recession. However, our future lies ahead in making better showmen of our customers and of our salesmen. No one is kidding me that our product isn't pre-sold. We have been told that our product is a Godsend. I have been informed of this by many important accounts who have stated it is fortunate MGM, with its fair sales policy, is handling its own output and not others. We are trying to build our organization all the time, and in time it will be known as the greatest enterprise in the world. We have a great respect for principles in this business of ours. Our future is ahead of us in how we conduct ourselves. We are spending millions pre-selling our merchandise and we want our merchants to know what we are doing. We want these people, our customers, to help us succeed, as in the past."

10,000 Contracts in 11 Days

The salesmen and exploiteers were praised for a great job in signing up more than 10,000 contracts by telephone in 11 days on the company's 11th group and securing representation in every open theatre screen during the company's 20-year Anniversary Drive. Speakers included Rudy Berger and George A. Hickey, southern and west coast sales managers, respectively. The salesmen and exploiteers were urged to increase their efforts and, as an incentive, it was pointed out that during the past 12 years one promotion every 11 weeks took place from the ranks of the company.

H. M. Richey, exhibitor relations head, told the delegates that no industry in the world has done more for the war in manpower than the motion picture industry. He pointed out that since the public was aware of these facts, the time to capitalize upon this aid was now.

Praise Offered for War Aid

"You have participated in various drives and as a result of their participation, exhibitors have made their theatres a community of interest which they have never enjoyed before. Now, with the end of the war, exhibitors should carry on with this community of interest and you can relay this message to them effectively," Richey said. "The industry as a whole is going to have considerable competition from other forms of pleasures and amusements against which we will have to compete for the public's time and dollar. The exhibitor will be faced with this problem and he cannot sit back. It is the duty of every salesman and exploiteer to cooperate with the theatre owner to keep on doing a showmanlike job."

At the conclusion of the meetings, which saw 165 men brought into New York, salesmen and exploiteers returned to their respective territories and Rodgers will leave this week-end for a month's trip to the coast to look over new product.

'Audience Penetration'

MGM has the greatest "audience penetration" of any film company, Silas F. Seadler, advertising manager, told a gathering of 52 salesmen and exploiteers at a sales conference this week in New York. "MGM spends a fortune to build up audience penetration, and the recent Gallup poll conducted to show how far advertising reaches and how each community knows about pictures proves this," he said. "The message we advertise reaches millions of people daily in small towns. Don't forget to let your customers—the exhibitors— know what we are doing and don't let them forget it."

Toddy Schedules Three Negro Features for February Release

Three features of the scheduled 10 to be produced this year by Toddy Pictures Co., producers and distributors of Negro features, have been completed and will be ready for February release, the company has announced. The completed features are "House-Rent Party," "Mantan Messes Up" and "Fight That Ghost." Others to come include "Shut My Big Mouth," "The Wrong Mr. Wright," "The Corpse Accuses," "Ill Wind," "A Night With the Devil," "Crime Street" and "Prairie Comes to Harlem."

'No Closed Towns'

Loew's does not have and does not believe in closed towns, Joseph R. Vogel, vice-president in charge of theatre operations for the circuit, told a meeting of salesmen and exploiteers in New York this week. "We have never told any exhibitor when we planned going into a town that we wanted a piece of his theatre," said Vogel. "Likewise, there is no town where we have all the product. In other words, the Loew policy has not been to believe in closed towns or tying up all the pictures in any town."

Shea Managers Hold Meeting in Cleveland

The annual meeting of the Shea Circuit managers was held Monday and Tuesday at the Carter Hotel, Cleveland, with all New England managers in attendance. Managers, distributors, supply dealers and others with whom the circuit does business, were the guests of E. C. Grainger, president, at the Hotel for dinner on the initial evening.

Attending from New York besides Grainger were W. E. Barry, George Goett, A. J. Kearney, Frank King, Carroll J. Lawler, Gerald Shea and M. A. Shea.

Theatre managers of the Shea Circuit in attendance included F. L. Bowers, Cambridge, Ohio; Vincent Choate, Bradford, Pennsylvania; Durward Duty, Dover, Ohio; E. J. Fahey, Manchester, N. H.; D. Gilhula, Jamestown, New York; William Gillam, New Philadelphia, Ohio; E. J. Hiehle, Zanesville, Ohio; J. W. Hynes, Youngstown, Ohio; F. Lahrmer, McKees Rocks, Pa.; Dale McCoy, Geneva, Ohio; J. V. Minton, Erie, Pa.; E. Prince, Conneaut, Ohio; R. W. Rhodes, Akron, Ohio; R. Russell, Ashtabula, Ohio; J. W. Scanlon, Marietta, Ohio; Fenton Scribner, Nashua, N. H.; R. E. Smith, Westfield, Mass.; Harold Snyder, Lancaster, Ohio; Dale Tysinger, Newark, Ohio; John Walsh, Pittsburgh, Pa. and John Woodward, Zanesville, Ohio.

MGM to Construct FM Radio Station Covering Los Angeles

MGM will begin immediate construction of a new FM radio station covering the Los Angeles area, with broadcasts scheduled to start about May 1. The station, which will bear the call letters of KMGM, will be equipped with a 262-foot antenna surrounding a natural 1500-foot elevation, which will afford a coverage over a radius of 5 miles in all directions. The company has also applied for a television license to be operated from this location.

Herbert L. Pettey, director of WHN, Loew's New York station, recently visited the coast to finalize plans. Loew's plans additional FM stations in Chicago and Washington.

'So Much for So Little'

The public gets more for its dollar from the motion picture than from any kind of merchandise, E. M. Saunders, MGM assistant general manager, told the company's final delegation of salesmen and exploiteers this week at meeting in New York. "There is no place the public can get so much for so small admission," he said. "Many pictures cost from two to four million dollars and the public has been able to see all of them for a mere pittance, comparatively speaking, with what other industries charge for similar investments."

THEATRE MANAGEMENT

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Picture Theatre Management

Ways, Means of Cultivating Good Will

By Jack Jackson

Continuing the discussion of Public Relations, the author of this outstanding series written exclusively for Showmen's Trade Review, in this article emphasizes the obstacles that are looming for the average theatreman. Here is expert advice on the right approach to a public relations job that will protect the theatre against threats from increased competition, the clamor for more and bigger taxes on admissions, censorship, etc.

The lush years which now are fading over the horizon have transformed many a militantly aggressive showman into a complacent theatre operator with dulled "show sense" faculties that will be so sorely needed to evade the traps and snares now being laid along Success Highway. The resharpening process is going to require a tremendous outlay of mental and physical energy of the kind that will fairly barbecue the obesity— off the waistline of some and from between the ears of others—that results from placidly peeking at bulging bank balances without thought or care of the turbulent tomorrows.

It is a well known fact—particularly to public office holders—that theatres have been making money through the war years. And, any business that is or has been making money will, in the very near future, find itself the Number One target for assault by tax barrages more ingeniously varied and of more concentrated intensity than those that preceded the most difficult beachhead landings in the recent World conflict.

Your best possible defense against this invasion is to build up your public relations. Do it quickly and do it thoroughly. The prize for an outstanding job in this vital department of theatre operation is a dandy umbrella that will provide protection from the many, many things that threaten in 1946. Among the storm clouds gathering—and already dripping in some localities are: increased state taxes, new or bigger municipal taxes, state and municipal censorship, television, itinerant exhibitions, commercial movies and the seven-league-booted 16-mm. film.

Simply defined; Public Relations means doing the right thing by the people of your community and then telling the world about it. But remember, it is no whitewash brush and you can't expect it to cover the mistakes of poor management or slovenly treatment of patrons.

Employes as Public Relations Emissaries

Good public relations begins with the people who work for the theatre; with their immediate families; their friends; then reaches out to the concerns and employes of concerns with which you do business. There are your direct approaches to community good will and opinion. If you can make your employes realize their opportunities, as public relations emissaries, to create better and more permanent jobs for themselves by extending their own prestige and that of the theatre, your grasp on the public affections of your community will be unbreakable. And, if you amplify the program to cover your business contacts; the various religious factions; the schools, clubs and other community, social and business segment, you will be showered with patronage and favors from those who want to perform some service in your behalf as evidence of their regard and affection.

Effective public relations effort works like stones tossed into a limpid pool, the ripples follow, one on another, until the entire surface of the water is activated and working offensively against whatever barriers restrain its expansion. With the strident "we need help" cry of the war plants silenced, and the whispering lisp of newborn post-war industry being strangled by strikes and labor unrest, who can foretell the extremes to which the unemployed may go to secure sustenance or the still greater extremes to which the legislators will reach in an effort to still the clamor for 60 million jobs.

Junior Patrons Find 'Fun Show' Engaging

Everybody wins, nobody loses—with pleasure, creating pastime and engaging entertainment for all. That in a sentence sums up the principal of the Fox Riverside Theatre's "Hi-Ho Fun Show" inaugurated by Manager Harry Creasey in giving junior moviegoers of Riverside, Calif., the type of program they can appreciate and from which they can benefit.

The 'Fun Show' is just what the words imply. A half-hour radio program initiates the attraction from the theatre's stage, with minors from the audience participating in novel and laugh-getting games and stunts. Contest winners have the choice of prizes on display in the lobby, and guest tickets go as consolation profferings to the losers. The games and stunts, however, carry on for another half-hour after the broadcast, thus giving the bulk of the audience a chance to partake in the activities, and at the same time supply more entertainment. The program then slides into the screen show, which consists of a scheduled feature, a serial and two cartoons.

Weekly, each junior patron is asked to fill out a card with name, address, etc., which is deposted in a special box in the lobby. Information thereon supplies a mailing list for the sponsor, with many youngsters receiving special gifts at the end of each 13 weeks. Other prizes are offered to children submitting the best suggestions each week for the coming week's stage games for broadcast.

The furniture concern which sponsors the Riverside's stage broadcast and weekly and quarterly awards as publicity for its toy department, is so pleased with Creasey's results that they have renewed the radio contract for another 17 weeks.

"The plan is proving very profitable for theatre, and healthful for youngsters in form of wholesome and delightful entertainment," Creasey claims.

Keep Courtyards Clear

A "stitch in time" that may save plenty of grief is a check on courtyards into which emergency exits discharge to see that they are kept free of obstructive materials, such as scenery, ladders, trucks, etc.

Violation of the Law

Storing materials on fire escapes is a violation of the law and exceedingly dangerous. Careless employes sometimes do this, but a regular check will eliminate the hazard.

Aisle Lights Work Loose

A regular inspection of aisle lighting will sometimes reveal loose wire connections or sharp points or edges. They sometimes work loose.

Neat Display Frames

Display frames are changed so often that the backgrounds and framings may require touching up with paint on frequent intervals. Charge the man who changes the frames with the responsibility for maintaining their neat, clean appearance, including keeping the plate glass covering thoroughly clean at all times.

Plan Events to Offset Lenten Slump

The season that often holds terror for the average showman is about to rear its annually dreaded head. Lent is due this year on March 6 and continues through April 28, but the theatre man who makes his plans to present plenty of extra activity during the Lenten season need not present the annual alibi that "business is terrible because of Lent."

For the average theatre, just exploiting film attractions alone is not sufficient to overcome the expected slump. The pre-Lenten season is the time for special "gags"—special stunts and activities that can be made attractive to prospective moviegoers.

One stunt that has been used successfully is a local Band Contest, details for which must be predicated upon local conditions. It might be necessary to present one band each night for a week, or one each Monday night during Lent. One thing is necessary, however, and that is to offer a prize large enough so that the bands entering the contest will be interested sufficiently to prepare a really entertaining show for the theatre patrons. Local merchants may be induced to tie in with the event through co-operative advertising, by offering special prizes of their own. Another angle of the band contest is to present teams of jitterbugs during the band's numbers. These and many, many other angles may be included in such a contest. Bands must be induced to sign an agreement to abide by the rules the theatre manager sets for the contest, to insure the theatre against repercussions from disgruntled leaders (each thinks he has the best band in town.)

Pretty Baby contests, Klever Kiddies Kontests, a fashion show, amateur nights, give-aways, radio contests, special deals for clubs, an amateur poster contest in connection with any attraction; amateur reviewer contest, ad writing contest, lobby crystal gazer, palm readers, refreshments served in the foyer at stated intervals; a dance contest on the stage; roller skating contest on stage (can be tied in with local skating rink); popularity contest in local high schools connected with athletic stars etc., are but a few of the many "gags" well known to experienced showmen. The main thing is that some kind of special activity should take place every day during the Lenten season.

St. Patrick's Day and other local celebrations will take place during Lent, each one suggesting tieups with the theatre.

A good floral display for the lobby may be maintained during the entire Lenten season if the theatre will go for a trailer telling the population the name of the shop supplying the display.

The season might well be turned from a "bust" into a "bonanza" the possibility of poor business lessened, if the theatre manager will use his experience and his grey matter in planning to offset the impending slump.

The Brass Tacks of Efficient Management: Ways and Means of Cultivating Good Will unlimited pensions, publicly maintained shrines for Halsey's horse, Nimitz's launch, MacArthur's pipe, Patton's jeep, etc., etc.

If the political facet of your public relations activities has been polished to peak brilliance it can be used effectively to deflect discriminative taxes and keep you from being the "goat" that carries more than a fair share of general taxation.

The threat of municipal taxes is quite another problem and will require an entirely different approach. The success of one community in making a tax of this kind stand up in higher courts is all the encouragement needed to bring a veritable flood of similar assessments. These will have to be voted locally and YOUR GANG (the men and women voters who patronize your theatres) can be persuaded, through the medium of your screen and through personal contact by yourself and your employes, to vote against any proposal that militates against your and THEIR theatre. IF YOU JUST MAKE YOUR CUSTOMERS FEEL FOR, AND SYMPATHIZE WITH, YOU ABOUT UNFAIR TAXES NO POLITICAL MACHINE ON EARTH CAN MAKE A "SUCKER" OUT OF YOU OR YOUR BUSINESS.

Good public relations is a versatile business implement that can be aimed like a rifle to kill off some temporary but specific threat such as store or medicine shows, corner lot carnivals, etc. or as a machine gun to create mass defense against the intrusion of itinerant 16-mm. operators, merchant-sponsored exhibitions, tent shows and other opposition. With equal facility it can become a powerful magnet that will attract an impressive army of loyal followers to resist the invasion of unneeded and unwanted adjuncts to the local amusement field. To create legal barriers to anything other than the nationally recognized dispensers of television, the coming commercial entertainment film, etc. To stop short the fly-by-night promoter who would mulct the local gentry of their hard-earned coin to finance some impossible effort in the dream-like fields of heralded scientific development in fireside entertainment. The coming of frequency modulation for radio, television, radar, etc. are as certain as the rising of tomorrow's sun but (if your public relations are kept in high gear and working efficiently) the sponsorship of such endeavor will be in the hands of reputable, financially responsible interests and local finance or participation will not be necessary. On the other hand there is no reason why you and your theatre—again, if your p.r. rating is tops—should not be the instrument through which the local market is served.

It may be that I am too visionary and overconfident, but in my crystal ball the coming situation looms something like this:

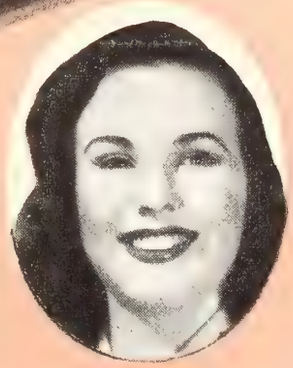
If visual education is to supplant the reliable three R's in our educational institutions I see no reason why the well-thought-of (yes, well-loved) theatreman of the community should not figure in the service scheme. After all, he has shown (or have you?) unselfish interest in the community. The very existence of his theatre is proof that his present and future are an integral part of community progress. He knows the oldsters and the youngsters and is better able to sit with the local educators and arrange for the servicing of such visual educational films as will best serve his customers. And, in addition, his facilities are the sole local outlet where exhibition for the masses can be perfectly presented and where the entire school can, if necessary, be accommodated.

If commercial entertainment film exhibition is necessary to acquaint local distributors with the manufacturing processes, marketability, quality, etc. of nationally known merchandise, I see no reason why theatre facilities should not be used in "off" hours for the exhibition and an appropriate charge made to cover expense, etc.

If 16-mm. film offers possibilities of supplementing the entertainment provided on the regular theatre program I can't see why the theatre should not have at hand the necessary supplemental facilities to project the worthwhile narrow-gauge films. Such activity would be viewed as an added entertainment factor and included as part of the theatre program.

Has Little to Fear

Summed up it seems to me that the theatre man of facile mind and a willingness to actually strive for top position as a community favorite has little to fear from the future. But, it's going to require THINKING, PLANNING and WORKING and you're going to need every member of your staff and all the concerns you can contact.



Start doing the kind of things that will make you and your business the enlivening dinner table talk that drowns out the noise of the hired man's soup supping—and try to be with them at breakfast, too—. Give prizes to the basket ball team, the bowlers, etc. Get the bridge and sewing clubs to meet at your theatre. Run a trailer advising your patrons to "Go to church Sunday." Give matinees for the blind, the Old Folks Home, the Boy Scouts, The Rainbow Girls. Encourage the dramatic class at the high school and put their plays on at your theatre in connection with some weak-sister picture—and don't forget to contribute something from the receipts to the costume or play fund.

Just keep throwing good will stones into the public relations pool and watch the ripples reach out to drown anything in the way of destructive or discriminative nature that threatens you or your busines-

Business was never so BEAUTIFUL!

UNIVERSAL PICTURES

BOX OFFICE SLANT

Terror by Night

Universal Mystery 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Another Sherlock Holmes mystery for the armchair detectives and followers of this type of fare.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Not one of the better in the series.

Cast: Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Alan Mowbray, Dennis Hoey, Renee Godfrey, Mary Forbes, Billy Bevan, Frederic Worlock, Leyland Hodgson, Geoffrey Steele, Boyd Davis, Janet Murdoch, Skelton Knaggs. Credits: Produced and directed by Roy William Neill. Screenplay by Frank Gruber. Original story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Photography, Maury Gertsman.

Plot: Sherlock Holmes, commissioned to see that a fabulous diamond arrives safely in Scotland, boards the train which carries the diamond. When its owner is killed and the stone disappears, the detective, with the help of Dr. Watson, goes to work in his inimitable fashion and apprehends the crooks.

Comment: The Sherlock Holmes series does not gain any stature with this latest offering, for it hasn't the action and suspense one expects to find in these murder-mysteries. Background is confined to the inside of a railroad car and this naturally hinders the action. But aside from that, although there are several murders, the story is too thin to hold the interest or build up suspense, and the solution a little too obvious. Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce give their customary smooth and natural performances in the roles of Holmes and Dr. Watson, and Dennis Hoey does okay as Inspector Lestrade of Scotland Yard. Alan Mowbray, Frederic Worlock and Renee Godfrey turn in worthy portrayals in supporting parts. Production and direction were handled by Roy William Neill.

Diary of a Chambermaid

United Artists Drama 86 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) Quite different from anything the average audience has seen to date: a sinister, moody story about the France of 1885. Provides entertainment for those who enjoy exceptional performances in a very strange drama.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: The names of Paulette Goddard and Burgess Meredith will bring them in. After that, the question will be what word-of-mouth may do to its box-office worth.

Cast: Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith, Hurd Hatfield, Francis Lederer, Judith Anderson, Florence Bates, Irene Ryan, Almira Sessions, Reginald Owen. Credits: Directed by Jean Renoir.. Adapted from the novel by Octave Mirabeau and the play by Andre Heuse, Andre DeLorde and Thielly Nores. Screenplay by Burgess Meredith. Produced by Benedict Bogeaus and Burgess Meredith. Photography, Lucien Andriot. A Jean Renoir Production.

Plot: A French waif takes a position as chambermaid in the home of an old and affluent family where she becomes the victim of advances by the master of the house, the sadistic valet and the crazy neighbor; but she falls in love with the sick son of the household. There's murder, robbery and blackmail before the picture ends and the chambermaid and son pledge their love.

Comment: The draw that the names of Paulette Goddard and Burgess Meredith have on the marquee will insure the reception of this picture when it first appears for showing. After that it will be a question of what word-of-mouth may do to its box-office worth. For it is a strange picture, and one that for once, is really and truly different. There's a strangeness about its presentation, its mood and its sinister atmosphere that may not be readily acceptable to the average American audience, for unlike most American pictures with American stars, this one carries a strong foreign touch, probably due to Jean Renoir's direction, for it is his interpretation of the story that has given the picture its strangeness. Though the players handle roles that are unusual, each individual enactment is excellent. Paulette Goddard gives a sympathetic delineation of the housemaid; Burgess Meredith makes the weazened septuagenarian a character that is the cause for many laughs and entertaining moments; Hurd Hatfield gives truth to the moody, sick man and Francis Lederer is sinister enough to satisfy the most demanding of horror fans. In supporting roles are such outstanding thespians as Judith Anderson, Florence Bates and Reginald Owen, and Irene Ryan, in her first big part, impresses. Production credit for the authenticity of period and top values in every department goes to Burgess Meredith and Benedict Bogeaus, co-producers.

The Cherokee Flash

Republic Western 64 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Average Western that will please action audiences.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Popularity of Sunset Carson should aid its box-office draw.

Cast: Sunset Carson, Linda Stirling, Roy Barcroft, John Merton, Tom London. Credits: Directed by Thomas Carr. Original screenplay by Betty Burbridge. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Produced by Bennett Cohen.

Plot: The father of the hero refuses to play ball with his old gang; he has served his prison term for roaming the West as "The Cherokee Flash" and wants to go straight. When he refuses, the sheriff and a bogus lawyer, who are anxious to get the hero's ranch, try to frame the father. Their efforts are frustrated by the son and his girl, plus a faithful cowhand, and the real culprits are exposed.

Comment: The plot is fairly well worked out, and the essential ingredient of action is maintained, Sunset Carson presents a fine physical figure before the cameras, but his voice often goes too high for a rugged Western hero. Linda Stirling is excellent in her role of the cowgirl, and the supporting cast is up to par. Some of the gunplay is just a little too obvious, and the fights are not as rough as some Western fans expect; however, on the whole, Carson's latest offering won't do anything to impede his rating at the box-office.

The Blue Dahlia

Paramount Mystery 100 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) An excellent murder-mystery for everybody everywhere, especially where Alan Ladd and Veronica Lake are favorites.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Name-draw and word-of-mouth, plus the general excellence of the picture, make this a potential bet for extended playing time.

Cast: Alan Ladd, Veronica Lake, William Bendix, Howard Da Silva, Doris Dowling, Tom Powers, Hugh Beaumont, Howard Freeman, Don Costello, Will Wright, Frank Faylen, Walter Sande. Credits: Produced by John Houseman. Directed by George Marshall. Original screenplay by Raymond Chandler. Photography, Lionel Lindon.

Plot: Three Navy men return from overseas duty to find the wife of one of them keeping company with the owner of the "Blue Dahlia" night club. She is murdered and her husband, dodging police, becomes involved with various racketeers and suspects before the murder is solved.

Comment: A perfect vehicle for Alan Ladd, this will score heavily at the box-office. Made from an original screenplay by Raymond Chandler, who planned it as a Ladd starrer, the picture has been accorded the best in production values and provided a cast that delivers top performances throughout. These attributes, plus the masterful direction of George Marshall, have all been combined to give the audience everything they want in a Ladd murder-mystery. It is a potential bet for extended playing time. Alan Ladd seems to get better with every picture (if that's possible), particularly if, as in this case, he is given the smooth, suave type of role he handles so well. He is excellent, as is Veronica Lake and William Bendix, three names that are sure-fire attractions practially everywhere. Exceptionally good, too, are Howard DaSilva, Doris Dowling and Hugh Beaumont, who handle top featured roles. Credit for the picture as a whole goes to John Houseman who handled the production reins.

The Well-Groomed Bride

Paramount Comedy-Drama 75 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Several laughs and amusing situations highlight this old, but dressed-up story of two men out to get the same girl.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Ray Milland's "Lost Weekend" popularity, plus Sonny Tufts and Olivia deHavilland, should put this hilarious comedy in the top spot in any situation.

Cast: Olivia deHavilland, Ray Milland, Sonny Tufts, James Gleason, Constance Dowling, Percy Kilbride, Jean Heather, Jay Norris, Jack Reilly, George Turner. Credits: Produced by Fred Kohlmar. Directed by Sidney Lanfield. Screenplay by Claude Binyon and Robert Russell, Based on a story by Robert Russell. Photography, John F. Seitz.

Plot: The last remaining bottle of French champagne in San Francisco is the cause of a hectic duel of wits between a naval lieutenant, who wants it to christen a new aircraft carrier, and a pretty young girl who needs it for her wedding celebration. In the end, the lieutenant winds up with not only the champaign but also the girl.

Comment: Audiences of all types will get plenty of laughs from this hilarious comedy which starts on a merry note and continues that way throughout its entire running time. There is little or nothing new in the story, but the manner in which it is produced by Fred Kohlmar and directed by Sidney Lanfield, plus the engaging performances of the principals, make it ideal, up-to-the-minute entertainment. Ray Milland, who took time out from comedy long enough to portray the dipsomaniac in "The Lost Weekend," is back again in his former breezy role, endowing it with the same expert characterization that was apparent in his "Weekend" sojourn. An excellent flair for comedy is displayed by Olivia deHavilland, who handles her assignment perfectly. The supporting cast is admirable, including Sonny Tufts, James Gleason, Constance Dowling and Percy Kilbride. Sets are attractive and the musical background engaging. Milland's "Weekend" popularity, plus the names of deHavilland and Tufts, should put this comedy in the top spot in any situation.

Ambush Trail

PRC Western 56 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Typical Western with the typical rough-and-tumble action entertainment values.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Should please action fans and followers of Bob Steele.

Cast: Bob Steele, Syd Saylor, I. Stanford Jolley, Lorraine Miller, Charles King, Bob Carson, Budd Buster, Kermit Maynard, Frank Ellis, Edward Cassidy. Credits: Produced by Arthur Alexander. Directed by Harry Fraser. Original screenplay by Elmer Clifton. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh.

Plot: A rancher, accused of murdering one of his own men, succeeds in apprehending the guilty culprits—outlaws who steal equipment intended for newly-purchased land—and bring them to justice.

Comment: Bob Steele fans will find this latest western offering a routine affair with little change from the formula of the hard-riding cowboy who gets mixed up in a killing and attempts to prove himself innocent. Steele gives his fans their usual share of outdoor excitement with three saloon fights, deft horseback riding and fancy gunplay. Syd Saylor, as Steele's sidekick, provides a few comical moments, and I. Stanford Jolley, as the head gunman, will bring forth plenty of lusty boos from the patrons. Steele fans, along with regular action fans, should go for this.

The Mask of Diijon

PRC Drama 70 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Adult) A suspenseful drama about hypnotism that holds the interest to the very end.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT Should do well in the market for which it was intended.

Cast: Erich von Stroheim, Jeanne Bates, William Wright, Edward Van Sloan, Mauritz Hugo, Denise Vernac, Robert Malcolm, Hope Landin, Shimen Ruskin, Roy Darmour, Antonio Filauiri. Credits: Directed by Lew Landers. Original story by Arthur St. Claire. Screenplay by Arthur St. Claire and Griffin Jay. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh. Produced by Max Alexander and Alfred Stern. An Alexander-Stern Production.

Plot: A famous magician and his wife are destitute because he refuses to continue with his act, spending his time in studying hypnotism. She, in the meantime, gets a job as singer in a small cafe, through the intervention of an old sweetheart. When the magician realizes he is losing his wife, he decides to prove his powers, by forcing a man to commit suicide and hypnotizing his wife so she will kill the sweetheart. Because he uses his powers for evil, everything goes wrong and he ends up by being killed himself.

Comment: This Erich von Stroheim offering has been produced and directed with care and attention to detail and succeeds in inculcating a constant sense of suspense. It is a well-knit, plausible murder yarn that holds the interest throughout and should be well received by average adult audiences everywhere. Von Stroheim delivers his usual interpretation of a sinister figure, giving the picture mood and making of himself a realistic menace. Jeanne Bates, as his wife, is attractive, and besides turning in a satisfactory performance, presents several songs with pleasing effect. William Wright is good as the sweetheart and Edward Van Sloan, Mauritz Hugo and Denise Vernac contribute worthy performances in supporting roles. Direction by Lew Landers succeeds in building up the suspense and holding the interest until the final denouement, and production credit goes to Max Alexander and Alfred Stern.

Song of the Prairie

Columbia Western 69 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Adequate musical Western for followers of this type of entertainment, with emphasis on comedy and action.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Enough standard draws to attract Western fans, such as "Big Boy" Williams, Andy Clyde and The Hoosier Hot Shots.

Cast: Ken Curtis, June Storey, Andy Clyde, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Jeff Donnell, Grady Sutton, Thurston Hall, The Town Criers, The Hoosier Hot Shots. Credits: Directed by Ray Nazarro. Screenplay by J. Benton Cheney. Photography, George Kelley. Produced by Colbert Clark.

Plot: A rancher tries to open a music hall to save his property, but complications set in. A young stage-struck girl, masquerading as a maid, saves the day by buying the lease. Her wealthy father is against her ambitions and tries to thwart them. Furthermore, his choice for her husband is a dull character from the effete East. The night club emerges an immense success, however, with the exfiance sent on his way, the rancher and the girl united, and the father backing them with his resources.

Comment: This Western plot is along tried and proved lines, with the audience calling the shots before they occur. However, it has enough pace and music to make up for the run-of-the-mill situations. The Hoosier Hot Shots, very popular in the farm belt, get plenty of opportunity to put across their special brand of corn, and add stature to their continually entertaining performances. Andy Clyde is excellent as an old cowhand. June Storey is adequate. The Town Criers, a smooth-singing quartet, surprise with a strictly hep tune in their brief appearance, supplying variation on the hillbilly material. There's Silver on the Sage Tonight, a popular Western tune, is one of the songs heard in the picture.

Idea Girl

Universal Comedy 60 mins.

AUDIENCE SLANT: (Family) Mildly entertaining for the most part but with some genuinely funny moments contributed by Alan Mowbray and newcomers George Dolenz and Joan Fulton.

BOX-OFFICE SLANT: Obviously intended for the double feature situations, this modestly budgeted film is suitable as an addition to any program.

Cast: Jess Barker, Julie Bishop, George Dolenz, Alan Mowbray, Joan Fulton, Laura Deane Dutton, Virginia Christine, Lane Chandler and Charlie Barnet and his Orchestra. Credits: Screenplay by Charles F. Marion. Adaptation by Elwood Ullman from an original story by Gladys Shelley. Directed by Will Jason. Associate producer, Will Cowan. Executive producer, Howard Welsch. Photography, George Robinson.

Plot: Song publishers Alan Mowbray and Jess Barker find themselves in a dilemma when Mowbray signs Julie Bishop to a contract with power of attorney to make any kind of deal. She involves the partners to the extent that they lose control of their business, but the small interest left to them provides a much greater income than previously enjoyed, due to the percentage deals she makes with various famous stars and song writers. Julie Bishop and Jess Barker finally find their mutual affection at the close.

Comment: Although evidently intended to fill double-bill situations and just mildly entertaining during most of its 60 minutes, this comedy provides some genuinely funny moments when newcomer Joan Fulton is on the screen and when Alan Mowbray delivers some priceless lines. Unfortunately these are too few and too seldom to lift it into the top comedy class that might have been possible with better material. George Dolenz whose comedy speaking voice is surprisingly similar to one of the leading characters in a series of cartoons, also adds some high comedy to the proceedings. The film as a whole includes some pleasurable musical moments and some funny comedy bits but unfortunately does not hold together to the extent that it can be recommended other than just a fair comedy. Should fill any kind of double-feature program.

'Sore,' Slashed Seats

Vandalism at the Dream Theatre, Indianapolis, has cost more than $1600 in seat repairs during the past four years, according to Manager C. E. McConaughy. Two youths recently apprehended in the act of slashing seats did so, they admitted, because they were "sore" at the theatre.

Screen Star and Educator Form Commercial Film Company

Eddie Albert, screen actor recently discharged from the Navy, and Jack Fletcher, a fellow officer who was an educator before the war, have announced the formation of Albert Films, a new company which will produce educational and industrial subjects.

An intergrated program is now being developed involving cooperation of university and public school educators. Harry J. Hutchens, a leading figure in the commercial film industry, has been named sales manager.

Goldwyn Girls to Invade East For Danny Kaye Film Opening

Six Goldwyn Girls will be brought to New York in connection with the opening of the new Danny Kaye Technicolor comedy, "The Kid From Brooklyn," at the Astor, around April 1.

The female sextet, first such Hollywood delegation to be on parade since before the war, will make personal appearances at the theatre, entertain on the radio, star in fashion shows and model clothes for national magazines.

Smith to Direct Advertising, Publicity for Liberty Pictures

Lou Smith has been appointed advertising and publicity director of Liberty Films, Inc., and reports to the company late this week. He will make his offices at RKO, where Liberty has opened production headquarters.

Formerly publicity director for MGM, Columbia and Universal studios, Smith, for the past six months has operated his own independent publicity office in Hollywood.

Kelly Firm Now Signet Films

Change of the corporate name of General Motion Pictures Corp. to Signet Films Productions was announced this week by Arthur W. Kelly, president. The company will produce a series of 60-minute features for United Artists release.

Toddy to Release Unit Show

A combination release of "The Beast of Borneo" and "Voodoo Devil Drums" as a unit show through its exchanges has been announced by Toddy Pictures Company.

Exploiting 'Borderline' Films Is Successful Policy, Doob Holds

The tenet of ace showmen that the difference between outstanding success and mediocrity in theatre business is the extra money realized at the box-office by "borderline" pictures was spotlighted again this week when Oscar A. Doob, former advertising head of Loew Theatres and now general theatre executive, told approximately 50 MGM salesmen and field exploiteers at the final session of four series of sales meetings at the Essex House, New York, that one of the circuits highest grosses was chalked up with "The Picture of Dorian Gray."

Oscar A. Doob

"We did a good job on it," Doob said. "We like to go to town on this type of picture."

Stating that "promotion is the life blood of the theatre . . . a practical policy and an investment on which we can expect a profit," Doob outlined the methods and policies used by Loew's Theatres in its promotional efforts and emphasized the fact that some theatres in the circuit spend as much as 20 per cent of the gross for promotional work.

"Empty seats can be filled by promotion, and as long as you have empty seats there will always be something to promote. We have every type of house in the Loew circuit and our experience has been wide in scope. We use every form of advertising and try to key the scope of it to each particular situation," he said. "Even the biggest picture can be aided by promotion," he added, citing circuit's selling accomplishments with "Weekend at the Waldorf."

In comparing the selling efforts to the public of the various companies whose pictures are exhibited in Loew's Theatres Doob gave high praise to the accomplishments of MGM's work along promotional lines, stating that "Leo is far ahead of them all."

Doob explained the special portfolio service maintained by the Loew publicity and advertising department which provides advance information, advertising and publicity material on pictures to play the theatres. "In this way we protect ourselves if the film companies do not get the material we need out on time."

In a blunt discussion about the physical theatre itself, Doob emphasized an important factor in showmanship. "The theatre that has a nice, clean toilet does the business," he said. "We make a point of this because we at Loew's consider it a definite promotion and advertising factor. We always aim to improve the physical comfort of our customers and this is something you can pass on to the people you sell."

'3 Strangers' Meet

The bringing together of three total strangers, in an effective stunt, was carried out by the RKO Century Theatre, Rochester, N. Y., in connection with the world premiere of Warners' "Three Strangers." Radio station picked the trio from the audience by the numbers on their admission tickets. Manager Arthur Krolick, who acted as master of ceremonies, treated the winners to a dinner party.

YOUTH IDEA. Putting plenty of emphasis on the obvious sales appeal of Warners "Too Young to Know," the Warner Theatre, Memphis, arranged this public Jitterbug contest in front of the theatre aboard a truck owned by the distributor of a popular beverage. Dancers were recruited from theatre audiences with recorded music supplying the accompaniment.

Varied Exploitation Campaign On 'Cornered' in Cincinnati

The Cincinnati engagement of RKO's "Cornered" at the Palace Theatre, received a seat-selling ovation in a highly varied exploitation campaign designed by Nat Wise of RKO Theatres. Five thousand heralds were placed in cars in parking lots; 100 "wanted" window and tack cards were posted in the downtown section; numerous radio announcements were made, including a popular servicemen's contest interview. Articles in connection with the contest were carried by the local press.

Attractive lobby displays were supplemented by an advance trailer.

Cooperative Newspaper Campaign Attracts Patrons for 'Main'

Highlighting the advance ballyhoo campaign for RKO's "Spanish Main" was a cooperative newspaper arrangement employed extremely effectively by Forney Bowers, manager of the State Theatre, Cambridge, Ohio, assisted by Wally Heim, RKO field man. A technicolor coloring contest for school children was sponsored by a local daily which carried the plot mats.

Attracting attention to the film was a flashy window display built around the pirate theme. Radio also constituted an integral part of the successful campaign.

50 Million to Read Paramount Tieup Ads

An important publicity tieup in which Paramount stars and forthcoming releases will be featured in a nationwide advertising campaign has been announced for initial presentation in March with the first full color, full page advertisement to appear in 39 large circulation metropolitan newspapers.

The tieup has been arranged by the Paramount studio publicity department with Quaker Puffed Rice in 33 newspapers using the American Weekly and Metro Colorgravure Sunday supplements, plus six other newspapers which do not publish on Sunday. The total circulation of the newspapers approaches 17 million, with an estimated readership of more than 50 million.

"The Blue Dahlia," "The Well Groomed Bride," "The Strange Love of Martha Ivers," and "Our Hearts Were Growing Up" will be featured with their stars in plans already set, the schedule presently set through July. Subsequent advertisements will be planned to coincide with releases as they are decided upon by Paramount.

Newspapers in the American Weekly group include the New York Journal-American, Los Angeles Examiner, Albany Times Union, Baltimore American, Boston Sunday Advertiser, Buffalo Courier-Express, Chicago Herald-American, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Detroit Times, Miami Herald, Milwaukee Sentinel, Philadelphia Record, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Portland Oregonian, San Antonio Light, San Francisco Examiner, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Syracuse Herald-American, Washington Times-Herald.

Sunday Colorgravure sections will appear in the Baltimore Sun, Boston Globe, Cincinnati Enquirer, Des Moines Register, Detroit News, Milwaukee Journal, Minneapolis Tribune, New York Sunday News, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, St. Paul Pioneer Press, Washington Star, Louisville Courier Journal, Chicago Tribune, Philadelphia Inquirer.

Non-Sunday newspapers complete the coverage.

COSTUME WINDOW. This attention-getting window display which features the costumes worn by Maureen O'Hara in RKO Radio's "The Spanish Main," was set by Pat Grosso and Ray Malone, RKO field men, working with Lee Koken, manager of Keith's Flushing, L. I.

'Raid' Gets a Novel North-South Premiere

Deftly executed exploitation and advertising marked the North-South world premiere of 20th-Fox's "Colonel Effingham's Raid," which was held simultaneously in Atlanta, Ga., and Town Line, N. Y. Personal appearances and other activities marked the North-South merchandising, which was under the direction of Charles Schlaifer, 20th-Fox director of advertising and exploitation.

Atlanta's Paramount Theatre housed the opening below the Mason-Dixon Line, where Tom Reid, Lucas and Jenkins circuit executive, cooperating with Harry G. Ballance, 20th's Southern sales manager, and home office executives, all succeeded in making the affair the outstanding piece of showmanship it was.

Exploitation Manager Sid Blumenstock and Field Exploiteer Spence Pierce handled the varied publicity activities, which Charles Coburn, star of the picture, and Berry Fleming, author of the best-selling book, attended. Welcomed to Atlanta by Gov. Ellis Arnall, Mayor Hartzell and other distinguished state and city officials, Coburn was guest of honor at the Capital City Club luncheon the day before the opening. The same dignitaries attended the premiere the following day, making the occasion a gala one. The local Variety Club also tendered a cocktail party.

Irving Kahn, 20th radio manager, personally supervised the Coburn radio broadcasts, which played an important part in the success of the Atlanta premiere. The luncheon was broadcast over station WAGA, and Coburn gave talks over two other networks. Opening night activities were broadcast direct from the theatre.

Newspaper, Window Tieups

Newspaper ads and window tieups, totaling over 100, in addition to numerous radio plugs, were launched concurrently with the personal appearances of the star and author.

Town Line, and Buffalo, New York, were the scenes of the northern premieres which were held simultaneously with the Atlanta opening. The Town Line showing was tied in with a very unusual twist. Ever since the Civil War, this little community of about 500, has not been officially a part of the United States, In 1860 it seceded from the Union, casting its lot with the South. Recently the rebellious city voted to rejoin the Union, and 20th-publicity experts sensing a natural, tied in the opening of the picture in the north, with this unique event.

Cesar Romero and Martha Stewart were the guests of honor at Town Line activities, which included a luncheon and special screening of the film for the entire population of the town. The stars were also on hand, together with approximately 3,000 people, at the flag raising ceremonies which brought the city officially back into the United States.

The ceremonies and film opening were given a wide coverage by the local and nationwide press and the Mutual Broadcasting System plugged the proceedings. The following day the film opened at the Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo.

Gable Welcome Mats

One of the many promotional schemes advocated by Loew Theatres to publicize the return of Clark Gable to the screen in his co-starring venture with Greer Garson in MGM's "Adventure," is the use of a real welcome mat to be used in the lobby or foyer of theatres to play the film. The actual welcome mat is to be imprinted with copy similar to "Welcome Clark Gable, etc." with whatever other copy can be given large enough display.

Search for Cinderella Is On

Actual glass slippers are being provided key-city exhibitors who will play Warners' "Cinderella Jones," starring Joan Leslie and Robert Alda, as the unique feature of a promotion stunt embodying most of the elements of the storied search for the Cinderella Girl whose feet are small enough to wear the slipper.

Merchants in key spots have been tied-in with the stunt to supply various gifts for the selected girl. Announcements of the search will be made early this month in newspaper stories, lobby displays, over the radio and through other channels.

The glass slipper will be displayed in a prominent place, and on a designated night hopeful misses will come to the theatre stage for a fitting. The winning young lady in each case will be named Cinderella and treated to a round of activities, including overnight quarters at a leading hotel, breakfast with escort, press and radio interviews, a call on the mayor, a beauty parlor visit for "the works" lunch at a leading restaurant or civic club, a shopping tour during which she will receive gifts from leading merchants, a cocktail party to be attended by the press and celebrities, dinner as guest of a prominent local citizen, personal appearance at the theatre, an interview on the stage, a visit to a leading night club and back to her home on a schedule which will deliver the young lady exactly at midnight, in keeping with the Cinderella tradition.

Newspaper tieups and additional activities will be keyed to keep the stunt in the headlines and photo pages and radio tieups will give it additional extensive publicity.

Harvey Restaurants in Tieup With MGM's 'Harvey Girls'

Advance ballyhoo for the MGM Technicolor musical "The Harvey Girls" encompasses a natural tieup with the Fred Harvey Restaurants, by which the restaurant shops and dining cars are issuing specially printed menu cards carrying colored photo covers of Judy Garland as one of the early Harvey Girls. Other colored menu covers show scenes from the picture itself, with appropriate credits.

The restaurant chain also has printed large quantities of colored postal cards for patrons' use containing various scenes from the film and as another evidence of the restaurant chain's full cooperation with MGM is giving away colorful reprints of an article on "The Harvey Girls" which recently appeared in the magazine, The Woman.

Unusual Feature Angle Used By McDonough on 'San Antonio'

"Stunt Men of 'San Antonio'" was the newspaper feature angle dreamed up by A. J. McDonough, recently out of the army and now handling the Paramount Theatre, Peekskill, N. Y., in the absence of George Cavanaugh, vacationing, to publicize Warners' "San Antonio." McDonough worked up a clever newspaper feature combining an advertisement and photo-story layout, so popular lately with editors of weekly magazines, dealing with the screen's daring stunt men and showing them in action in the Errol Flynn picture.

Another feature employing the same combination of ideas and layout showed Alexis Smith, co-star with Flynn in the film, modeling latest styles.

Shakespeare Aids Campaign On 'Reputation' in St. Paul

The famous Bard of Avon helped in plugging the Paramount Theatre's "My Reputation" opening in St. Paul, Minn., in the form of small leaflets which were distributed with the following copy: "'Who steals my purse steals trash; but he that filches from me my good name, robs me of that which not enriches him, and makes me poor indeed.'—Shakespeare . . . Your name is as good as Your Reputation, Barbara Stanwyck fights for hers in Warners' 'My Reputation.' Don't Miss It!"

Swift in New Managerial Post

The promotion of Lamar Swift, former city manager of the Georgia Theatres Circuit's Macon theatres, to Macon district manager, was announced early this week by William K. Jenkins, president. Swift will supervise his district from headquarters in Macon.

Midget Stunt Builds Interest in 'Say Yes'

Window displays, a contest, and the extremely hard-to-get street ballyhoo were the backbone of the ticket-selling campaign put on by Harry Boswell, manager of the Palace, Milwaukee, for the opening of "She Wouldn't Say Yes."

Taking advantage of a central comedy character of the film—the minute, impish "Nixie"—Boswell hired a midget, dressed him in Nixie costume and paraded him through the streets of the city. Not only did the stunt create a great amount of interest in the film in general, but lifting, as it did, a character from the picture, caused a great amount of discussion of the theme and thus gave added word-of-mouth advertising.

The contest was conducted in the Walgreen Drug Stores throughout the city, where a special "Nixie" sundae was put on sale before the opening of the film, and where the sundae was featured for the run.

Set Campaigns on WB Films

National advertising and publicity campaigns for "Three Strangers," "Cinderella Jones," "Saratoga Trunk," "Devotion" and other new Warner Bros. films were set by Mort Blumenstock, Warner vice-president, during his recent visit to the coast during conferences with Harry M. and Jack Warner, and studio publicity director Alex Evelove, Ben Kalmenson and Wolfe Cohen.

EXPLOITS PLAYERS. Blowups of the players as they appear in the film served as a background for attractive windows promoted by Ed Johnson, manager of the Washington Theatre, Bay City, Mich., for the world premiere of Columbia's "Snafu."

Money Dates for March

Beware of the Ides of March! This month, next to the pre-Christmas and pre-Easter holidays, does almost as much to handicap the average showman in his efforts to seek extra revenue as a month of Sunday blue laws. In addition to Arctic winds, freak weather and income tax headaches, the barrier imposed by observance of the early days of Lent, can be depended on to further cut into potential attendance. The wise showman will quickly and unhesitantly employ every angle of exploitation that will aid, abet and make attendance so mandatory that it will overrule any climatic discomfort and other restrictions in the minds of his patrons. While not as plentiful as in other calendar periods, national and sectional observances scheduled for this month are sufficient in number to support a strong array of extra activities that will find favor with groups and businesses interested in observance of the events and to promote added patronage at performances throughout the month.

National Observance Periods

MAR. 12-18: GIRL SCOUT WEEK

Arrange a meeting with Girl Scout officials in your vicinity and assist them in planning recruiting drives and setting up recreational and organizational activities for the coming year. Help them prepare an outline of past accomplishments and future aims for presentation to the newspapers and radio stations for publicity purposes. Offer the facilities of your stage and lobby for an exhibition in which the girls demonstrate the units of service in which they are trained by the organization. Get the high school band to lead a parade of all the Girl Scouts in town to some special performance at your theatre to wind up the drive for members. Recent research develops that a great number of World War II heroes and the majority of students at the Military and Naval Academies were former members of the Boy Scouts. Check with the local leaders to determine the names of famous women who were members of their organization. Try to locate local women who have contributed to the welfare or fame of your community who formerly enjoyed membership in the Girl Scouts. You will have little or no difficulty in getting reams of publicity on every move you make in assisting the aims of this fine organization and if you make your theatre the focal point of all activities in connection with observance of the period, your box-office is certain to benefit.

MAR. 18-23: HOBBY WEEK

The newspaper editor and radio station manager will assist you in locating the outstanding hobbyists in the vicinity. Arrange for the exhibition of examples of their playtime activities. If lobby facilities are inadequate tie up with merchants' windows and get publicity for your theatre and its attractions by having the newspaper run a contest offering tickets as prizes to persons sending in the best impressions of the various hobbies displayed. Don't overlook this bet, as it offers many chances of personal contact with the better class citizens who are not regular theatre patrons and whose continued patronage is highly desirable.

Special Opportunity Tieups

MAR. 8: FARM DAY

For those houses situated in a rural or farming communities, this day, if exploited properly and well in advance with an eye towards compact organization, can be depended upon to bring Farmer Jones and his family out en masse to your theatre. As this day celebrates the 13th anniversary of the Farm Aid Program, the occasion in honor of the tiller of the soil should be a gala one. In advance, announce a huge Country Square Dance and party to take place in front of your theatre. For the event, rope or block off the area directly in front of the house. Decorate the area and your marquee, and urge neighboring merchants to do likewise. Publicize the event thoroughly through throwaways, heralds, newspapers and radio. For the occasion, merchants can be depended upon to supply free soft drinks and refreshments for the publicity value. Organize a few speakers, preferably city or state agricultural officials, to laud farmers in their efforts to grow food and produce for the nation. After the speeches, the square dance contest could be held, with farmers judging the winners. Winning contestants should receive guest tickets and if possible, merchants too, should supply some of the awards. A cooperative newspaper ad tieup with the local farm machinery outlet could show that by use of modern mechanical methods, the farmer is able to spend his extra time at the movies.

MAR. 14-MAY 13: NATIONAL BOWLING CHAMPIONSHIP

Local sports pages are certain to be carrying day-to-day stories on the progress of national bowling championship events. Thus it is possible for you to get mention in every printed article and secure a lot of advertising and support from local bowling alley operators by sponsoring a series of local eliminations, with each week's winning team as guests of the theatre and special period passes to high scorers in the finals. Remember that bowling fans are just another variety of pleasure seekers and, as such, perfect prospects for theatre patronage.

MAR. 17: ST. PATRICK'S DAY

The Irish love recognition and attention and this is their big day. Arrange with a local florist for green carnations to be given the ladies and see that handbills are printed or overlayed in green. If possible secure a quantity of inexpensive shamrocks from one of the big novelty houses to be given away, with some message about the theatre and its attractions appended, on or before the 17th. Contact the heads of local Irish societies and try to arrange for choral groups and other activities on stage such as, an Irish Reel dancing contest, old fiddlers contest, etc.

Other Important Dates

MAR. 1: U. S. DEPT. OF EDUCATION, EST. 1867

Contact school heads and local Board of Education officials. Try to get them to use your stage for special activities to celebrate the anniversary. The possibilities are as big as your own imagination and your ability to sell your ideas and the importance of the occasion to the executives you contact.

MAR. 7: LUTHER BURBANK, FAMOUS HORTICULTURAL SCIENTIST, BORN 1849

With spring and the planting season just around the corner the county agricultural agent, leaders in local Garden Clubs, the 4-H membership and great numbers of ruralites can be interested in participating in observance of the natal day of this man whose work has meant so much to furthering the perfection and progress of plant and vegetable life. If possible, arrange for gratis or inexpensive packages of seeds, carrying a message about your theatre, to be given to all persons attending.

MAR. 6: ASH WEDNESDAY, BEGINNING OF LENT

Make yourself solid with the religious leaders by offering the facilities of the theatre in the early morning or during closed afternoon hours for holding services of observance.

MAR. 14: ELI WHITNEY PATENTED THE COTTON GIN, 1794

If yours happens to be a textile manufacturing or cotton growing community you should experience little difficulty in arranging for wide observance of this day.

MAR. 15: FIRST INCOME TAX PAYMENT DUE

Familiarize newcomers with details of the necessary procedure in making out their returns. Get in touch with the local Internal Revenue Collector and arrange for the appearance of some member of his staff to handle a five-minute instruction period from the stage of your theatre for four or five evenings preceding the date of collection.

MAR. 21: FIRST DAY OF SPRING

Go after the local merchants and arrange for observance in the way of fashion shows, mezzanine dress parades, etc.

MAR. 21: JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH, COMPOSER, BORN 1685

The various music societies and music stores will cooperate on activity to celebrate this occasion.

Sectional Observances

Mar. 1: Nebraska Admitted to Union, 1867

Mar. 2: Texas Independence Day

Mar. 3: Florida Admitted to Union, 1845

Mar. 4: Pennsylvania Day, Charter Granted, 1681

Mar. 4: Vermont Admitted to Union, 1791

Mar. 15: Maine Admitted to Union, 1820

Mar. 23: Alaska made part of United States, 1867

Mar. 25: Maryland Day.

Alger Gives 'Fair' Standout Exploitation

When 20th Century-Fox's "State Fair" played at the Majestic Theatres, LaSalle and Peru, Ill., over twenty tieups were effected with department stores, music and record shops, free want-ads in the classified section and a score of other ticket-selling ideas.

Among the various publicity stunts arranged by Jack Alger, publicity director of the theatres, was the "Pig Chase" which attracted tremendous crowds watching boys chasing a greased pig down the main street.

A "Hog Calling" contest took place in front of the theatre on opening day.

Four-H Club members who had won a prize at a State Fair were guests of honor the same day.

All large department stores tied up with window displays, and music and record shops went all out on music displays.

Want-ad tieup got free space advertising the picture.

Heralds were distributed in LaSalle, Peru and Oglesby through stuffing of out-of-town papers delivered in these towns.

Alger was assisted in all of the tieups by Jay Frank, 20th-Fox exploiteer.

Novel Stunts Exploit 'Cornered' in Hartford

Novel displays, a radio contest and tieups highlighted the latest campaign expertly planned and executed for the showing of RKO's "Cornered" at Loew's Poli Theatre, Hartford, Conn., by master-campaigners Lou Cohen, manager, Sam Horwitz, James Hughes and Peggy Rolleston of that theatre, and Fred Greenway, Angela Corrado and Martha Gilwech of the Palace Theatre.

The theatre itself received its share of eye-pulling attractions with a large safe deposit box in the lobby, copy on which stated: "Do not disturb! This box contains the evidence wanted by Dick Powell in his search for the murderer of his bride!" On the Poli's miniature stage, also situated in the lobby, a treasure hunt contest was initiated, awarding cash prizes to those contestants who located the mates of the items on display. The mates were planted in downtown stores and the items used were gloves, shoes, dress material, rouge, compacts, etc. Teaser display cards were hung from chandeliers, in ladies' rooms, men's rooms and in strategic spots throughout the theatre.

A contest which was broadcast over station WTHT, on a local daily record program, featured two songs sung by Dick Powell from past pictures with guest tickets being awarded to the first ten correct answers submitted.

Other exploitation displays included: window cards with 'shock' copy; the stenciling of the word 'Cornered' on the sidewalks; bannering news trucks; posting of the town with 3- 6- and 24-sheets; stair risers, and a co-op newspaper ad with a leading beauty salon.

Columbia Did It

For the first time in the 50-year history of the Fifth Avenue Association, one of its members—Saks Fifth Avenue—tied in with a commercial venture when a flag, 10x15 feet, was suspended from the store's flagpole to welcome the 82nd Airborne Division. The motto on the flag read: "U. S. Coast Guard TARS and SPARS Welcomes the Famous 82nd." That "Tars and Spars" is from the Columbia picture of the same name.

SAYING GRACE. Director Victor Saville (right) demonstrates the Scottish way of saying grace for Hume Cronyn and Dean Stockwell, for a scene in MGM's screen version of the A. J. Cronin novel, "The Green Years." Leon Gordon is the producer.

Harmon Signed By Riskin

Sidney Harmon, for the past three years in charge of the motion picture division of the Hollywood branch in the OWI Overseas Film Bureau, has been signed by Robert Riskin Productions as story assistant to Robert Riskin. The company's first feature for RKO release will be "The Magic City," starring James Stewart.

Freeman to Write Del Ruth Film

Roy Del Ruth has signed Everett Freeman to prepare the screenplay for "It Happened on Fifth Avenue," based on an original by Herbert Clyde Lewis and Frederick Stephani. Film will be Del Ruth's first Monogram production under his recently signed contract.

Injured Actress Returns to Screen

Dorothea Kent, who was injured a year ago during the making of a scene, has been signed to a two-year Monogram contract, calling for a minimum of two films per year. Her first assignment will be in the comedy-drama "The Shadow's Shadow" being produced by Joe Kaufman.

Webb in Jessel's 'Bandwagon'

George Jessel's production of "Bandwagon" for 20th-Fox will have Clifton Webb in the role originally played by Frank Morgan on the stage.

PRC's Moon Radar Film

First motion picture to tie-in with the U. S. Army's recent announcement that radar contact has been established with the moon will be PRC's "The Lost Continent," according to Harry H. Thomas, PRC president.

To permit the earliest possible release date to take advantage of the intense interest created by the reported radar contact, Reeves Espy, production head, will rush completion of the film, which features a rocket trip to the moon.

CLOSEUPS ON NEW PICTURES IN WORK

20th-Fox, Universal Maintain Strong Production Record as Studios Plan Several Films for February Start; Lew Ayres, Harold Lloyd Return to Screen After Many Years' Absence

RKO RADIO Plans February 16 Start for "Sinbad the Sailor"; Has Five Features Rolling Now.—A tentative starting date has been given this studio's pretentious new season offering, "Sinbad the Sailor," which is scheduled to begin shooting February 16. The film features Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Maureen O'Hara and Walter Slezak. Stephen Ames will produce from an original by John Twist.

Now rolling (Feb. 2) are "Sister Kenny," with Rosalind Russell and Dean Jagger in its 75th day before the cameras; "Crack-Up," Pat O'Brien opus, finishing its sixth week; "Desirable Woman," starring Joan Bennett, with Robert Ryan and Charles Bickford, just started; "Double Trouble," Jack Haley comedy, another film just beginning to roll; "A Likely Story," with Bill Williams and Barbara Hale, just starting. "Christabel Caine," Joan Fontaine starrer, has been postponed for several months.

Scheduled to start soon is "The Falcon's Adventure," latest in this Tom Conway series. Herman Schlom is to produce.

"Till the End of Time" is finished after three months of shooting, with Edward Dmytryk directing a cast headed by Dorothy McGuire, Guy Madison and Bob Mitchum. "Notorious" is also finished. Another film completed is the LeRoy-Lasky production, "Without Reservations."

No starting date has been set for the Samuel Goldwyn special, "Glory for Me," being adapted for the screen by Robert E. Sherwood from MacKinlay Kantor's novel.

COLUMBIA Completes Dramatic Dialog on "Jolson" Biography; Elaborate Production Numbers Remain to be Filmed.—"The Story of Jolson," Columbia's special, completes its 14th week of shooting. Dramatic dialog is now finished and approximately three weeks of productions numbers remain to be shot. In Technicolor, the film features Larry Parks as Al, with Evelyn Keyes and William Demarest in supporting roles. Sid Skolsky produces, while Alfred E. Green directs.

"The Devil's Mask" starts, with Anita Louise, Jim Bannon and Barton Yarborough handling lead roles. Wallace MacDonald is the producer with Henry Levin handling the director's chores.

"The Walls Came Tumbling Down," Lee Bowman-Marguerite Chapman starrer, is expected to finish February 2. Albert J. Cohen produces; Lothar Mendes directs.

Columbia is at peace again with Ann Miller, who had threatened to retire from the screen and get married. The dancing star is set for "Rendezvous in Rio," a big musical tentatively scheduled to start the first of March. "The Great Highway," Glenn Ford airplane starrer, has been changed to "Gallant Journey."

"One Life Too Many" is slated to begin February 6 under the production guidance of Leonard Picker, supervised by Bennie F. Zeidman. John Sturges, ex-vet, directs.

INTERNATIONAL Has One Production Currently in Work with Lew Ayres Making His First Appearance Since 1942 as Co-Star with Olivia de Havilland.—This studio's current production is "The Dark Mirror," which has not been definitely ticketed for release through any organization. It may be released through RKO, as in the past, but it is also possible that the film will be released through the recently formed United World setup. Olivia de Havilland and Lew Ayres, making his first picture in four years, star, with Thomas Mitchell. Nunnally Johnson is producing, with Robert Siodmak directing. Johnson also handled the screenplay. Plans for the next Sonja Henie starrer, probably "The Countess of Monte Cristo," may be retarded because of Miss Henie's ice shows.

HAL ROACH Unit Is Installing $225,000 Western Electric Sound System; "Fabulous Joe" to be First of 12 Features.—Installation of a completely new Western Electric sound system is costing this unit $225,000. It is part of a general setup which will make the Roach plant a modern studio with the latest improvements. The system is expected to be ready by March 4, when shooting on the first of 12 feature comedies is scheduled to start. "The Fabulous Joe," in color, is number one on the agenda.

REPUBLIC Starts Production on Two, Completes Three, Including Serial; Bill Eliott Signed to New Contract.—"Rainbow Over Texas," the latest Roy Rogers opus, is still rolling. "The Invisible Informer," featuring Linda Stirling, Bill Henry and Adele Mara, was scheduled to have started last week; and another mystery-drama, "The Inner Circle" is expected to begin this week. "Daughter of Don Q," serial with Kirk Alyn and Adrian Booth, is finishing. "The El Paso Kid," latest Sunset Carson Western, is completed.

Roy Rogers' next is tentatively titled "My Pal, Trigger," and will be directed by Frank McDonald. Plans call for shooting to begin in mid-February.

Bill Henry and Kirk Alyn, recently released veterans, are resuming their film careers. Another ex-vet, Francis Lyon, has been inked to a contract as a producer. He spent four years in England for Alexander Korda, and served as a major in the Army.

Bill Elliott, Western star, has been signed to a new five-year contract.

Republic announced the purchase of an original story, "Blood and Guts," by Martin Van Laas. Plans call for this to be an extra-budget special.

UNIVERSAL Maintains Strong Production Record with Four Pictures in Work; Brent and Ball Co-Star in "Lessons in Love," Set to Start February 15.—"Design for Death" was completed last week, but "Prelude to Murder" was started, maintaining this studio's strong record for current production. "Prelude" features Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce and Patricia

"Running for Rooney," a comedy dealing with politics, was bought from Sam Hellman.

Lucille Ball and George Brent co-star in "Lessons in Love," slated to roll February 15. Production will be under Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano.

Option of actress Ella Raines was picked up for another year.

UNITED ARTISTS Producers Hunt Stromberg and Charles R. Rogers Each Have One Picture Shooting; Sturges Completes "Diddlebock," First Harold Lloyd Film in Eight Years.—Two films are currently being produced by all of the units releasing under the UA banner. They are "The Strange Woman," a Hunt Stromberg Production starring Hedy LaMarr; and "Angel on My Shoulder," Charles R. Rogers Production. "The Strange Woman" moves into its 30th day of shooting, while "Angel" has just completed three weeks before the cameras.

"The Sin of Harold Diddlebock," a Preston Sturges Production, finished recently, and is now being edited. When released, it will mark Harold Lloyd's first screen appearance in eight years. His last was "Professor Beware." Sturges wrote, produced and directed the picture, which also includes Rudy Vallee and Edgar Kennedy.

Seymour Nebenzahl, whose "Whistle Stop" is now being shown, is preparing "The Chase" for his next attraction. Phillip Yordan is working on the screenplay, adapted from the novel by Cornel Woolrich.

Werner Janssen, famous symphony conductor, finished scoring on "Night in Casablanca," Marx Brothers opus for David L. Loew.

Ben Hecht will write the script for "Dishonored Lady," next Hunt Stromberg picture, to star Hedy LaMarr.

David O. Selznick's "Duel in the Sun," featuring Jennifer Jones, Joseph Cotten, Gregory Peck, Lionel Barrymore and Herbert Marshall, last week was being edited after 19 months of preparation and production. No definite release date has been set. Producer Selznick plans to put "And Suddenly It's Spring" into production in two months. It will be produced by Dore Schary, and will star Shirley Temple and Joseph Cotten.

MONOGRAM Has Two Pictures in Production, Completes "Code of the Drifter"; "Murder in Manhattan" Set for February Start.—In production at this studio are "The Shadow's Shadow" and "West of the Alamo." "Code of the Drifter," with Johnny Mack Brown, Raymond Hatton and Reno Blair, just finished. Joe Kaufman produces and Phil Karlson directs "Shadow," starring Kane Richmond and Barbara Reed. "West of the Alamo" is the latest Jimmy Wakely production and includes Lee "Lasses" White in the cast, directed by Oliver Drake; Drake also produces. Wakely's next is "South of San Antone."

"Murder in Manhattan," with Lindsley Parsons producing, is scheduled to start rolling February 15.

PRC Production Temporarily at Standstill as Studio Is Renovated, Including Painting Executive Offices and Other Improvements—Production at this studio is more or less at a standstill. "Avalanche" is scheduled to start this month, but no definite date has been assigned. "Queen of Burlesque" has been set back to March.

Just finished are "Devil Bat's Daughter" and "Gentlemen With Guns," Buster Crabbe Western. Studio is getting a renovation job, with executive offices being painted and the studio proper scheduled for a going-over. New headquarters for the property and set dressing departments with offices, lockers, a ramp and separate street entrance are being set up. Other improvements include a newly designed electrical dock, a process tunnel over 100 feet long and relighting of all sound stages. Present plans call for erection of a two story medical building, several doctors' office and a first aid clinic.

PARAMOUNT Shooting "Calfornia," "Searching Wind" and "Perfect Marriage"; Background Scenes for Pine-Thomas Film Completed.—"California" moves into its eighth week of production. This special, being produced in Technicolor, and two Hal Wallis Productions sum up Paramount's present studio efforts. The two Wallis pictures are "The Searching Wind," starring Robert Young and Sylvia Sidney, and "The Perfect Marriage," featuring Loretta Young, David Niven and Don DeFore.

Background shooting for "Seven Were Saved," Pine-Thomas action picture, has been completed at Keesler Field, Biloxi, Miss., following a delay caused by bad weather. The film is concerned with the air-sea rescue service.

Scheduled to go before the cameras this month are "Suddenly It's Spring," romantic comedy; "Danger Street," Pine-Thomas production starring Robert Lowery; and "O.S.S.," about the Office of Strategic Services.

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER Has Four Pictures in Production, Four Scheduled to Start This Month; Gregory La Cava Signed to Directorial Contract.—"Till the Clouds Roll By," Technicolor musical with Judy Garland, Van Johnson, Frank Sinatra, June Allyson, Robert Walker, Van Heflin, Lucille Bremer and Johnnie Johnston, has started.

This month sees "You Were There" before the cameras. Producer Pandro S. Berman and director Vincente Minnelli are handling a cast headed by Robert Taylor and Katharine Hepburn. Other pictures scheduled to roll in February are "Beloved Stranger," with Greer Garson and Robert Montgomery; "The Showoff," starring Red Skelton; and "Tenth Avenue Angel," produced by Ralph Wheelwright and directed by Roy Rowland, and featuring Margaret O'Brien, George Murphy and Angela Lansbury.

Three pictures, in addition to "Clouds Roll By," are shooting now. They are "Fiesta," "Faithful in My Fashion," and "But Not Goodbye." "Fiesta," a Technicolor picture starring Esther Williams, is being made in Mexico.

Gregory La Cava has been signed by MGM to a long-term directorial contract. Gottfried Reinhardt, after four years in the Army, has produced "Comrade X."

"The Yearling" has been completed at long last, and is now being edited.

Scheduled to start rolling soon is "The Risen Soldier," based on an article by Cardinal Francis J. Spellman.

WARNERS Plan February Start for "Stallion Road"; Four Pictures Are Currently in Production; Only Three Former Warner Actors Still in Service.—Four films are now in production at this studio. They are "Two Guys from Milwaukee," "Humoresque," "The Sentence," and "Escape Me Never." "The Beast With Five Fingers" finished last week.

"Stallion Road," taken from the famous Stephen Longstreet novel, will roll this month, with Alex Gottlieb producing. The film stars Ronald Reagan and Alexis Smith. James Kern will direct. Gottlieb is currently doing "Two Guys from Milwaukee," which finishes its seventh week. Most recent starter is "The Sentence," starring Ann Sheridan.

With the return to the studio of Herbert Anderson, Ross Ford and George Campeau, only three former Warner actors remain in service. They are Jeffrey Lynn, Keith Douglass and Herbert Anderson.

Rosemary DeCamp has to "bicycle" between "Two Guys from Milwaukee" and "The Sentence"—she is in both.

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX Busiest Studio with Seven Films in Production; Charles Boyer Signed to Four-Year, One-Picture-a-Year Contract.—This studio still maintains its record for being the busiest plant in operation at this time, with seven films rolling. "Strange Triangle," featuring Signe Hasso, was completed on January 22, and "Somewhere in the Night" has been finished. Scheduled for completion this month are "Anna and the King of Siam," Irene Dunne drama, produced by Louis D. Lighton; "Dark Corner," starring Lucille Ball, Bill Bendix and Clifton Webb, directed by Henry Hathaway; and "It Shouldn't Happen to a Dog," starring Carole Landis, with Allan Joslyn and Henry Morgan.

Other films still in production are "Three Little Girls in Blue" (Haver-Blaine-Montgomery); "The Shocking Miss Pilgrim" (Grable-Haymes); "Cluny Brown" (Boyer-Jones-Lawford); "Rendezvous 24," a Sol M. Wurtzel Production (Gargan-Palmer).

Charles Boyer, now working on "Cluny Brown," has been signed to a contract calling for four pictures in four years.

"The Dark Wood," written by Christine Weston, Atlantic Monthly prize novelist, has been bought by the studio. It will be serialized in the Ladies Home Journal and will emerge as a novel by Scribner's in the fall.

Skirball-Manning Sign Rogers

Ginger Rogers has been signed by Jack H. Skirball and Bruce Manning for their forthcoming picture, "The Magnificent Doll," a story by Irving Stone based on the life of Dolly Madison.

Nugent to Direct 'Life'

Elliott Nugent is in Hollywood to direct "Where There's Life," modern comedy of international intrigue in which Paramount will star Bob Hope with Signe Hasso in the feminine lead.

Macdonald Carey Returns

Macdonald Carey will make his return to the screen after three years in the Marine Corps as the "other" man with Paulette Goddard and Fred MacMurray in Paramount's "Suddenly It's Spring," which Claude Binyon will produce.

Bogeaus, Boyd, Leserman to Make 18 'Hopalong Cassidy' Films

Benedict Bogeaus, William Boyd and Carl Leserman have formed a partnership to produce a minimum of six "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures annually for the next three years with United Artists distributing the Westerns.

Boyd's next picture will be his 55th in the title role of the series, with production scheduled for early this year.

Kelly-Glazer to Produce Film

Arthur W. Kelly has announced the formation of a partnership agreement with Barney Glazer, wherein the latter will write the screenplay and produce "The Half Caste" from the novel by Eric Baume. The film goes into production July 1.

Milland Signs New Contract

Ray Milland, in his thirteenth successive year at Paramount and a leading candidate for an Academy Award for his performance in "The Lost Weekend," has been given a new long-term contract.

Wisberg to Write Screenplay

Screenplay for RKO's "The Falcon in London," in which Tom Conway has the title role, will be written by Aubrey Wisberg. Producer is Herman Schlom, with Sid Rogell as executive producer.

Mrs. Showman Goes Studio Strolling

Dear Mr. Exhibitor's Wife:

We've got a swell visit lined up for us today at RKO where Ingrid Bergman, Cary Grant and that master of suspense, Alfred Hitchcock, are making a picture called "Notorious." Shortly after we arrive at the studio, we find ourselves inside the stage where they're shooting.

The place is buzzing with activity. Technicians and others are busily engaged in building some strange-looking contraption up in the catwalk. It looks like some kind of track they're laying, but unlike most tracks, it isn't nailed down but hangs from the rafters. (Something special for a Hitchcock shot.)

Set itself is a huge living room, magnificently furnished. It must be at least forty or fifty feet long and almost as wide. Has a large fireplace, Corinthian pillars and very ornate, gold-carved furniture and trimmings.

According to the story this is the home of Claude Rains, a Nazi agent living in Rio de Janeiro. He is giving a party to introduce his new wife, Ingrid Bergman. Miss Bergman and Cary Grant are two American secret service agents who have been sent to Rio to investigate Rains and Ingrid has been forced to marry him in order to carry out her mission.

One of the things she's been trying to do is get her hands on a certain key Rains carries and tonight during the excitement of the festivities, her opportunity arrives. Now she must give it to Grant without being seen.

This is the scene they're going to shoot and that's the reason Hitchcock has had that steel track built. He wants the camera to hang from it so that it can follow Miss Bergman's movements from above, and gradually close in so that nothing but the key in her hand shows.

Hitchcock now comes along to see if things are set to go. As he passes us, he stops a minute to be introduced and exchange a few words. Then he leaves and the next thing we see is him climbing up to where the camera is.

Grant and Miss Bergman now appear. She is wearing a full length black crepe, drop-shoulder dress with a long bodice, shirred skirt and puff sleeves. Grant wears a tuxedo. Fortunately for us, we're introduced right away for this looks like a long, difficult shot and we may not be able to remain until the finish.

After a dozen or so repeats, we find we really must leave, so off we go without disturbing the proceedings.

Until next week.

Ann Lewis.

PRODUCTION NOTES FROM THE STUDIOS

Dana Andrews Back to Goldwyn to Star in 'Glory for Me'; Universal Borrows William Bendix for 'White Tie and Tails'

Virginia O'Brien and Marjorie Main were set by MGM for the important comedy roles in the forthcoming Red Skelton starrer, "The Show-Off." Comedy will mark the producing bow of Al Lewis, formerly associated with such Broadway successes as "Cabin in the Sky." "The Show-Off" is adapted from the Broadway stage success of the early 20s.

Phil Magee was signed by Columbia to write a treatment for "The Lone Wolf's Invitation to Murder," second in the studio's revived "Lone Wolf" series. First picture in the new series, "The Notorious Lone Wolf," was released recently. It was produced by Ted Richmond, who will also produce the new one.

Del Lord has been signed to direct "In High Gear," second in the Bowery Boys series at Monogram. Jan Grippo production will star Leo Gorcey with Huntz Hall, Bobby Jordan and Billy Benedict featured.

Sam Neuman has been signed to write the screenplay for his original story, "Missouri Hayride," which Josef Berne will produce and direct for PRC. The musical is slated for March production.

Lindsley Parsons will produce "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," college musical, as part of Monogram's program for the current season, and filming is set for April, following completion of Parsons' next production, "Murder in Manhattan."

Claire Trevor, whose screen career has alternated between siren roles and sympathetic parts, has been signed by RKO to star in two pictures. First of the duo will be "Deadlier Than the Male," screen version of the powerful mystery novel by James Gunn, which will be directed by Robert Wise and produced by Herman Schlom. Filming is scheduled to start in May.

Al Rogell, who handled directorial reins on Republic's "Love, Honor and Goodbye," has been set to direct the most expensive musical yet made at Republic, "Earl Carroll's Sketchbook," to be produced by Robert North. Film is a follow up of "Earl Carroll's Vanities," and will have an all-star line-up. Nick Castle has been assigned to direct dance sequences.

Dana Andrews has returned to the studios of Producer Samuel Goldwyn, who discovered him and launched his film career, for a starring role in "Glory for Me," to be directed by William Wyler from Robert E. Sherwood's screenplay of MacKinlay Kantor's novel. Teresa Wright, Fredric March, Virginia Mayo, Myrna Loy and Cathy O'Donnell have important roles.

Final papers were inked calling for Universal to borrow William Bendix from Hal Roach on a multiple-picture deal over a period of four years. First for Bendix will be "White Tie and Tails," in which he will co-star with Charles Korvin and a top feminine player. William Seiter is set to direct the comedy-drama for Producer Howard Benedict.

Lew Seiler will direct the 20th-Fox picture, "That's for Me," the musical which has been put on Bryan Foy's production schedule.

Alexis Smith will have the feminine lead opposite Ronald Reagan in Warners' "Stallion Road," which is scheduled to roll shortly in Technicolor. This will be Reagan's first since being honorably discharged from the service. Alex Gottlieb will produce with James Kern directing.

Rags Ragland was given key role in MGM's "Till the Clouds Roll By," based on life of the late Jerome Kern. He will be seen as Kern's chauffeur and confidante. Judy Garland, Frank Sinatra and Robert Walker head the galaxy of stars in the Technicolor film.

Lee Bowman, who was signed to a term contract by Columbia because of work in "Cover Girl" and has since played romantic leads opposite Rita Hayworth, Jean Arthur and Rosalind Russell has had his option lifted for another term by the studio. He is currently starring with Marguerite Chapman in "The Walls Came Tumbling Down."

A Monthly Feature Dealing With Practical Ideas for Booking And Exploiting

The Short Subject

Brien's Prize-Winning Serial Campaign Example of Intelligent Planning, Coverage

Arguments presented against "incentive" prizes offered by a producer-distributor organization for extra effort to be put into exploitation campaigns most nearly approached the position of being knocked into the proverbial cocked-hat when positive evidence of such results were presented recently to Columbia Pictures in its prize contest to launch its new serial "The Monster and the Ape." Lige Brien, then manager of the Enright Theatre, Pittsburgh, was declared winner of a $500 Victory Bond for his first-prize comprehensive campaign, which covered just about every angle without sacrificing his selling efforts in relation to feature films or any other aspects of his theatre's drawing power.

Brien's campaign is an extraordinary one from every point of view but should not occasion too much surprise concerning the efforts put into it when analyzed as a unit. He sold the serial, but he gave it its proper proportion in selling, never allowing it to predominate, but never forgetting its proportionate value as a draw in the Saturday Kiddie Shows his theatre had inaugurated some time before with such healthy growth that Karl Krug, amusements editor of the Pittsburgh Sun Telegraph, termed it "the country's largest Kiddie Show."

To properly evaluate the serial campaign a resume of what the Kiddie Show consists of becomes necessary. And at the Enright Theatre it represents a substantial piece of the dollar business rolled up by the theatre. The Kiddie Show is broadcast each week, sponsored by a local baking company, and offers valuable prizes to the youngsters attending. During the run of the serial the baking company gave away 40 bicycles free to lucky youngsters, prizes that were the basis of the exploitation campaign onto which the serial was tagged and which was spread all over the city and its environs through every available method, not the least of which was, of course, the weekly radio broadcast.

Conducted each Saturday morning from the stage of the Enright Theatre the "Footlights and Stardust" program was under the sponsorship of the local baking company and conducted by two well known gossip personalities in the "uncle and aunt" class of radio entertainers beloved by youngsters. Brien presented two features, a stage show, the radio broadcast, comedies, cartoons, games on the stage, a song fest with the theatre organist and featured a chapter of "The Monster and the Ape." Quite a show and all for the price of 10 cents to each kid. The radio program featured the bicycle give-away for 20 consecutive weeks.

Just as a recapitulation of what methods Brien used to make known to the populace of Pittsburgh that his theatre was playing "The Monster and the Ape," now that a background has been established, the following is listed:

There were 40,000 tickets distributed to children for the bicycle give-away and on each ticket was printed a plug about the serial.

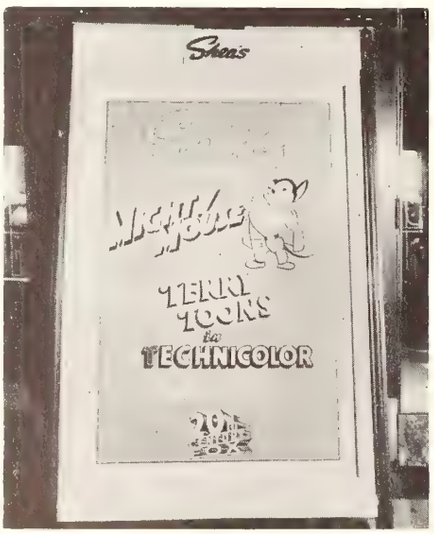
About 15,000 heralds reached the same prospective ticket-buyers.

One hundred printed pennants adorned the theatre during the serial's run.

Special lobby displays showed 2 of the 40 bicycles to be won, and two other wheels were shown on the stage of the theatre during the regular broadcasts.

Two hundred 14x22 inch window cards appeared in good locations throughout the city.

Three thousand mechanical, paper pop guns were distributed to youngsters who were present at the first chapter showing.



Promoter of a miniature train ride cooperated by giving free rides to lucky youngsters and this fact was advertised on 40,000 "lucky" cards.

"Reward" posters in the amount of 500 were tacked on trees and in other locations and 40,000 Bank Night cards advertised the serial.

Five thousand circus heralds were distributed and 1890 sets of the American Fighter Planes identification cards were given away, each sniped with a sticker advertising the serial.

Three thousand coloring books and 3200 story books for youngsters were given away in advance and during the run. Each was sniped with a sticker.

Memo pads distributed by the Pennsylvania Central Airlines were imprinted with brief announcement copy about the serial and 5000 fan photos also were imprinted. Five hundred window streamers, a train float emblazoned on three sides with "Monster" copy and a five-foot high ballyhoo of an ape with two other street ballyhoos consisting of a regular sandwich man and a young lady carrying an umbrella bearing appropriate copy rounded out the ballyhoo angle.

Daley Plays Up Short Dealing With Opposition

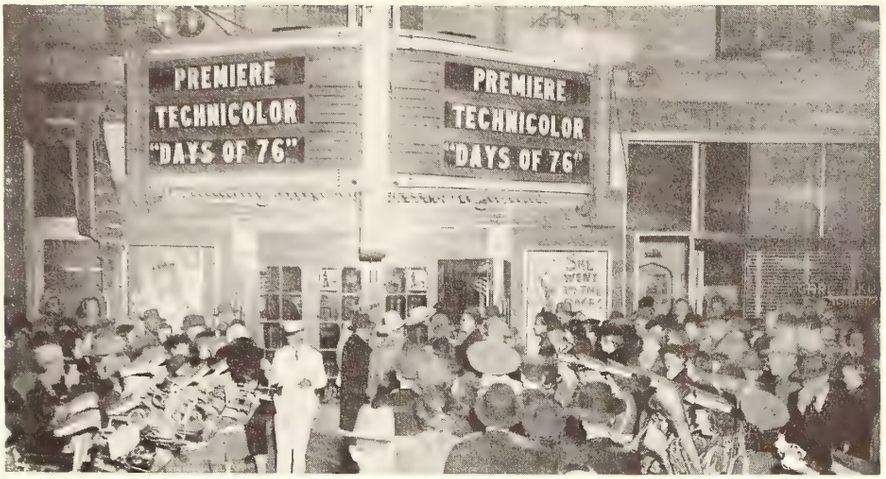
Although "Challenge to Hollywood," the March of Time short, deals with the expansion of J. Arthur Rank and Odeon, which is direct competition for Famous Players Canadian Corp., Manager Tom Daley of the Imperial, Toronto, a Famous Players theatre, did not hesitate to promote the two-reel short. The subject was accorded prominent space in newspaper advertisements and was described as "highlights of Britain's plans for bigger and better films."

'Hitler Lives?' Tieups Urged by Interstate

Because of the highly topical and provocative nature of the Warner Bros. short subject, "Hitler Lives?" the publicity department of the Interstate Theatre Circuit has published an informative five-page brochure on the best possible methods in publicizing the two-reeler to the fullest extent. The pliability and excellent selling value of this snappy campaign outline should lend itself well to duplication by other theatremen throughout the country.

In suggesting tieups, Interstate prompts its managers and publicity agents to show special screenings of the reel to people who are in a position to advertise the product by word-of-mouth. Screenings are urged for all the town's History teachers, a well-known Protestant Minister, a Catholic Priest, a Jewish Rabbi, the editorial writers of the local newspapers, librarians, and art teachers, a week in advance of the playdate.

Editorials Are Suggested



Capitalizing on the word-of-mouth advertising of these exploitive agents, the brochure suggests editorials which can be planted in all newspapers, for and against the short's preachments, just as the editorial writer thinks. Other news stories, quoting the three men of the different faiths, and their opinions on the treatise, would be extremely potent, especially if the theatremen could secure three Chaplains or ex-Chaplains.

A contest inspired by History teachers assigning to their pupils an essay on the subject, "Are There Any Good Nazis?", with prizes of $5 and $10 Theatre Gift Ticket Books for the best article submitted, is another valuable angle the Circuit thinks worthy of Interstate showmen's consideration.

In another contest, art teachers could assign their pupils to draw posters illustrating and advertising the short, which could be displayed in the lobby and used to advantage in conspicuous places.

Along the same lines, posters and placards should be placed in all book stores with books relating to the same subject; also in the library and at all newsstands.

LIVELY SHORT SUBJECT PREMIERE AT DEADWOOD. Warner Bros.' two-reeler, "Days of '76" had its world premiere recently in Deadwood, S. D., where the subject was photographed, based on a colorful annual celebration there. Scene shows band playing in front of brilliantly lighted theatre on opening night. Day's ceremonies included mammoth parade which brought out 25,000 people. Deadwood's normal population is 5000.

'Days Of '76' Gets Premiere Treatment

How a short with local significance can be built by smart selling into the well known "world premiere" importance has been demonstrated in Deadwood, South Dakota, at the Deadwood Theatre where the Warner short, "Days of '76," was attended by close to 40,000 persons and sponsored by the mayors and chambers of commerce of 15 towns.

The short was made in Deadwood without benefit of Hollywood personalities, the townsfolk taking all parts in the film, dressed in the costumes of frontier days with all of the trimmings.

Parades with bands featured the celebration at the key theatre of the Black Hills Amusement Company, with a radio broadcast via KOTA set by Allen Kohan and Fred Zekman, whose prolific ideas were responsible for the unprecedented turnout. Earl Bell, Denver exchange manager for Warner Bros., was an enthusiastic spectator.

Former Manager Rejoins Pathe

Rejoining RKO Pathe, Inc., M. Clay Adams, recently released from the Navy, will handle customer contacts and production planning in the commercial department. Before enlisting in the Navy, where he was attached to the Navy Training Film and Motion Picture branch in Washington, Adams was with Pathe as manager of the west coast branch.

Mayor Fletcher Bowron of Los Angeles turned movie actor at RKO to be filmed while sponsoring and introducing "Report to the People," first of a monthly series of short features to educate the public in avoiding fatal traffic accidents.

The film, directed by Edward Dmytryk and photographed by cameraman Harry Wild, will be exhibited in all Los Angeles theatres.

Abrahams Directing Serial

With two weeks spent on location at Phoenix, Ariz., production continues on "Hop Harrigan," serial which Sam Katzman is producing for Columbia release. Derwin Abrahams directs.

Short Subject Review

Life With Baby (Very Good)

20th-Fox March of Time 20 mins.

The birth of over 10 million babies between Pearl Harbor and V-J day gives this latest March of Time a topic which should interest every parent and potential parent besides providing pure entertainment for other audiences. Subtitle might very well be "What Makes Baby Tick," for going directly into Yale University's Clinic of Child Development, the camera reports on the important findings of a study on little tots made by Dr. Arnold Gesell, whose revealing facts on the subject, if embraced correctly by intelligent parents, should enable them to avoid many worries and misconceptions about their own offspring. Gesell's findings recorded on thousands of feet of laboratory reels, show actual exercises given children at various ages; the youngsters' hilarious reactions to these exercises, and the efforts of child psychologists to determine the proper environment for America's toddling youth.

MILWAUKEE

The members of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Commission—the previewers of films before they can be shown to audiences in this area—are in the doghouse, at least in the eyes of the city purchasing agent, who refuses to okay a certain bill for payment. The amount is $95.52 and is said to cover fancy letterheads ordered by the Commission for its own use. The printing was ordered, it is reported, by William V. Geehan, former chairman of the commission, who is said to have joined the forces at Hollywood.

LaSalle, Ill., is the home of Alger Theatres & Affiliates, with 13 houses in Illinois. Gil Martin, city manager for the four theatres at Urbana-Champaign, the twin University of Illinois cities, says that selection of movies for college towns presents a problem different from the average. For instance, at one of the show houses in the Twin Cities, Westerns are demanded; in another section, it is necessary to cater to the entire family, with possibly a Western at the matinee on Saturday for the kids, but at the Co-Ed Theatre in Champaign on the Illinois U. campus, greater care must be taken in the selection of subjects, with a judicious mixture of mystery and other movies which would not take so well at the other three houses. Thus, a greater amount of editorial work on the part of a manager in a university town is necessary.

Milwaukee's Abby Theatre, in a residential section, is drawing crowds to see the story of Norway's liberation. As it is not known when the film will be shown in other sections of the city, the Scandinavian population can be seen trekking to the south side to view the havoc wrought by the Germans in Norway and what is being done to rehabilitate the country.

BUFFALO

Howard Minsky, after two years in the armed forces, has been appointed 20th-Fox branch manager, replacing Ira Cohen, who has been transferred to New York as special representative.

The Glen, Watkins Glenn, formerly owned and operated by G. H. Tooker, has been taken over by John Osborne, Jr.

The wife of Alec J. Herman, Warner branch manager, is dead.

Dalton Burgett of the Regent, Dunkirk, returned from Florida.

Joe Shure of the Fabian Albany office is ill.

Shea's Buffalo celebrated its 20th anniversary last week. The picture was 20th-Fox's "Colonel Effingham's Raid."

Theatre parties, to provide funds for the observance of "I Am An American Day," scheduled for May 19, were held in Shea houses here, including the Buffalo, Great Lakes and Hippodrome, under the auspices of the Erie County citizenship committee.

Seen along Film Row: Tom Rance, Cattaraugus; Effie Bettigole, Rivoli, Syracuse; Jim Ryan, Ithaca; Jim Cranides, Portville and Allegany.

OMAHA

Jerry F. Reeves, Omaha Theatre operator, is a patient in St. Joseph's Hospital.

"The Bells of St. Mary's," now entering its fifth week at the RKO-Brandeis Theatre, has set an all-time record for a continuous run for any picture to be shown here.

Jim Schlater, recently discharged from the Army, is back at his old post as assistant manager of the Orpheum.

Mrs. Jack Redmond, wife of the RKO Theatres' district manager, has rejoined her husband at their new home in Minneapolis.

John Connella, assistant manager at the RKO-Brandeis, was transferred to Minneapolis January 30. Mary Dorland, former secretary to Redmond, is helping with the book work temporarily.

Omaha will be one of three cities in the Tri-States Theatres Circuit territory featuring on-the-job-training for veterans who want to learn to become managers, assistants and treasurers. William Miskell, district manager, expects at least 10 in the first group of trainees here. The course will cover a year's time and at least two thousand hours.

GIFT FOR KOGOD. Retiring Chief Barker Fred S. Kogod of Washington Variety Club Tent No. 11 receives a watch presented by J. E. Fontaine, new Chief Barker for 1946, on behalf of the Club. Presentation was part of the ceremonies at the annual Induction of Officers' luncheon held recently at the Willard Hotel in Washington.

Ben Fish, Samuel Goldwyn representative, spent several days in the city.

R. D. Goldberg of the R. D. Goldberg Circuit is in Chicago on business.

George Bonacci, recently discharged from the Army, has rejoined United Artists as a shipper.

Lucille Sorenson, MGM stenographer, wrenched her back in a fall on the ice.

Jean Wildfang is a new Columbia employe. She will succeed Peggy Butell, booker's secretary, who moves up to secretary to Branch Manager Joe Jacobs.

William Miskell, Tri-States district manager, spent several days during the week at the circuit's Grand Island theatres.

Herbert Berman, Columbia salesman, is trying to buy a new auto. His old one was demolished by fire while he was driving outstate.

Joe Jacobs, Columbia branch manager, was in Des Moines for the 20th wedding anniversary celebration of the Mel Evidons. Evidon is Columbia chief there.

Wallace Johnson, former RKO salesman, is back from the Army. He is expected to rejoin RKO soon.

Mrs. Vivian Schertz, who has worked in a number of exchanges along the Row, is pinch-hitting at Columbia.

Robert Ballantyne, head of the theatre equipment firm bearing his name, is in Chicago.

George March, recently discharged from the Army and former exhibitor in the territory, is on the search for a couple of new theatres.

HARRISBURG

A legal advertisement in the city papers, discloses the fact that bonds amounting to $7500 have been called for redemption February 1 by the Locust Street Real Estate Company, for the Wilmer and Vincent Amusement Corporation. The bonds were issued February 2, 1925, under terms of a mortgage. The original six per cent value has been reduced to five per cent.

Crowds flocked to the Rio this week to see the re-issue of "My Favorite Blonde," the Bob Hope vehicle of several seasons ago. It was billed together with "Out of the Depths." Last week the Rio revived "Buck Benny Rides Again" successfully.

Personal items of the industry locally find Catherine Baker, former aide at the Senate, back on the staff; Evelyn Smith, student assistant at Loew's Regent, on a holiday in Canada and Jack Day, former W & V-Fabian veteran, going to Richmond, Va., as manager of the Lee there.

Although several letters have been received from servicemen who are protesting the return to civilian prices for servicemen at the Senate Theatre, the Harrisburg Telegraph, liberal evening daily, has published only one to date. The missive from the GI, who inquires if the theatre knows there are still several million men in uniform, appeared on the paper's editorial page, with no comment pro or con. The letter, incidentally, was not answered publicly by the theatre.

Sam Gilman, manager of Loew's Regent, has received a telegram from Cmdr. John D. Bulkeley, USN, who was a guest here in connection with the showing of "They Were Expendable," thanking Gilman for the pleasant visit.

According to a sign posted on a building in Steelton, the plot thereon has been purchased by Harry Chertcoff, and will be the site of a new theatre, replacing one of the present two houses in that borough, also owned by Chertcoff. The new plot adjoins the Standard Theatre, and it is understood a $150,000 theatre will be erected. Steelton voters last November polled Sunday movies into the town, only municipality in Dauphin county to approve the referendum.

At the Senate, "The Bells of St. Mary's" set an all-time record in both attendance and money, and Bob Sidman, manager, believes it might have been an all-time record for any theatre in the city. The show closed after three weeks, having played to 70,000. Harrisburg's city and suburban population is 88,000.

MONTREAL

On the return of the Canadian Grenadier Guards, a regiment steeped in tradition, the saluting base was under the marquee of the Capitol, and although it held no particular tieup with "Lost Weekend," the house gained much by the newspaper announcements. The request for a "roof" was made by the military authorities and not solicited by Consolidated.

Mike Poller, assistant general sales manager of RKO and Dave Prince, drive manager, are here this week from New York to discuss matters with Hatton Taylor, local manager, with regard to the Ned Depinet Drive. Also in town for conferences are Leo Devaney, Toronto manager, and H. H. MacArthur, from St. John, NB..

Gratton Taylor and Archie Cohen of Warners, are slated to remain in the Montreal office for the time being. Babe Coval declares things are not moving too quickly at present, but is optimistic over two films due here shortly.

The Province of Quebec Safety League has congratulated the Greater New York Safety Council on the results obtained through the use of one-minute safety shorts now being shown throughout the country. They expect to launch an intensified capaign here, with police helping in the promotion.

Work is going forward on the former Regent in Ottawa to convert the house to more modern style. The project will cost $10,000 and when finished, is expected to be dolled up to draw the carriage trade.

Eleven members of Famous Players became members of the "25 Year Club" at a banquet held recently in Toronto. Each was presented with his choice of a watch or $100 war bond. They also received membership badges and the promise of a months' holidays, come summer, in lieu of the usual two weeks. The event was held at the King Edward Hotel and voted a sucess by all.

The Toronto city council is after the movies and radio again. This time it passed a motion asking Ottawa to ban gangster and crime material and requested the Ontario Censor Board to crack down on movies dealing with lawlessness. There was no comment from the government, except to say that such matters were under observation constantly.

Cleveland movie men need not view the current newspaper difficulties with alarm, if the press there rises to the occasion as it did in Winnipeg. Compositors et al., are still out there, but the journals have hired returned war veterans who have proved successful in putting out a fair sheet. Theatre ads have not suffered in the slightest. As a matter of fact, exhibitors save money, since the Tribune and Free Press are combined until matters are settled. Furthermore, ad space is piling up.

Rumor has it that there will be a new house on Stanley Street with an entrance on Windsor. If the deal goes through, it will have to be one of the best to survive in the area where there are now a number of major cinemas. Plans for Odeon's ultra-ultra plant have been made known, and they shade any for new houses elsewhere in Canada.

Word that the Duke of Windsor may head a new Rank set-up engulfing Eagle Lion and Worldwide have been branded here as so much mularkey. The merger deal is definitely in the offing, according to gossip along Film Row.

CINCINNATI

Edna Osage was honored for 25 years service with the MGM office last week at a belated MGM Club Christmas Party at the Hotel Alms. She was presented with matching pin and earrings and a silver horseshoe filled with 25-cent pieces. Out-of-town exhibitors who called at the MGM office last week included Gene Custer, Charlestown, W. Va.; George Revelis, Washington Court House, Ohio; Milt Levine, Williamson, W. Va.; Miss Jean Ferguson, Columbus, Ohio; Orville Wood, Camden, Ohio, and Ray Hautz, Milford, Ohio.

Sgt. Robert Bicknell, former shipping clerk at Paramount, called at his old office after two years overseas.

Mrs. Arnold Brauer, formerly "Sis" Dall, assistant cashier at 20th-Fox's Cincinnati office, was a visitor from Aurora, Ind.

United Artists has announced a district meeting to be held at Detroit February 7, 8 and 9. Delegates from the Cincinnati office will include Harris Dudelson, branch manager; Jack Finberg, Lloyd Krause and Don Pasin, salesmen, and Gus Boudreau, office manager.

"The Bells of St. Mary's" was prescribed as treatment for a sick marriage by a Cincinnati judge recently. Judge Dennis J. Ryan, who tries contested divorce cases, related with satisfaction how the motion picture helped to reconcile a couple whom he had been unable to bring together by the usual methods of persuasion. Their only child was in a boarding school as a result of their separation. The similarity of their case in several respects to the situation developed in the movie occurred to Judge Ryan when the case was due for hearing, so he sent the couple, with the bailiff, Martin Huppmann, to see the picture at the Grand. The bailiff reported on his return that the husband invited his wife to dinner afterward and that they appeared to have been reconciled, Judge Ryan said.

Attending the convention of Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio at Columbus last week were E. M. Booth, MGM resident manager at Cincinnati; Joe Oulahan, Paramount's Cincinnati branch manager; J. J. Donohue, Paramount's New York division manager; Harry H. Goldstein, Paramount's Cleveland district manager; 20th-Fox's J. J. Grady, district manager and Al J. Bugie, branch manager, who were joined by William C. Gehring, former Cincinnati branch manager, now Central Division sales manager who was a guest speaker at a convention dinner; PRC's Harry Bugie, branch manager, and Sam Weiss, salesman and Republic's George Kirby, branch manager and Paul Krieger, salesman.

ALBANY

The Variety Club of Albany will tender a testimonial dinner to its retiring chief barker, H. L. Ripps, February 9 at the Colonie Country Club. Also to be honored are various members who have been promoted during the past year and who include Joseph Miller, PRC district manager; Clayton Eastman, United Artists; Holbrook Bissel, Columbia; Jack Armm, PRC; Edward Hochstim, Columbia; Harry Lowe, National Screen and George Jeffrey. The new chief barker, Charles A. Smakwitz and his crew, composed of Harry Lamont, Clayton Eastman, James P. Faughnan, Eugene Lowe, Harry Alexander, Dick Hayes, Joe Shure, Nate Winig, Arthur Newman and Neil Hellman, will be sworn in. Approximately 250 guests are expected to attend the affair which will be an informal dinner dance. Executives from New York have been invited and a large contingent are expected from Buffalo and Cleveland as well. The committee in charge includes Smakwitz, chairman; Winig, Alexander, C. J. Latta, Leo Rosen, Lamont, Lowe and Doc Kalison.

Charles Smakwitz

Sgt. Donald G. Schine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Schine of the Schine Circuit, Gloversville, was awarded the Medal of Merit last Wednesday in Washington for work in the Army Communications Service. A Yale student prior to the war, Sgt. Schine will return to the college following an Army discharge.

MEMPHIS

Ed Rowley, Jr., city manager at Little Rock for the Robb & Rowley Circuit, has been succeeded by Dave Callaghan, former city manager at Waxahachie, Texas. Rowley plans to go into production in Mexico City and Texas. Simultaneously, Harold Robb, Jr., just out of the armed services, has moved into Little Rock as part of the training he intends to give himself in theatrical management. Rowley and Robb were recent Memphis visitors, and were entertained at luncheon while here by L. W. McClintock, branch manager of Paramount.

Tom Donahue has returned from service and begun work as a salesman for Paramount, having been in the booking department for six years before he entered the Army.

Lt. Charles (Babe) Rounseville is on terminal leave from the Army and returned to work as a Paramount salesman.

L. W. McClintock, Paramount branch manager, went to Chicago January 22 for the Paramount sales conference there.

Memphis Variety Club is planning an experimental issue of its own publication, and if the first issue proves popular will make the publication a regular club feature. Herb Kohn, chief barker, has appointed Tom O'Ryan of Transitads, Inc., Ralph Prichard, theatrical printing and Tommy Baldridge, MGM salesman, as a committee to handle business arrangements. The editorial committee will be composed of Harry Martin and Mike McGee of the Commercial Appeal and Bob Johnson of the Press-Scimitar.

P. H. Pierce, veteran Memphis theatrical man, has acquired the Normal Theatre in Memphis, trading the Von Theatre at Hernando, Miss. to John Mohrstadt of Hayti, Mo., for the Normal. Mohrstadt operates a chain of mid-south houses.

George Gaughan has been appointed office manager of the Paramount Memphis branch. Before entering service he was with the Dallas office.

Lloyd T. Binford, chairman of the Memphis Board of Motion Picture Censors, failed to arrive for a meeting of women here last week at which he was supposed to speak. He had told the women that he would speak provided the press was excluded. The Associated Press and the Memphis newspapers had planned to cover the meeting. The women had gathered to hear the censor. His excuse was that an unexpected business visitor had arrived in town. Binford, however, has given his okay for the showing here of "Scarlet Sister." It will show at the Malco. "The Outlaw," also has been given the Binford okay and it will show at Loew's State.

They Should Know

The Alcoholics Anonymous Club of Omaha gathered in judgment at the opening of "The Lost Weekend" at the Paramount Theatre recently. While they liked the picture, typical reaction was that Don Birnam, played by Ray Milland, was an amateur compared to some of the Club's own members.

PITTSBURGH

Mrs. Minnie Nixon, cashier for Paramount for the past 18 years, has resigned to devote her entire time to home duties. Her husband has just received his discharge from the Army after several years service overseas. She has been succeeded by Ida Wolf, formerly bookers' stenographer.

Saul I. Perilman has returned from military service and resumed his former position as sales representative for the local Monogram exchange. Robert Petrie, recently discharged by the Navy after three years service, has also resumed his former position with National Screen Service.

William Mayer, aged 76, founder and publisher of the Mayer Press, died suddenly in his office last week. Until recent years he was publisher of a local weekly paper, the Pittsburgh Motion Picture Bulletin, and was well known in this territory.

James Ley, booker for Universal before entering service, has received his discharge and is resuming his former duties with that company.

Byron D. ("Buck") Stoner, recently promoted to district manager on the Coast for 20th Century-Fox, who before joining the latter organization was branch manager for MGM here, and later buyer for Pennsylvania Enterprises, Inc., booking combine which merged with Cooperative Theatres, Inc., was a welcome visitor to his old stamping ground this week.

C. E. Peppiatt, new 20th-Fox district manager, was introduced to over 100 exhibitors at a company luncheon last week at the William Penn Hotel. A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern sales manager, acted as host at the lunch, attended by branch managers and salesmen from the 20th-Fox organization.

WASHINGTON

Jimmy Stewart, former air force colonel, and now back to his original status of movie star, was a visitor in Washington recently, doing his part for the March of Dimes Drive. In a sidewalk broadcast in front of Loew's Capitol, Jimmy spoke before hundreds of admiring fans.

John J. Payette, general zone manager of Warners, is back at his desk following a siege of flu which necessitated hospitalization.

Bob Folliard, RKO district manager, was a recent visitor at the local exchange.

New switchboard operator at Universal is Estelle Huddleston.

Sid Hoffman, former manager of the Kennedy, and recently discharged from the Navy, announced his home-coming in an original manner in the "Depotscope," a bulletin published by the U. S. Naval Mine Depot, Yorktown, Va.

Sid Zins, Columbia publicist, has been a frequet visitor at Warners conferring with Frank La Falce and Bill Ewing on "Kiss and Tell" and "Tars and Spars."

Josephine Neil, billing clerk at 20th-Fox, was married to William Henry Deavers, Jr.

C. E. Peppiatt, new district manager at 20th-Fox, with headquarters in Philadelphia, was a recent Washington visitor.

J. B. Brecheen, RKO branch manager, visited Richmond and Baltimore this week, and Doug Beck, exploiteer, made a trip to Richmond.

Wm. C. Ewing, assistant director of advertising and publicity at Warners, reports that daughter, Beverly, a freshman at Williamsport-Dickinson Junior College, paid her parents a surprise visit during exam week.

Edith Weber of 20th-Fox, took her winter vacation at Lake Placid.

Frank Fowler, general manager of the Wilder Circuit in Norfolk, was at RKO for a session of booking. Leon Bamberger, sales promotion manager of RKO, was also a visitor at the exchange.

Jack Kohler, former booker at RKO, has been discharged from service and is back at his old job.

Theo Shupe, secretary to A. J. Brylawski, Warner real estate dept., will be married to Lee Suit on February 8.

DENVER

A burly, six-foot 200-pound man, who later said he was drunk, wandered into the apartment of Ed Mapel, over the Gem Theatre which he owns, one night last week. Mrs. Mapel had gone to the apartment to dress for dinner and the man, a Negro, knocked her down and started beating her, telling her if she yelled for help he would kill her. She yelled, however, and Mapel came running, grappled with the intruder, and the three rolled down the stairs to the street, where Mapel held on until the police arrived. In the roll down the stairs, Mapel broke his right leg in two places, at the knee and ankle. Mr. and Mrs. Mapel were taken to the hospital, where an operation was necessary on his leg, due to bone splinters that were discovered by x-ray. Mrs. Mapel incurred bruises in the fall. Mapel, aside from operating the Gem, is also president of the Denver City Council.

The Central City Play Festival will reopen this year after being shut down because of the war, gasoline and tire shortages. The affair will again become an annual affair each summer and will utilize the 66-year-old opera house at Central City, 45 miles west of Denver. The offering this year will be two operas, according to announcement by Rick Ricketson, president of Fox Intermountain Theatres, as well as president of the Central City Opera House Association. "Abduction from the Seraglio" and "La Traviata" will be offered, with the festival running three weeks. Frank St. Leger, assistant to Edward Johnson, managing director of the Metropolitan Opera, will return as director and producer. St. Leger directed four of the Central City productions in the period from the opening in 1932 to 1941.

Ted Halmi has moved his Denver Advertising Co., which produces all kinds of display material for theatres and other businesses, to 1456 Welton.

Mike Roth, former manager of the Broadway, died at Mercy Hospital from pneumonia, one of the complications arising from a gall bladder operation. Mike came here from Kansas City and remodeled and reopened the Broadway, and later resigned to enter the popcorn business. He is survived by his widow Sara. Funeral and burial were in New York.

Joe Emerson, former salesman for RKO, is expected to be discharged from the Army this week.

Mike Cramer, manager; Bill Prass, exploitation and Al Brandon, have just returned from an MGM sales meeting in New York. Now on their way to similar conferences, are James Micheletti and Al Hoffman, salesmen.

Francis Bateman, western district manager of Republic, is in Denver conferring with Gene Gerbase, manager.

Robert Hill, manager, is really dolling up the Columbia exchange for the 25th anniversary of the company this year. It is one of the finest, if not the finest, decoration jobs this writer has seen.

Sgt. Don Tweedale, Columbia shipper, is being discharged from the Army and Sgt. Arthur Shooker, son of Barney Shooker, Columbia salesman, has also been discharged.

Owner C. U. Yaeger has moved Jim Reser, Pioneer manager to the Jewel. Dick Dekker, Jewel manager, goes to the Gothic and Henry Herzog moves from the Gothic to the Pioneer.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Curtis of the Teepee, Thermopolis, Wyo., have gone to California for a vacation.

L. N. Scheideggar, owner of the building, has taken over the Star at Seibert, Colo., from Fred Flannagan. Flannagan operated the theatre spasmodically, but the merchants wanted it in steady operation, so they have planned to back the theatre, realizing its drawing power for customers.

Sam Milner, recently with Universal in Los Angeles, has been named PRC manager in Denver and Salt Lake City. Milner was also former manager for Universal here and in Salt Lake City. He succeeds Ben de Bici, who returns to Los Angeles and his former job in the playdate department of the western division of PRC.

Out-of-town exhibitors seen on the Row included C. J. Brase, Holyoke, Colo.; Leonard Beckman, Bayard, Neb.; Kenneth Powell, Wray, Colo.; Mike Joseph, San Luis, Colo.; Lynn Zorn, Julesburg, Colo. and Wallace J. Leary, Creede, Colo.

Alvin Hendricks has been appointed manager of the Warner Chief, Colorado Springs, having returned to the company from Army service. Prior to entering service he had managed the Varsity, Lincoln, Neb.

VANCOUVER

The Viking Theatre, operated for the past 15 years by the Kieffer Circuit, has been taken over as a community enterprise by the Board of Trade at Viking, Alberta. The theatre will be put into immediate operation, the Calgary Film Board reports.

Vancouver film grosses have leveled off after the bumper holidays, but the average is still healthy. Showing at the city's first runs are "Lost Week-end," Capitol; "Johnny Angel," Orpheum; "Getting Gerties Garter," Plaza; "My Son, the Hero," Beacon; "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," Dominion; "Danger Signal," Strand; "Madonna of the Seven Moons," Vogue.

Famous Players is reported working on a deal for the purchase of the block housing the Broadway Theatre, stores and offices, from the Cunningham Drug Co. of Vancouver at a reported price of $125,000. No immediate changes are contemplated, Frank Gow, Famous Players head said. The house has been operated in partnership with Gow for several years and is one of Vancouver's best surburbans.

Postwar plans of local theatres call for a decrease in giveaways. Exhibitors cannot foresee the necessity of free gifts to patrons in the future, and say that with the high type of films being released, patrons will not expect any premiums.

The number of independent theatres in British Columbia has been diminishing to a marked extent during the past few years because of the buying activities of Famous Players and Odeon Theatres. There are good indications that the buying epidemic is about over and that new construction will prevail, at least insofar as the big circuits are concerned. Local exhibitors are likely to continue taking over smaller houses, distributors believe.

Art Greyburn, former head of the Independent Exhibitors of British Columbia, is now in the real estate business across from Vancouver Film Row.

The two major circuits are planning construction of new theatres in Victoria with the release of building materials by the Government. Two theatres are scheduled for immediate construction. Famous Players have four and Odeon three theatres in Victoria now.

The sick list includes Mrs. J. Patterson, wife of the 20th-Fox manager, in a hospital for a throat operation; Marguerite Johnstone, Paramount, ill with the flu; Irene Horner, Famous Players booking department, very ill with lung trouble; Mimi Steen, RKO, in St. Paul's Hospital and Al Jenkins, Plaza manager, bedded with the flu.

Theatremen in Canada have been showing some concern over an epidemic of sickness which has become pronounced in different parts of the Dominion, but as yet, no action has been taken by medical authorities regarding the operation or closing of theatres. Some hospitals have been closed to visitors in a move to curb the spread of influenza.

Local 71-B of the IATSE film exchange union, elected the following officers for 1946: Rodney McArthur, Regal Films, president; Marvin Proudlock, Warners, vice-president; Charles Backus, United Artists, secretary-treasurer; John Alliston, Monogram business agent and Doreen Fitzpatrick, Columbia, re-

Columbia Chiefs Set Plans for Bigger Future As Company Marks Anniversary

Anniversary celebrations invariably throw the spotlight on the past, and while it is customary upon such occasions to wish "many happy returns" or "many more anniversaries," it is to the past that people customarily look in assaying the future of the individual, organization or business concern which happens to be the object of the celebration.

Thus, the signalizing, this year, of a Silver (or twenty-fifth) Anniversary by Columbia Pictures inevitably brings to the fore a discussion of such notable things in the company's past as the industry-shaking effect of such pictures from the Columbia Hollywood plant as "It Happened One Night," "One Night of Love," "The Awful Truth," "Lost Horizon," "Here Comes Mr. Jordan," and the more recent "A Song to Remember." For if there are in the whole cavalcade of pictures made in the past another half-dozen productions which so vitally influenced the whole trend of popular entertainment via the screen, there are not many in the industry who can call them to mind even after very diligent search of the record from "Judith of Bethulia" to the most recent trade show in Hollywood, New York, or points North, South, East and West about the country.

The present Columbia Pictures organization, which is busily lining up its manpower in its production and distribution branches to accomplish a big year in celebration of the Silver Anniversary during 1946, entered the field via a very modest, if not a very precarious, beginning.

$250 Plus Courage

The present company had its real beginning late in 1920, when Harry and Jack Cohn decided that they had learned enough about film business after years of working for the old Universal company to strike out on their own. They made the first move in that direction by pooling their savings—the amassed resources totaling up to a handsome $250 in cash. With that and lots of ambition, to say nothing of a little courage, they started their own company just a quarter-century ago. In the beginning they contracted to release some two-reel comedies, by arranging with a Hollywood producer to make them a series of "quality" shorts at the then "big-budget" figures of $10,000 for each two-reeler.

The first short to come eastward was nothing to give the Cohn boys ideas that they were really on their way to the tops and the big money as producer-distributors. As a matter of fact it was a turkey that got colder with each second of running time. Investigation showed that the producer instead of spending $10,000 on the subjects was bringing them in for about $2,000—which left him a pretty nice margin according to any financier's manner of reckoning. The upshot was that Harry Cohn decided to become the producer of the shorts and left for California to take over the job. He made one short. Jack, who was head of distribution under the arrangement, sold it quickly to provide money for the second. Thus was started that very succsesful series that became known as the Hall Room Boys comedies.

At the end of the first year, the Cohn boys, tingling with success, added a partner, Joe Brandt, and named their firm "The CBC Film Sales Corporation." After a few years of making shorts, the CBC decided to make a feature picture.

Such a venture would cost more money than CBC could lay its hands on at the moment, especially as the company wished to continue making its very acceptable shorts at the same time. The boys gathered together five additional partners, and produced a feature picture for $20,000. When completed, the picture looked so good that a major releasing organization offered to buy it outright for $65,000.

$6,500 Bid Refused

The answer was a decisive "NO!" by the Cohns, who figured that if the film was worth that much to another company, it was worth more to them in the states' rights market.

On the strength of that initial venture, CBC sold five additional, though as yet unborn, features on the states' rights market. This really startled the quintette of new investors, which had planned to take a quick profit on the one feature and run. The Fretful Five finally balked at going along and withdrew their investments and their profits.

At the time their departure left the Cohns in a predicament. They were faced with the task of having to raise new capital with which to produce their program of five feature pictures. It was a tough problem—but they figured it out. They figured it out well too: when the Cohns started production on their second feature they had just $5,000 in the bank. When they finished the picture, they still had $5,000 in the bank.

This sounds like financial magic. As a matter of fact it was something far more practical. It was a combination of untiring effort, the treasuring of every penny, the use of every device by which the expenditure of funds could be postponed or their turnover multiplied. But above all, it represented a willingness to devote unending time and energy toward making every dollar an active worker toward this goal.

A new name now was needed that was more in keeping with the dignity of a company that was making and selling successful feature pictures. The partners felt that "CBC" sounded too much like "corned beef and cabbage." Various names were considered, and finally "Columbia" was chosen.

Columbia Pictures Corporation came to life on the single stage studio on Gower Street in Hollywood that has since become a complete picture-making plant.

New Angle for Star System

By the middle twenties, the company unable to afford a contract list of top-stars, secured some of the most important names in the business on one-picture deals.

The familiar opinion that Columbia was responsible for Clark Gable's popularity at the box-office, is denied by Harry Cohn. He maintains that Columbia was just fortunate enough to have a script that fitted Gable perfectly—and that if Metro had owned the script of "It Happened One Night" the same result would have been accomplished.

In 1926 Columbia opened its first four wholly-owned film exchanges. Gradually these branches replaced the franchise holders in the company's sales organization.

Foreign sales began to take on more and more importance, and Columbia kept in step with the times. Its first fling into the foreign market was in 1923 when it sold one picture to an Australian franchise holder. In 1946 Columbia International can point to 75 sales offices in countries throughout the world.

Broadway runs for independent pictures were a rarity in the twenties, but Columbia began to break through. One of the company's more ambitious efforts, "Blood Ship," was booked into New York's Roxy Theatre—then the top showcase of the country—and the Cohns knew they had "arrived" in the big time.

It was as a direct result of the switch from silent to talking pictures—which was made with dispatch—that Columbia ceased to be a privately owned company. The corporate structure of the firm was reorganized, and shares in the company were listed on the Stock Exchange.

In 1932 Joe Brandt decided to retire, and Harry Cohn became president of Columbia. Jack Cohn moved up from treasurer to vice-president.

Columbia built its own film laboratory on the lot to permit studio supervision of all prints. The first studio to establish this costly method of print distribution, Columbia has unswervingly continued to adhere to it.

When the great Radio City Music Hall opened its doors to a movie policy in 1933, the honor of being the first feature picture on the mammoth screen went to a Columbia picture.

Columbia has blazed trails and started cycles. In 1928 the company released the first Mickey Mouse cartoon, and followed it up with the first of the famous Silly Symphonies.

The year 1934 revealed "It Happened One Night," a resounding and now immortal hit, which inspired an entirely new type of romantic Special films were shown in Vancouver Theatres January 31 by the Lions Club in a campaign to help feed needy European children. Some 20,000 children paid for admission with cans of food and the film rentals were split between the Club and theatres with staffs donating their services. Newspapers also donated advertising space for the campaign.

Frank Kershaw, recently resigned as president of General Theatre Supply Co. and who was formerly Famous Players district manager in British Columbia, passed through this city enroute to Victoria where he will go into business for himself. He will be in the popcorn and candy business.

Willard Adamson, PRC manager, reports that "The Enchanted Forest" is breaking records at the York, Victoria, holding for a second week. It is paired with "Danny Boy," another PRC film.

NEW YORK

The Pioneer Theatre, Brooklyn, formerly owned and operated by Mrs. Molly Goldberg, has been sold to the Jacob Leff-M. Shane interests.

The annual meeting of the Motion Picture Bookers took place last week, with Oscar Lager of the Charles Moses Circuit elected president for 1946. Over 200 attended the meeting at the Tavern-On-The-Green, New York, with E. K. O'Shea, MGM eastern sales manager, acting as master of ceremonies.

Ray Moon of 20th-Fox is the father of an eight-pound boy.

Robert Ellsworth of MGM's New York exchange celebrated his 31st anniversary with the company this week. He joined Metro Films in 1915 as a film inspector.

Howard Totten, former booker, buyer and projectionist for the Port Jefferson, Port Jefferson, Long Island, for 14 years, has been discharged from the Seabees after 27 months service. He does not plan to go back to the theatre.

Mrs. Al Herman, wife of Warners' Buffalo branch manager, died last week. The father of Mrs. Joe Hummel also died during the week and Mrs. Hummel flew from Paris for the funeral and then flew back again.

Maurice Broskie, operator of the State, West Orange, N. J., has been home ill for three weeks.

Joseph and William De Sabato, sons of Anthony De Sabato, operator of the Park, South Plainsfield, New Jersey, are both back from European Army service.

Charles Whittner, auditor in the MGM New York exchange, is at the Physicians Hospital, Jackson Heights, recovering from a hernia operation.

John Dacey, veteran RKO exchange salesman, is ill at home. He contemplates an operation in the near future to relieve his trouble.

Nat Lax, advertising-production manager of United Artists, is back after week's illness.

Bill Frankel, discharged from the Army, will return as an MGM booker in a few weeks.

Harry Gittelson of RKO has returned to New York after completing a tour with Dave Prince in the Rocky Mountains and West Coast districts.

Max Polinsky, after returning from Army service in Africa and Italy without a scratch, fell last week while running for a bus and broke a bone in his kneecap and will be laid up for two months. He's an MGM assistant booker.

Six Columbia employes were released from service last week. They are Theodore Rosen, home-office print department; Seymour Roman, publicity; Saul Kolosky, traveling auditor; Sidney Katz, publicity; George M. Schweig, foreign and Daniel Turansky, home office.

Terry Turner of RKO has left the coast enroute to New York via stopovers in the Seattle, Portland, Minneapolis, Chicago and Cincinnati exchanges.

INDIANAPOLIS

George Pappas, manager of the Circle Theatre, has been judged state winner of the theatre bond sales contest for exhibitors sponsored by the War Activities Committee of the industry, because his war bond premiere during the last drive resulted in sales of $1,953,300 in E Bonds. He will represent Indiana in the national contest with an all-expense trip to London by air as a prize. Five other winners in the contest will accompany him.

George Pappas

An Indianapolis veteran has just won a Hollywood contract. He is John Fontaine, son of Mrs. Violet Ray, of Indianapolis. According to word received by Mrs. Ray, Fontaine last week passed his final screen test under the auspices of David Selznick and signed his first contract, details of which were withheld.

Thirty-four Indianapolis theatres participated in the motion picture "March of Dimes" drive which opened Monday and extended through January 31, Kenneth Collins, state chairman for the drive announced Friday. Collections for the war on infantile paralysis were taken in more than 258 theatres throughout Indiana, according to Collins.

Earl Cunningham, general manager of Fountain Square Theatres, has returned from a trip to New York.

Vernon Elmer, formerly head shipper at Universal exchange here, has accepted a position in the booking department of the Universal exchange in Chicago.

Rennald V. Graver, Monogram auditor, is at the local exchange on business.

Joe Neger, Milwaukee manager of 20th-Fox exchange, spent the weekend in Indianapolis visiting his family.

Irving Sochin, 20th-Fox office and sales manager, has been called to the New York office of the company on business.

CLEVELAND

Sam Galanty, Columbia district manager, spent several days here conferring on policies covering the company's 25th silver anniversary with local Branch Manager Lester Zucker and Cincinnati Branch Manager Alan Moritz.

A Republic district meeting was held here last week with Eddie Walton, assistant to President James R. Grainger, presiding. The meeting was attended by District Manager Sam Sepowlin and Branch Managers I. Pollard, Detroit; George H. Kirby, Cincinnati; William Feld, Pittsburgh and Sam P. Gorrel, Cleveland.

Howard Burkhardt is making an appeal for public support of the March of Dimes with a triple-decked stand containing 128 quart jars, placed on the sidewalk in front of Loew's State during the daytime and moves into the theatre lobby at night, along with a special police guard. Each bottle bears the name of a girl or boy. Passersby are tempted to drop coins into the jars tagged with their favorite names. Manager Burkhardt is in charge of the collection at the Arena, where the Ice Follies is playing to packed houses and also of between 800 and 900 collection boxes placed all over town.

Gertrude L. Tracy, manager of Loew's Ohio, returned to her job on Sunday following a month's illness.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit and Mrs. Horwitz, left Tuesday to spend a couple of weeks in Hot Springs, Ark.

I. J. Schmertz, 20th Century-Fox branch manager, returned from the ITO convention in Chicago just in time to leave again for a Florida vacation. Mrs. Schmertz accompanied him.

Frank and Roy Gross have formed the Frankroy Company to operate the Bedford and Stillwell theatres in Bedford, which they took over last week from Mrs. Lena Stillwell. Louis Swee, former manager of the Knickerbocker, has been made general manager in charge of the two houses. Mrs. Stillwell, who has announced her intentions to retire, has been an active exhibitor for the past 31 years. Her immediate plans are for a trip to Florida.

Ray Essick, younger son of P. E. Essick of the Scoville, Essick and Reif Circuit, is expected home momentarily from his service in the Navy. His brother, Jack, beat him home by only a few weeks.

Henry Hellriegel, theatre building contractor, completed his contract withe the Army last week after having covered such places as the Philippines, Yokohama and Tokyo. Now he is ready to take up his former job of administering to needy theatres.

Navy Lt. Jimmy Kalafat, whose father is president of the Associated Circuit, tied his boat up in Oakland, Calif. last week and will soon be a Film Row regular again.

Urban Anderson has resigned as manager of the Knickerbocker Theatre, a position he has occupied only since his Army discharge a few months ago. He will henceforth manage the Ohio and State theatres, Uhrichsville, and the Lincoln Theatre, Dennison, for the owner, Irving Gandell.

Charles Rice has been appointed manager of the Jennings Theatre. He succeeds Fred Dzik, who has moved out of exhibition and into distribution, having joined the 20th-Fox office force.

Film Classics' "Wildfire" struck gold over in Toledo. Bob Snyder, Film Classics' sales representative, reports that the picture, booked for one week, was held over for an extended engagement.

Nelson Jacobs enters the exhibition horizon as the new manager of the Union Square Theatre. He succeeds Louis Swee, now managing the Bedford theatres, recently acquired by Frank and Roy Gross.

FIRST CONTRIBUTION. Robert Murray, infantile paralysis victim, is shown making the first contribution to the March of Dimes drive in the Big Heart collection box in the lobby of Century's Valley Stream Theatre, Valley Stream, L. I. The display was designed and erected by Manager Ben Mindlin.

ST. LOUIS

Maury Orr, western division manager of United Artists and "Ching" Allen, new Prairie district manager, are spending a few days conferring with Bernard McCarthy, St. Louis branch manager. Orr took time out for a quick trip to Chicago.

Joseph C. Ansell, vice-president of Ansell Brothers Theatres, with Philip Kopitsky, vice-president of the Metropolitan Loan and Investment Company, head a group seeking to purchase controlling interest in the State Bank and Trust Company of Wellston, St. Louis County, by buying 5380 shares of the bank's 6000 outstanding shares from present owners at about $80 a share. Ansell is president of the Metropolitan Loan & Investment Company.

Unemployment in the St. Louis labor market area will total 58,400 by April 15 unless reconversion is speeded up, Paul P. Connole, manager of the United States Employment Service here has warned. The latest available statistics, as of December 15, placed the unemployment figure here at 56,500, and increase of 5900 over the previous month.

The numerous strikes are not having too serious effect on the box-office receipts of the motion picture theatres of St. Louis and St. Louis County. However, should the industrial warfare be too long drawn out, there is certain to be a resultant serious slump in attendance, especially in the neighborhood and suburban theatres.

Louis J. Menges, owner of the Esquire and Roxy Theatres, East St. Louis, which are operated by the Frisina Amusement Company and Tommy Tobin, has filed for the Democratic nomination for State Senator from the 49th District of Illinois. He is a former member of the Senate.

Charles "Chuck" Conrad is the new southern Illinois salesman for Monogram. He formerly was with Monogram in Pittsburgh.

Ben Mariner, recently released from service with the U. S. Marine Corps, has been named southern Illinois salesman for United Artists. Mariner, who formerly was with United Artists in Denver, was a tank commander with the Marines with the rank of staff sergeant.

Arthur Greenblood, eastern sales manager for Monogram arrived in St. Louis January 25 and left January 30 for Pittsburgh. Barney Rosenthal, Monogram manager, had some good news for him on his arrival. He has just closed a deal with the important Frisina Circuit with houses in southern Illinois, eastern Missouri and southeastern Iowa.

The Frisina Circuit plans to reopen the Gem Theatre in Fulton, Mo., early in February. The 300-seat house has been closed for about three years. The circuit also operates the Fulton, a 700-seater in Fulton, in affiliation with Sol Bank.

Herb Washburn, manager of National Screen was out in the territory this week.

C. D. Hill, Columbia manager, made a flying trip to Mattoon, Ill. and then down to Herrin, Ill., to confer with John Marlow, who has houses in Herrin and Murphysboro, Ill.

Maurice Schweitzer, Paramount's resident manager; Joe B. Koenig, office manager, and all of the members of the St. Louis sales staff, have returned from the company's western district sales conference held in Denver, Colo.

"Bells of St. Mary's" will have its St. Louis premiere at Fanchon & Marco's Ambassador February 6th for an indefinite run, the cash customers to decide the length.

Harry C. Arthur, Jr., general manager of Fanchon & Marco, is due back in St. Louis within the next several days.

Pat Byrnes, RKO-Radio salesman, has been out in the territory lining up dates for "Bells of St. Mary's."

Seen along Film Row were Tommy Tobin of East St. Louis, Ill.; Mrs. Harry Steinberg, Madison, Ill.; Herman Tanner, Vandalia, Ill. and Jimmy Frisina, Springfield and Taylorville, Ill.

A wave of illness has hit the local 20th Century-Fox office. Herman Buechel, head of the shipping department, is bedded down at home, while Rose Marie Chester, secretary to B. B. Reingold, manager, is also at home ill and Dick Klagas, in charge of accessories, is convalescing at St. Luke's Hospital following an operation. Joe Feld, assistant manager, has returned to his desk following a lengthy siege of neuritis.

Morrie Edgar, formerly in the Kansas City territory, is the new eastern Missouri salesman for 20th Century-Fox.

Ed Bishop, Warner salesman, is bedded at home with an attack of the flu. Probably will be out another week.

Tilden Dixon of the Dixon & Adams Circuit, Crystal City, Mo., left Phoenix, Ariz., January 25th for St. Louis. He has been spending several months in the southwest visiting with his wife and son who are there for their health.

TORONTO

President Paul Nathanson of Odeon Theatres of Canada Limited, returned to Canada from his prescribed rest in California, but continued to a winter health resort in Quebec Province before taking up business matters in Toronto for the conference with John Davis of London, representing J. Arthur Rank, British film tycoon. The Toronto meeting, which will deal with Canadian post-war developments, is expected to bring the whole board of directors together to pass upon the circuit's expansion program for an early start.

The wind-up meeting at the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, of the Motion Picture Section, National War Finance Committee, was featured by the presentation of a painted plaque, based with plywood from a Mosquito bomber, by Rt. Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Finance, in behalf of the Canadian people, to J. J. Fitzgibbons, chairman of the section, in appreciation of the war work of the Canadian film industry. Ilsley was presented with a 30-minute 16-mm. film containing excerpts from all the bond-drive films donated by the industry during the two world wars. To continue the cooperative activities in support of government programs, the Canadian Motion Picture War Services Committee, comprising all theatres in Canada, have been re-organized as a National Services Committee, it was announced.

from New York, President J. J. Fitzgibbons of Famous Players Canadian Corp., was unable to officiate as chairman at the second annual banquet of the 25-Year Club for veteran employes in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto. The presentation of badges, certificates and gifts, either gold watches or $100 Victory Bonds, to 12 of the eastern Canadian club candidates, was made by Vice-President R. W. Bolstad. Twelve other new members will be initiated at subsequent functions in the Canadian west. Membership also brings an annual vacation of four weeks with pay instead of the usual two weeks. One year ago the club was launched with 37 charter members, two of whom have since died.

Announcement is made in Toronto that Nicholas Napoli, president of Artkino Pictures, New York, will visit Toronto following his trip to Moscow where he is arranging North American rights for "Robinson Crusoe," a three-dimensional feature in multicolor under a new Russian process. The picture will be released in the Dominion by Artkino Pictures (Canada) Limited, of which Leo Clavir is sales manager.

Theatremen of Toronto are intrigued by the absence of a marquee on the newly-reopened Victoria Theatre of the Famous Players chain. Because of steel shortage, no canopy was erected and the wide entrance is topped by a flat illuminated sign with interchangeable letters. Sign announcements can be seen from the immediate sidewalk, as well as from across the street, and exhibitors say this is the way it should be.

The word from Famous Players head-office in Toronto is that the sale of gift-books of admission tickets at Christmas was double the turnover of the previous year. Each year since 1935 when the idea was inaugurated by the late N. L. Nathanson, there has been a gradual increase in sales, with a big jump this time perhaps partly due to goods shortages.

After many months of delay, Warner Distributing Co. has moved its Canadian head-office and Toronto branch to the company's own new building, 70 Carlton Street, Toronto, from the third floor of 21 Dundas Square, where it had been located for years.

Finley McRae, veteran member of the Ottawa City Board of Control, has relinquished the presidency of the Ottawa branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society after serving in that role throughout the war. He is administrator of the H. M. Brouse theatre estate.

COLUMBUS

Two full shows are now scheduled for Leo Yassenoff's Academy Theatres. Box offices open at 6:30, with first show beginning at 6:45. Box office sales continue to 10 p.m. Academy Theatres include the Arlington, Westmont, Beechwold, Cleve, Southland and Boulevard.

A $10,000 program of repairs and alterations to the New Linden Theatre, recently damaged by fire, is now under way. Robert J. Pullin, son of W. C. Pullin, Sr., operator of the suburban house, was recently granted a permit for that amount by the city building department. F. & Y. Building Service will make the alterations.

Chillicothe may soon have a new radio station. The Chillicothe Broadcasting Co. has petitioned the Federal Communications Commission for permission to operate a station with 100 watts power and unlimited hours.

James Robson, shipfitter 1/c, Westerville, was chosen as a typical American sailor to appear in the British semi-documentary film, "The Way We Live."

Eleanor Parker, screen actress born in Cedarville, Ohio, was married two weeks ago in Las Vegas, Nev., to Bert Friedlob, distillery executive.

Mrs. Ethel Purcell, wife of Charles "Chuck" Purcell, Loew's Ohio electrician, died last week and was buried at Union Cemetery here. Mrs. Purcell was a member of the theatrical profession before her marriage.

Columbia Pictures Lining Up Imposing Schedule of Important Releases for Anniversary Year

Color Prominent in Stars as Well as Photography of Films Set for Celebration Program

TUNEFUL. There's music and sprightly dancing (set off by the typical Hollywood sparkle of glittering settings) in the musical offering, "Tars and Spars," which is included in the five early Anniversary offerings from Columbia.

OLD WEST. Romance of the old west will be brought to the screen in a new and ambitious Technicolor production set by Columbia for the Anniversary year. This is "Renegades," in which Evelyn Keyes and Willard Parker play the starring roles.

SUSPENSE. Pat O'Brien, that consumate actor—famed and feared in Hollywood because of his scene-stealing abilities—will star in a punchy drama that is among the Columbia Anniversary shows. It's titled "Perilous Holiday."

The imposing list of releases which Columbia has set for definite delivery during the first six months of 1946 as standard-bearers for the company's Silver Anniversary Year celebration is headed by "Gilda." There is reason for a natural inclination to put "Gilda" at the top of the group of five productions named by Columbia for the first half of its anniversary year. First, it stars Columbia's most glamorous feminine actress and one of the top-ranking personalities of the screen—Rita Hayworth. The other four pictures are: "Stars and Spars," "The Bandit of Sherwood Forest," "Pardon My Past," "Renegades" and "Perilous Holiday."

"Gilda" has been classified by Hollywood as a "decidedly different" sort of picture for Miss Hayworth, whose co-star is the popular Glenn Ford, with Joseph Calleia and George Macready in principal featured roles. Charles Vidor (whose recent record is one of a steady procession of big "money pictures") directed "Gilda," which will bring Miss Hayworth to the screen as a dramatic actress in a highly emotional role after four years of spectacular success as a star of top-flight musicals. This story (naturally) provides for Miss Hayworth to sing and dance in the course of its dramatic procession. "Renegades," a Technicolor epic of the old comedy. "One Night of Love" in the same year brought grand opera to the screen and made good music something the masses could appreciate.

With "The Awful Truth," Columbia led the way in sophisticated screwball farce, and with "Lost Horizon" and "Here Comes Mr. Jordan" proved that fantasy had a definite appeal.

"Cover Girl" ushered in an entirely new variety of Technicolor musical, and made Rita Hayworth one of the top box-office draws in motion pictures. More recently, "A Song to Remember," a musical biography of Chopin in Technicolor, started a vogue for films featuring classical music.

At 25, Columbia is young and vigorous and plans newer and better things. One of the many innovations on the Columbia agenda is the Technicolor musical, "The Jolson Story," This will mark the first time a great American theatrical personality has been immortalized during his lifetime.

Columbia today, as one of the foremost factors wherever motion pitcures are shown, in the opinion of Harry and Jack Cohn, is truly a tribute to its manpower. Many of the executives who now guide Columbia's destinies have risen from the ranks by displaying invaluable judgment, administrative ability and creative talent

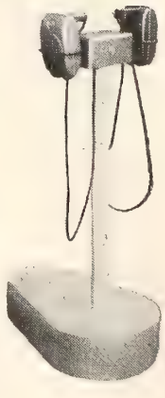
COMPREHENSIVE DRIVE-IN THEATRE PLANNING FACILITIES



RCA FIXED SPEAKER SYSTEMS

—lifelike tone reproduction, built for uniform audience coverage over wide areas—for every size drive-in theatre.

RCA NEW-TYPE IN-CAR SPEAKERS

—the ideal drive-in theatre speaker, permits operation with car windows closed . . . in cool or rainy weather.

Drive-In Theatres... by RCA...including—comprehensive planning facilities projection equipment high-power sound systems

fixed or in-car speakers

• Here is a complete line of equipment which will bring to the Drive-In Theatre the same high quality and dependable performance now being obtained from RCA equipment in thousands of theatres throughout the world.

PROJECTION—The many important advantages of RCA Brenkert Projectors and Brenkert Arc Lamps, including rock-steady projection and increased light on the screen, make them the logical choice for the Drive-In Theatre, where the larger screen and longer throw demand top projection efficiency. Dependable arc-lamp power supplies are also extremely important. RCA offers the well-known Century-Roth Motor Generators, Westinghouse Copper-Oxide and Baldor bulb-type rectifiers, because of their outstanding performance.

SOUND—RCA Drive-In Theatre Sound Systems are specially designed and time-tested for Drive-In Theatre use—not modified conventional systems. These systems are designed for lifelike tone fidelity and minimum distortion—built to provide the high powers needed for covering large areas with fixed speakers, or for operation of large numbers of the new type In-Car Speakers, which permit profitable operation in all kinds of weather.

THE NEWS IN A NUTSHELL

Nation-wide Wave of Theatre Fires Causes Enormous Property Loss

THE MOTION PICTURE theatre industry is so widely dispersed that any common technical difficulty of operation may be completely overcome in some theatres while other showmen are still struggling with it, totally unaware that the solution to their problem has been found.

Problems which—because of the variety of theatre operating conditions—have no single solution, are minimized if not completely solved when the showman has access to the experience—the successes and failures—of other theatre operators in dealing with similar circumstances.

Finding the Answers

Here, as we see it, is the function of STR's Theatre Equipment and Maintenance Section: to ferret out solutions, information and experience wherever they can be found, and pass them along to you.

This is done in part in the advertising columns where manufacturers tell you about supplies and equipment which they have tried to engineer to meet your needs more closely than ever in the past; it is done in a less specific way in editorial matter reporting devices and designs evolved by other theatremen, their architects or technicians; and in part by the Advisory Council Report which brings you a symposium of expert opinion.

A new technical editor takes over this month. He could hardly imagine a pleasanter job than collecting solutions, information and experience from every possible source, and passing them along. It is his ambition to maintain the high standard of service to the reader set by his predecessor, and even to extend it as future technical developments in the industry may allow. Naturally he looks forward hopefully to the cooperation and good fellowship of showmen everywhere, for the good of all.

Will you help? If you are confronted with any problem of the physical theatre, won't you tell us about it and let us ask the Advisory Council for their answers? The answers, as printed in these pages, may help others who are facing some similar problem. Your name and the name of your theatre will not be mentioned, unless you wish. And in the Council you have very powerful help at your disposal. Each of those eminent gentlemen of this industry is retained for his expert knowledge by an important chain of theatres—his knowledge of theatre problems is therefore at his employer's service; but the knowledge of all of them together is at your service, and without any cost at all to you. Simply ask what you want to know, or explain your difficulty. (Of course the Council cannot comment on the relative merits of manufacturers' products, or do the work of your architect in preparing theatre plans!)

Tell Us Your Solutions?

If you have found the solution for some difficulty, or if you have worked out any novel and helpful device, how's about telling us the news? It may help the next fellow. Your name will appear or not, just as you like; in either case some brother showman a thousand miles away may benefit; and you in turn may at some time gain some useful advantage through reading here of what he has done.

In asking your cooperation, your new technical editor promises you his, to the utmost of his ability.

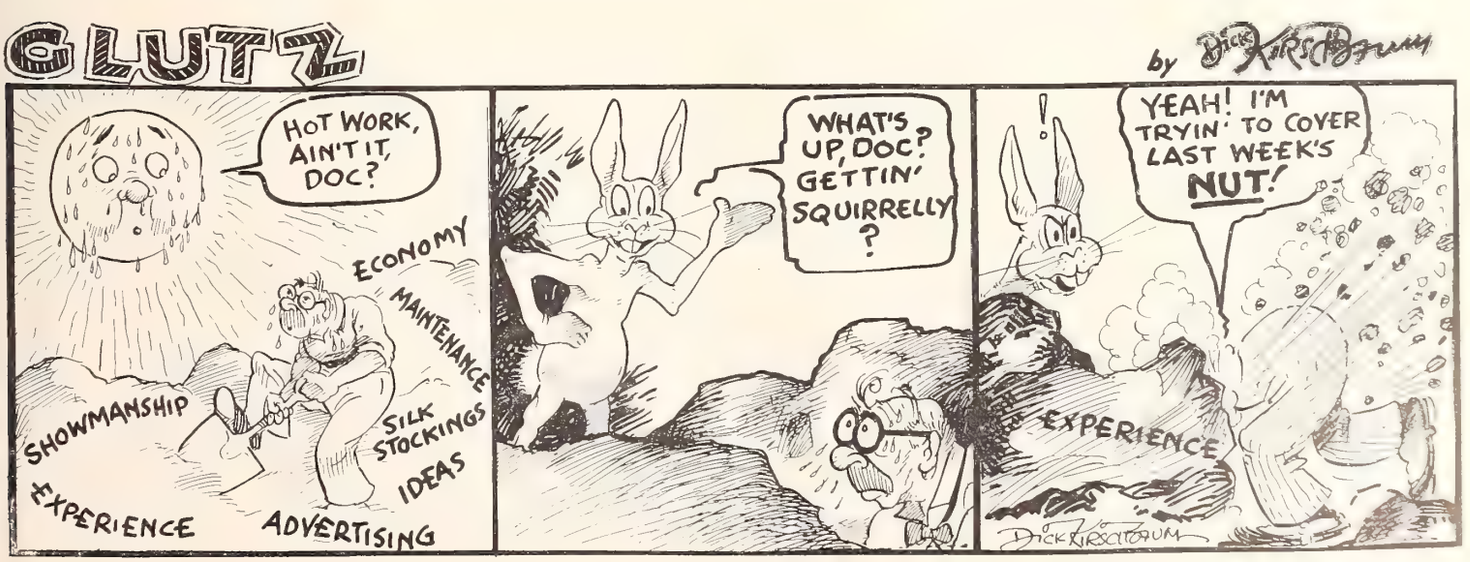
Theatre Fires

The turn of the year brought a wave of theatre fires that should stir showmen into re-checking their own houses for possibly dangerous conditions. The news isn't good. Wire after wire from Massachusetts to California brought word of this, that and the other theatre burning down, damaged by flames; of people trapped, of damage to property ranging from $500 to $500,000. There is one bright note, however: no lives were lost.

All possible causes of fire have been amply studied by experts; precautions can be taken. The National Board of Fire Underwriters has prepared an elaborate set of preventive measures, and in many communities they are law. No one need be ignorant of them. Copies in pamphlet form of all Underwriters' regulations applying to the motion picture theatre will be sent free of charge to any exhibitor who asks for them. Address the National Board of Fire Underwriters, 85 John Street, New York City. Or send your request to SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW and we will forward it.



If you think your theatre doesn't need any checking up, here is ten days' record:

Roxy Theatre, Coeur D'Alene, Idaho—Flames broke out under the floor and entered the auditorium through the ventilating ducts. Damage $500.

New Theatre, Salisbury, Md.—Boiler room explosion started blaze that completely destroyed theatre auditorium, roof and rear of the building. Damage estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000.

Fox West Coast Granada Theatre, Inglewood, Calif.—Burned to the ground. Fire started in adjoining confectionery store.

ADVISORY COUNCIL

Light adds to Safety as well as to Beauty

No. 12—A Continuing Series of Reports by Experts on Problems of Vital Importance

LIGHT FOR BEAUTY, light for safety and decoration, held the interest of the Council this month, and there could be no doubt that the members consider light one of the most important aids the theatre possesses.

Discussion focussed on the use of light in the auditorium, although the theatre front, the theme of last month's meeting, came in for further comment. Outstanding was the connection that many of the members drew between lighting and patron safety.

With reference to the front of the theatre beauty, attractive decoration and enhancement of architectural lines appeared to be the first consideration with the Council, more important in their minds than exploitation as such.

"Our present plans call for light not only as a means of attracting business, but also to beautify and illuminate fronts."

"We plan to modernize our theatre fronts by installation of highly decorative marquees and attraction boards."

Use of illuminated plastics appealed strongly to a third member.

As to detailed methods, there was considerable difference of opinion. "We abhor exposed neon stripping on fronts, except for grind locations. Our technique has been developed along the lines of indirect and concealed lighting from coves," said one member.

"Use of bright materials having reflective qualities."

"Plenty of high intensity neon in outline lighting."

"We plan to utilize cold cathode tubing wherever possible, tube lighting and floods," declared still another member.

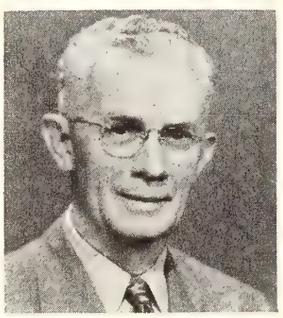
"Concealed or semi-concealed colored neon tubing!"

And there you are! The consensus is strongly in favor of lighting as a means of dressing up the front, and making it attractive and appealing, but as to the best way to use light to achieve that effect . . . perhaps that is a matter of taste!

Light And Safety

Use of light for safety was stressed again and again in connection with illuminating the auditorium.

"More aisle lights"—"improved aisle lights"—"more uniform distribution of aisle lights"—"working on the idea of illuminating floors between seats as well as in the aisles"—"illuminated hand rails"—"concentrating the light at the rear so that it does not affect the eyes but still gives a maximum degree of illumination for patrons' safety" were among the plans the members have for their own theatres. On the important relation between illumination and safety there was no dissent at all, and of course you will notice that there is no contradiction between the different methods proposed. They work together, all of them can be used in the same auditorium.



If that were done, there is some possibility that the general level of illumination might be so raised as to require use of more powerful light sources in the projection room but not the slightest trace of objection to increasing the level of auditorium illumination appeared in the discussion. To the contrary, one member

J. H. ELDER

Interstate Circuit

J. H. Elder, Supervisor of Construction and maintenance for the Interstate Circuit, is a native of Atlanta, Georgia. His first business connection, with Southern Bell Telephone Company, was interrupted by World War I. When his service with the armed forces was ended, Elder spent a year with Swift & Company, and then joined the Paramount organization through Southern Enterprises.

His rise with Paramount was rapid, and between 1928-1932 "Jake" Elder was at the company's New York home office as director of maintenance for all the Paramount-Publix theatres. The disintegration of the Publix chain as it existed in those days and the consequent re-shuffling of personnel transferred him to Texas, the location of his personal choice, where he has remained ever since.

Elder's personal interests are golf, hunting and ranching, especially ranching. He is a 32nd degree Mason and a Shriner, and Chairman of the Committee for Building and Upkeep of Variety Club Charities, but his job as supervisor of construction and maintenance for Interstate comes first of all things with him, and other activities have to wait for whatever time his job may allow. His contributions to the opinions of STR's Advisory Council reflect an immense depth and breadth of experience that add important weight to the Council's conclusions.

Presenting Pictorial Closeups and Data on Current Models of Five Leading Manufacturers

BECAUSE OF THE diversity of theatre sizes and operating conditions all sound equipment is tailored to individual requirements by combining suitable amplifiers, soundheads, speakers and other units into systems. Herewith are shown amplifier assemblies of five prominent makers. Each constitutes the core of one sound system, to which properly chosen speakers and so on are matched. If a larger or smaller installation is required, the same maker may furnish a different amplifier than those here shown, and match either the same or different soundheads or speakers to it. No other item of theatre equipment is more flexibly engineered, more completely capable of meeting the needs of every auditorium regardless of its size or design, than the sound system. And nothing, of course, is more important in any theatre than life-like, natural sound.

DE VRY 12000

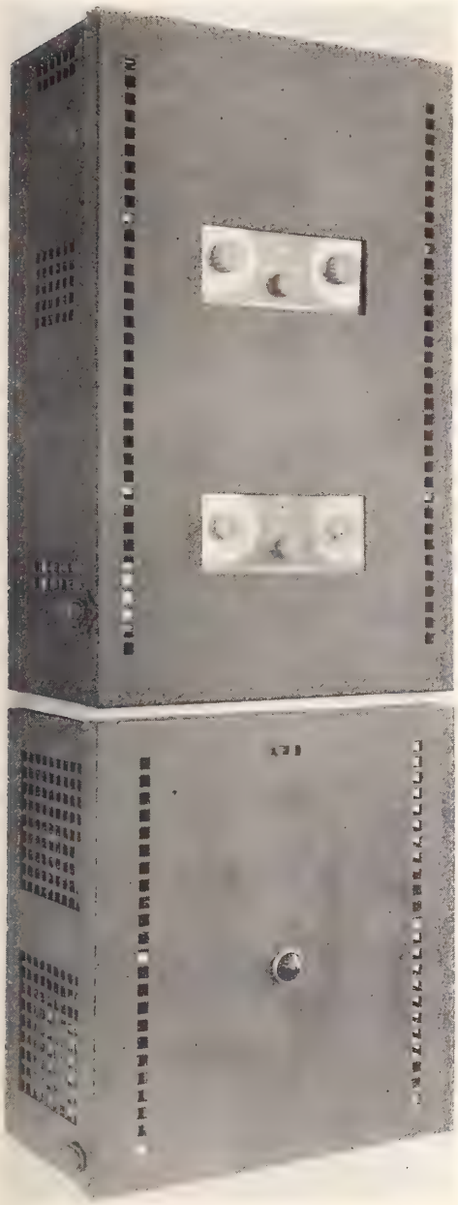
RCA



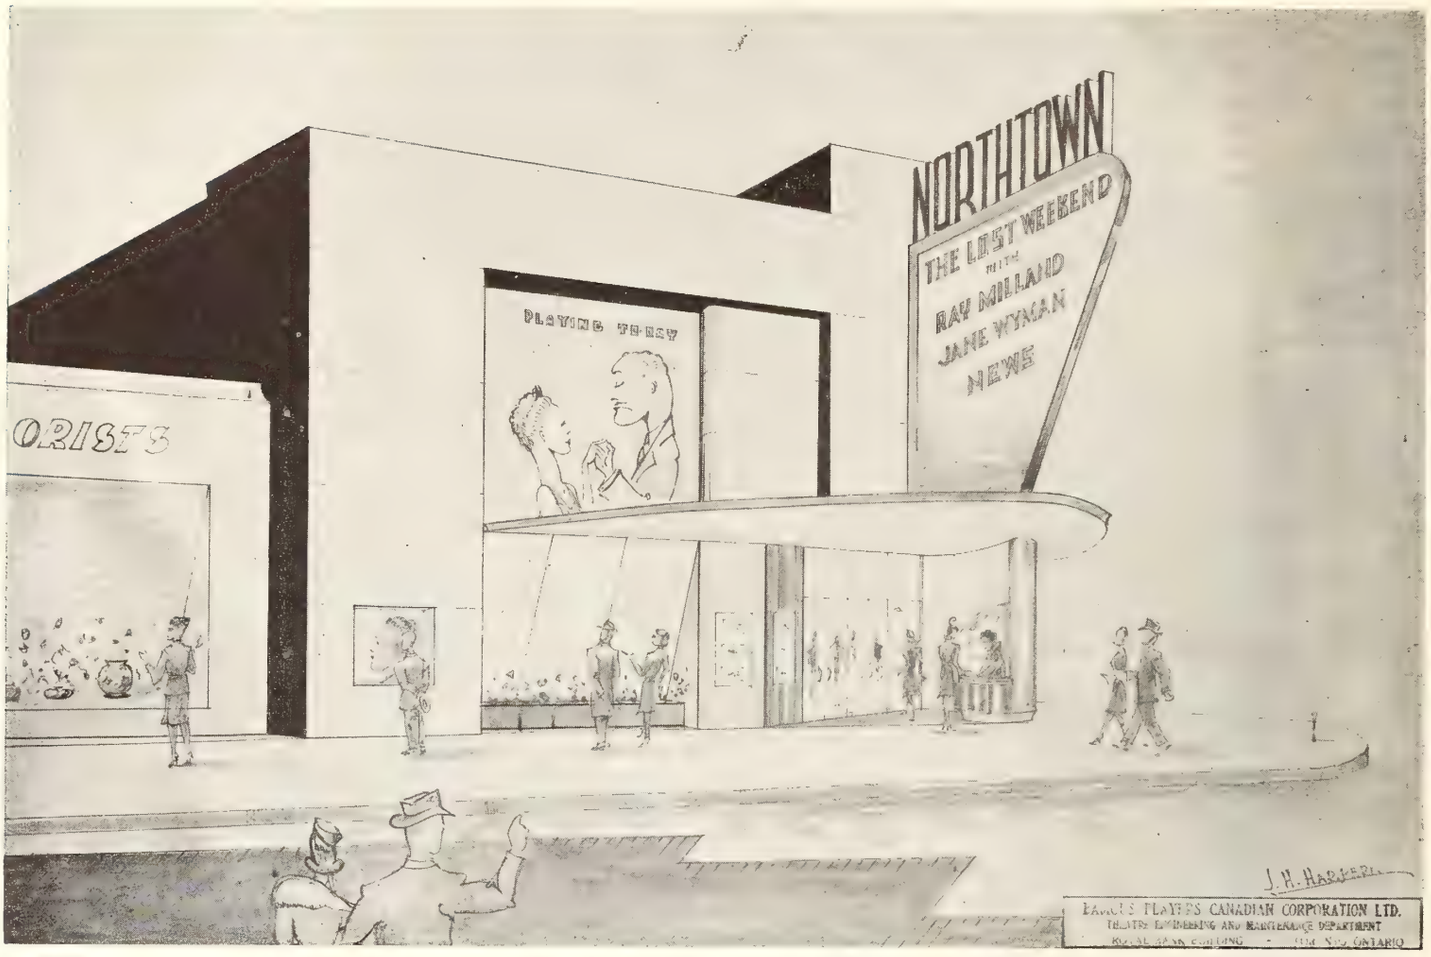
THIS MI-9210-G amplifier rack contains within itself voltage, power and monitor-emergency amplifiers, frequency compensator, cross-over network and exciter lamp supply. Power output is 30 watts with less than 2 per cent distortion; the 15-watt high fidelity monitor amplifier can be switched to supply the stage speakers in an emergency. Used with this panel are MI-9050-D soundheads, incorporating rotary stabilizer film control and cushion-mounting of stabilizer and optical parts to eliminate "microphonic" vibration noise; MI-9700-Series faders and suitable monitor and stage speakers. Amplification is rated high fidelity and can be tuned, by means of the compensator mounted in this panel, to match the acoustics of the auditorium. The exciter lamp supply unit can furnish d.c. to both lamps at once; a switch provides low voltage a.c. to the lamps in emergency. Provisions also incorporated in this panel permit continued performance on low frequency speakers only in the event of high frequency speaker failure.

Sound Equipment for 1946

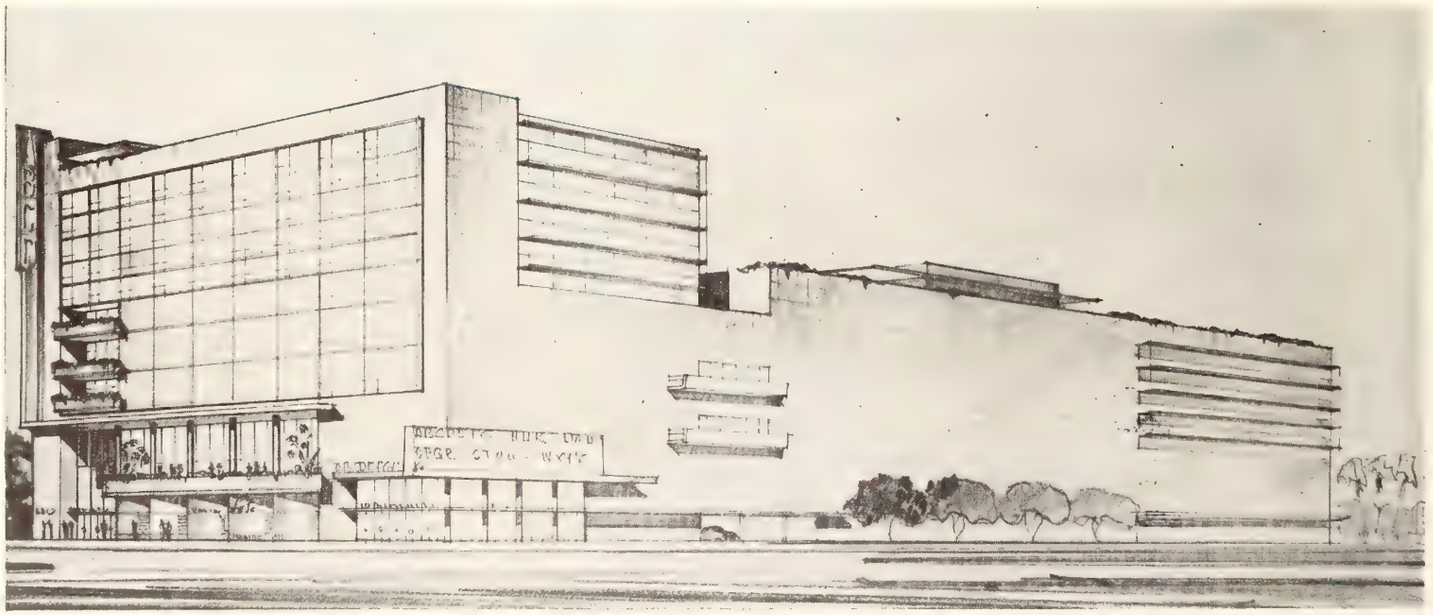
MOTIOGRAPH MIRROPHONIC

UNUSUALLY STURDY design, emphasizing ample safety factor, is among the many features of the Motiograph Mirrophonic 911 dual equipment, for which these two MA-7505-A amplifiers supply power amplification. Power output is 40 watts with not more than 2 per cent distortion over the entire frequency range. The Motiograph Mirrophonic 7500 Master soundheads, which constitute part of this system, feature large 32-tooth sound sprockets for greater stability of reproduction in addition to the Mirrophonic thermo-proof stabilizer. The complete system includes PA-7505-A pre-amplifiers mounted on the front wall near the projector, frequency-selective network with crossover at 400 cycles, monitor speaker, SE 7520 power supply unit, 32-cell reticular high frequency trumpets, and a low-frequency folded baffle using two 15" speakers. Every portion of the equipment is completely accessible; operation of tubes can be observed at a glance through the grillwork here shown and checked instantly and accurately by means of the panel meters and their associated switches.

CENTURY SOUND



THE CENTURY MASTER Sound System panel here pictured is identical with the Westrex (Western Electric Export) Master Sound System sold in export trade. It is available to U. S. theatres through Century Projector Corporation. The upper panel shown is the A-2 amplifier, compromising regular and emergency amplifier units, monitor amplifier and changeover relay. Power output is 40 watts with 6L6 output tubes, 50 watts with Western Electric 350B tubes in the output sockets. The dials shown control stage and monitor volume; the four-position switches select sound input from the photocells, non-synch, microphone and emergency sources. Rated distortion is less than 2 per cent at full load. The lower panel is the R-4 rectifier which supplies power both to the amplifiers and to the exciter lamps. Used with this unit is the R-2 soundhead, with magnetic-and-oil film stabilizer giving rated flutter distortion of not more than one-twentieth of one per cent; and Altec Lansing Voice of the Theatre loudspeaker assemblies.



SIMPLEX 4-STAR

THE FAMOUS SIMPLEX 4-Star sound systems are here represented by the C-60 system, of which this AM 105 amplifier is the heart. Used with it are two 4-Star de luxe soundheads incorporating rotary stabilizer control of film motion, an AM 101 volume control amplifier, and suitable speaker units. The system is notable in that it accommodates itself with ease to unusual auditorium conditions. Volume output is 60 watts, distortion rating, 1 per cent maximum. Not only are internal components readily accessible for servicing or inspection, but the many indicating meters on this AM 105 panel give clearly visible indication of the slightest departure from ideal performance conditions. Future introduction of stereophonic recording was anticipated in the design of these sound systems, and they are built to be very economically adapted to any such new developments. Frequency response of all 4-Star systems conforms to the recommended standards set by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

Neighborhood theatre planned by Famous Players Canadian for Toronto.

NEW THEATRES in the Modern Manner

Proposed facade for the world's largest theatre, the 7000 seat, $5,000,000 project Earl Carroll plans for Sunset Boulevard near El Centro Street, Hollywood. Parking facilities under the theatre, reached by six motor lanes, will accommodate 1000 cars. A revolving turntable will carry three separate stages, each measuring 75'x130', behind a 130' proscenium opening. George B. Kaufman Associates are the architects.

Take your choice of Projection!

HERE'S the way to a big improvement in the effectiveness of your movie showings: Shift to Simplified High Intensity Projection! It's bound to make itself felt at the box office (most exhibitors would not think of operating without it). And still, High Intensity Projection will cost you little, if any, more.

Specifically, One-Kilowatt High Intensity Projection provides:

- For your color pictures*—a specially designed snow-white light
- For your screen*—50-100% brighter light

And . . .

- For your audience*—beautiful, easier-to-see pictures

Take the first step today—consult National Carbon Company, Inc., for further facts. Also ask your supply house about the availability of High Intensity Lamps.

PROJECTION CLINIC

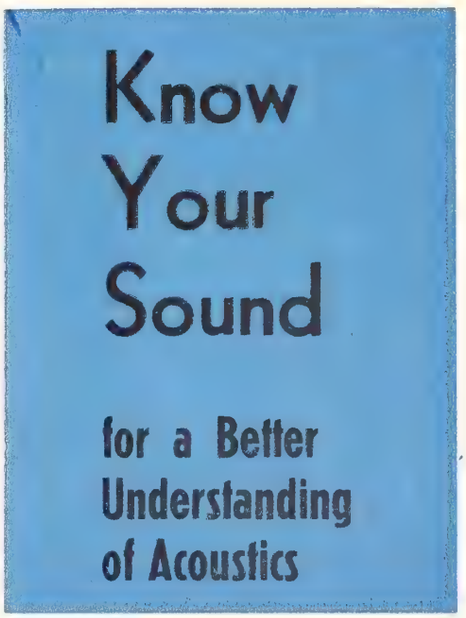
Treating the Auditorium

Improving Tone Quality by Control of Sound Wave Reflections

THE BEHAVIOR of sound waves inside the auditorium constitutes the subject-matter of the science of acoustics.

Two important practical problems of acoustics exist in every theatre. These are: (1) to effect equal distribution of every frequency to every member of the audience, and (2) to control reverberation or reflection of sound.

Two additional problems are encountered in some auditoriums only: namely, to control echo and to reduce extraneous —that is, foreign—noise.



Reverberation presents by far the most widespread, troublesome problem, and the one that needs greatest attention.

Reverberation

In the average closed room, if a sound source is suddenly interrupted, the sound will not instantly stop. It will continue to reverberate or linger for a short time, perhaps several seconds, owing to repeated reflection of the sound waves by the surfaces of the room. The number of seconds required for the sound to decline in strength to one-millionth of its original value (60 db decline in volume) is the reverberation time of the room.

Since most surfaces reflect sound waves to some degree, a reasonable amount of reverberation is always present even in open air. The ear, accustomed to reverberation, finds this natural, and finds too little reverberation not natural at all. With normal reverberation, such as we are used to, there is no difficulty in understanding speech in spite of the fact that original sound waves and reflected sound waves overlap. With too much reverberation, however, the overlapping interferes with intelligibility, and speech becomes hard to understand. With too little reverberation, intelligibility remains perfect, but the sound is not pleasing.

Music is not pleasing when the reverberation is insufficient; it seems dull. Under conditions of excessive reverberation, on the other hand, music seems blurred, successive notes are not clearly separated or defined; they have no crispness; the sound waves representing them are overlapped and merged with reflected sound waves representing the last three or four notes.

The finest recording and the most perfectly engineered sound system will not please an audience if the reverberation time of the auditorium is wrong.

Reflection of Sound Waves

Sound waves travel at between 1,000 and 1,100 feet per second, very roughly, the exact velocity depending on the temperature of the air. For the sake of convenience assume the speed of propagation to be only 1,000 feet per second. Then if the sound is reflected back and forth between surfaces 100 feet apart, it is evident that the wave will undergo 10 reflections per second. If the surfaces were only 50 feet apart, there could be 20 reflections per second, and so on.

At every contact with a reflecting surface the sound wave loses some of its energy through absorption. The surface may yield or bend very slightly under the impact of the sound wave, and a portion of the energy is thus translated into internal friction within the substance. If the surface is rough or porous there will be friction between the particles of air and the material, a condition producing another form of absorption.

If a sound wave should lose half its original energy through absorption in the course of being reflected from one surface, and at the next reflection lose half of its remaining energy, and so on, the sound wave will have left at the end of ten such reflections approximately 1/1,000th of its original energy. If these ten reflections require one second of time, the reverberation time of the auditorium will be far longer than one second, since the reverberation time is that number of seconds required for sound energy to decline to one-milionth of its original value.

Yet very few ordinary building materials are able to absorb even half the energy of a sound wave. A concrete surface will absorb only 1½ per cent, a brick wall 3.2 per cent, a plaster wall from 2.5 to 3.4 per cent, and so on. When the reverberation time of an auditorium is too long, special sound-absorbing materials must be used.

Calculating Reverberation Time

Although the reverberation time of an auditorium can be measured with suitable apparatus, it is customarily calculated. The number of square feet of every different kind of surface in the auditorium is obtained from architects' drawings or by actual measurement. Tables are available giving the percentage of absorption or the "absorption coefficient" of all materials ordinarily used in building construction. A simple mathematical formula, applied to this data, gives the reverberation time.

The number of square feet of any material is multiplied by the absorption coefficient of that material. The result is the number of sound absorbing units contributed by that portion of the surface. Thus, if there are in the auditorium 10,000 square feet of plaster surface with a co-

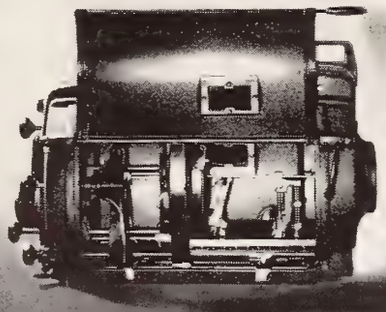
For Better Projection

With this issue STR inaugurates a maintenance memo page for projectionists. We urge you to send it to your projection room each month. It may serve to remind the men there of some detail which, if inadvertently forgotten, could lead to serious and expensive trouble.

Some of the reminders contained therein will appear more than once each month (depending on the frequency with which different details of maintenance need attention), others only once in several months or even once a year.



In theatres that enjoy the benefits of sound and projection servicing, re-check by the projectionists between visits of the service inspector affords very important additional protection: do not let the fact that your equipment receives expert inspections periodically deter you from putting this daily reminder into the hands of the men who are in your projection room every day. You will find it on Page E-16.

WAGNER'S SENSATIONAL NEW WINDOW-TYPE MARQUEE FRAME

(PATENT PENDING)

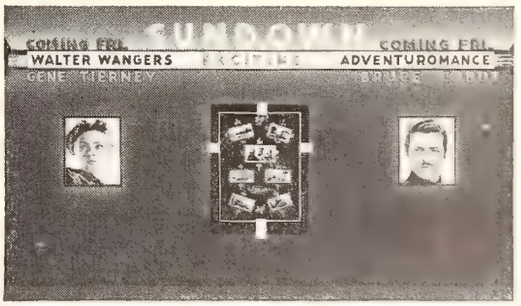
Permits billing space of any height or length.

Installed separately and before the glass. Accommodates the largest letters and lifesize colored photo transparencies. Lamps, neon and glass can be cleaned or replaced without removing frames . . . No flimsy soldered parts . . . No shopwork necessary in the event of glass breakage. The most economically maintained frame made.

WAGNER TRANSLUCENT COLORED PLASTIC CHANGEABLE LETTERS

No other equipment affords such a vivid display. Gorgeously brilliant when light shines through them, they assume a sharply silhouetted third dimensional effect by day. 4″, 10″ and 17″ sizes in assorted, beautiful, non-fading colors (red, green, blue, amber and opaque black) that go all the way through, cannot chip or scale, never require painting. Interchangeable, they do double duty, outside on the marquee or inside in Wagner Lobby Displays.

WAGNER LOBBY DISPLAY UNITS



Sell coming attractions. Made of white enamel finished sheet steel. Easy to install. Made in standard sections 7″ high by 24″, 36″ and 48″, which can be combined for any length. Wagner slotted plastic letters can be mounted on the bars in the middle, firmly held in standee positions at the top or suspended from the bottom by clips. Price per lineal foot visible opening, including frames, opal glass, sockets, wiring, wall plate, top and bottom mounting rail, but less lamps, $6. End pieces included at no extra cost on displays 8′ or longer.

WAGNER'S MOUNTING STRIPS

Wagner Plastic Letters can be set up many places where no other display equipment could possibly be used, by using the white enamel finished sheet steel mounting strips. No special wiring is necessary. Drilled for mounting with nails on top of any wood surface, these strips can also be fastened on the under side of a surface and the letters used in suspended position.

added this comment: 'We are making our auditoriums more illuminated than in the past for safety."

Auditorium Appearance

Another fairly unanimous trend was found in the preference of most members for indirect lighting.

"We are going to feature indirect lighting as much as possible, doing away with fixtures as much as we can."

"All concealed lighting where possible —no fixtures."

"We have had considerable success with R-40 floods or spots in the illumination of the auditorium in connection with tube lighting. Recessed or hidden neon tubing seems to be the most effective. We feel it has great possibilities for the future. We are discontinuing wherever possible any additional light source in the sidewall brackets or anything that may be distracting to a patron watching the screen."

A minority did dissent; one member recommended better blending of the decorative scheme and lighting fixtures.

As to the type of lamp preferred, cold cathode tubing appeared to be far in the lead. Typical comments were:

"Cold cathode or neon strip lighting."

"Cold cathode wherever possible."

"Colored tubing where possible."

"The advantages of this type of lighting are long life of tubes and flexibility (dimming)."

"We are planning tube lighting and recessed floods."—"A combination of neon in coves with decorative brackets and ceiling fixtures," were other recommendations.

Lighting Circuits

We then asked what lighting plan (number of circuits, etc.) the members would recommend. Many of the Councilors were somewhat hesitant to answer that one, feeling that too much depended on the architectural plan and design of the theatre. Those who did answer, however, favored use of two circuits, one adding that for medium-sized houses he recommended three lighting circuits, and for large theatres four circuits. Another, without specifying the number of circuits he would use, commented: "All theatres should have all the light the picture will stand. Colored light for auditorium and standee."

"Two circuits, and indirect lighting so installed that relamping is not a difficult job, is an ideal set-up both for beauty and maintenance," another contributed.

A more detailed comment was:

'The number of circuits and lighting plan depend entirely upon the load per circuit. Our installations are made according to established Underwriters' Code so that no circuits are overloaded, and as many circuits are used as are necessary. Where a large number of branch circuits are involved, we utilize contactors controlled by one switch, each circuit separately fused. This eliminates the necessity for multiple switches in controlling house or running lights. To recommend a maximum requirement of circuits would have a tendency to encourage overloading, because attraction lighting, spot lighting, lobby, foyer, and auditorium lighting are a variable factor."

Black Light

"What is your estimate of fluorescent murals, used in conjunction with black light as a means of auditorium decoration?" was our next question.

Here opinion was substantially unanimous that such decoration must not be allowed to distract audience attention from the screen. On that condition, the majority favored fluorescent murals, but a minority was very strongly opposed. "Not worth anything," one member said flatly. "Novel, but expensive to keep up, and we don't believe they are worth the money," said another. "We find it distracts from patrons' attention to the screen and would not use it if we could have it at the same cost as other decorative treatment," added a third.

But the majority were decidedly in favor of fluorescent murals and black light, on the condition that it is not so used as to be distracting.

"Okay when it does not interfere with the enjoyment of the picture."

"Fluorescent murals which we have in quite a few of our theatres have worked out very nicely and always give our patrons that extra something to talk about. Although one point should be stressed, and that is not to place them too close to the front part of the theatre where they might distract from the screen."

"Fluorescent murals are my interest, but should be used with discrimination. We are not yet completely satisfied as to practicability."

"Have used some—very good if not overdone."

"We have found them somewhat distracting from the entertainment on the screen, and troublesome and costly to maintain, but with the perfection of black light and with care in selecting patterns and designs and locations of the same, we believe that fluorescent murals have possibilities."

"Very attractive and outstanding as a means of interest. There are many locations such as rest rooms, foyers, lobbies, etc., in which fluorescent murals can be used to greater advantage than in an auditorium, where they more or less detract from the performance."

"We were one of the first circuits to use fluorescent murals and black light as an outstanding means of auditorium decoration. Results so far have not been entirely satisfactory. Maintenance costs are high. This form of lighting is still in the experimental stage, but it has great future possibilities."

Sterilizing Lamps

The next question—the value of sterilizing or germ-killing lighting in the theatre and in rest rooms—turned up strong interest but no definite experience to date. Cost studies and experiments are being planned. One member thought such light sources might best be used in conjunction with the air conditioning system. Another thought their installation would be a sales argument of interest to the public, and a third commented that he had found excellent patron acceptance of germ-killing toilet seats in rest rooms. One adverse comment was offered: that experience showed use of electric sterilizing equipment in rest rooms tended to make the janitors careless.

In view of the Council's lack of experience to date with sterilizing lamps, we did not ask a further question on that subject which we had in mind. These lamps act, in part, by ionizing some of the oxygen in the theatre to ozone, and the presence of even a small amount of ozone is supposed to produce a feeling of well-being, health and mild exhilaration. Perhaps the Council will tell us, after they have experimented further, whether these lamps give the audience a satisfied sense of well-being while they are in the theatre.

The unhappy patient pictured above probably could have avoided this painful situation by having had regular scheduled check-ups made on the condition of his molars.

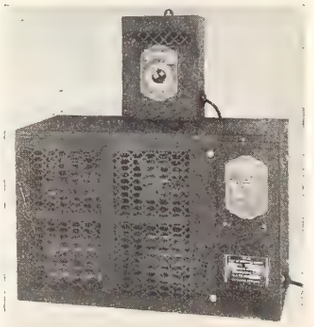
The theatre apparently had no fire-retarding wall to protect it against careless confectioners. Fire-fighting equipment had to be called from Los Angeles to help the local department. Loss, including damage to adjoining properties, $500,000.

Ford Theatre, Ford City, Pa.—Fire caused by defective wiring swept through the stage and curtains to the ceiling of the theatre. The fire department of the neighboring community of Kittaning had to be called in to help. Damage, $25,000.

Pennington Gap, Va.—Carelessly-thrown cigarette started a fire that burned all night. The neighboring community of St. Charles sent its fire department to assist. A volunteer firefighter suffered a broken leg. Loss, including damage to other properties in the building, $125,000.

Durfee Theatre, Fall River, Mass.—Damage unestimated but described as considerable resulted from a two-alarm fire. The Durfee stands on the site of the Rialto Theatre, which was destroyed by fire in 1928.



Strand Theatre, Kingsport, Tenn.—Eight hundred patrons filed out quietly as the theatre was completely destroyed. Damage, $100,000. The three other theatres in town announced they would each open an hour earlier in the morning to take care of the expected surplus patronage.

Not a bad record for Old Man Fire to run up for himself in only ten days, do you think?

More Theatre Devices

Factories that were doing all sorts of things for the government a short time ago are turning now to the theatre field in a search for outlets for their productive capacity. The process can be expected to bring to the theatre new devices as well as improvements to old ones, all contributing to the creation of still higher standards of showmanship, exploitation and patron comfort.

This month brings word that the manufacturers of Homozone, electrical deodorizer and germ killer, have turned their factory facilities from government work to the production of ozone generators tailor-made to the requirements of each separate theatre. Units suited to mounting inside air conditioning ducts (and operated by remote control), will be supplied, as well as others of various sizes that may be mounted on the ceiling near the fresh-air inlet, or in rest rooms.

And this month's report of the Advisory Council (see Page 6) discusses the use of de-odorizing and germ-killing lamps.

The theatre of a very few years hence should have many devices—which theatremen then will consider commonplace necessities—that today do not exist or are very rare.

efficient of absorption of .03, the total absorption units provided by that surface are 10,000 x .03, or 300 units.

All surfaces of the auditorium being similarly calculated, and the number of absorption units contributed by each being added together, the result is the total absorption of the auditorium in units.

However, in the case of seats, the absorption is not figured by measuring the number of square feet of chair surface, but by adding in the number of units per chair, which the chair manufacturer can supply. The absorption of the audience is also figured in, to determine the total auditorium absorption at different conditions of attendance. Absorption provided by the audience is counted as 4.7 units per person.

When the total absorption of the auditorium is known, it still remains necessary to calculate the volume or cubical contents of the enclosure, either from architects' drawings or actual measurements.

Then the formula can be applied: T = .05V/a, in which T is the reverberation time, V is the volume or cubical contents of the theatre, and "a" is the sum of all the absorption, as determined by adding all the absorption units present.

This formula can be applied to several different sets of conditions by varying the value of "a" to represent full audience conditions, half audience, one-third audience, and so on.

Desirable Reverberation Time

Experiment and mathematical theory agree that the most desirable reverberation time for any auditorium should vary according to its size. Electrical Research Products, Inc., has determined the most desirable reverberation time for auditoriums used as motion picture theatres. These are, very approximately, for theatres of different cubical contents:

CUBICAL CONTENTS	REVERBERATION TIME
10,000 cu. ft.	1.0 second
35,000 " "	1.1 "
75,000 " "	1.2 "
125,000 " "	1.3 "
200,000 " "	1.4 "
275,000 " "	1.5 "
375,000 " "	1.6 "
475,000 " "	1.7 "
600,000 " "	1.8 "
775,000 " "	1.9 "
900,000 " "	2.0 "

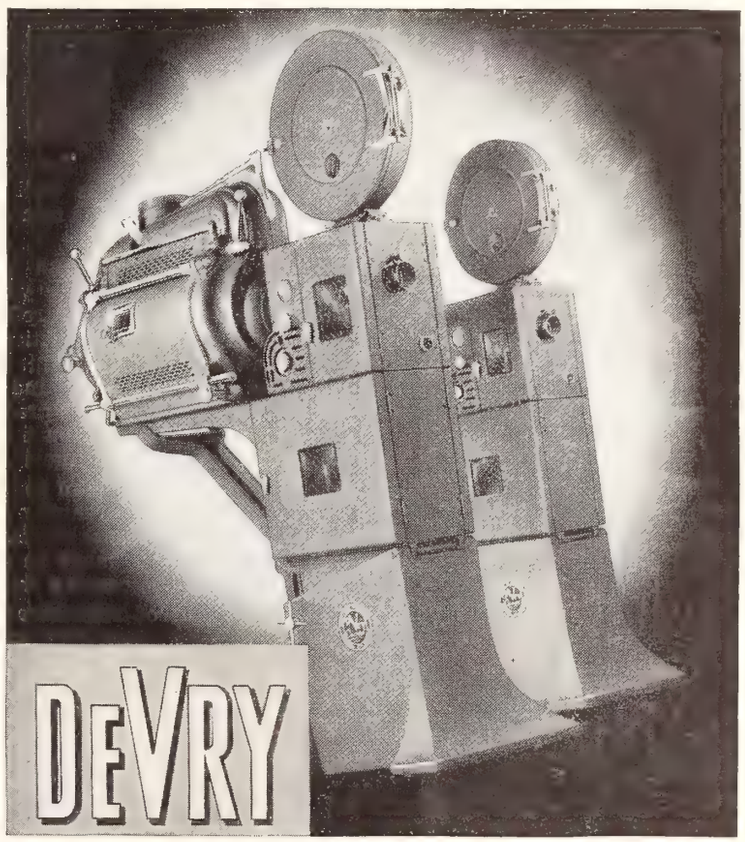
The above figures are based on an audience of 1/3rd capacity. Reverberation time of course will be less with a full audience; however, if the seats are very heavily upholstered, so that even when unoccupied, they have nearly the same absorption as a human being and his clothing, the difference under changing audience conditions will be relatively small.

The above figures assume a sound frequency of 512 cycles. Absorption coefficients are conventionally calculated for that frequency.

Reverberation And Frequency

No theatre will have the same reverberation time at every frequency, since no material has the same absorption at all frequencies. A theatre may be reverberant at some frequencies but not at others. The following tabulation will indicate how the sound-absorbing properties of two common materials vary with frequency:

MATERIAL	SOUND FREQUENCY IN CYCLES PER SECOND
	297	581	1095	2190	2890
Oak Wood	.011	.007	.011	.006	.005
Hair felt, 1 inch..	.330	...	.620	.940	.900



It readily can be seen that oak wood at 2,890 cycles has only about one-half the absorbing power it has at 1,095 cycles. The hair felt, on the contrary, has a higher absorption at higher frequencies—nearly three times as great at 2,890 cycles as at 297 cycles.

Thus, acoustical treatment of an auditorium for reverberation may depend in part upon the frequency at which reverberation time is objectionable. The selection of sound-absorbing materials to be applied may thus be limited to materials that have their maximum effectiveness within the frequency range involved.

Frequency does not appear in the formula T = .05V/a; it is represented, however, in "a," as the coefficients of absorption from which "a" is obtained are based on measurements made at some one frequency. If a different table of coefficients (based on measurements made at a different frequency) were used, "a" would work out to a different figure entirely.

Location of Absorbing Materials

The formula T = .05V/a does not take into account the location of absorbing materials. So far as that formula is concerned, they may just as well be on the floor as on the ceiling, the calculation will still come out the same.

The FRONT of the MONTH

The elaborate front on "Enchanted Forest" at the Victoria Theatre, Times Square, N. Y., has been enchanting the holiday throngs on the Gay White Way. The display in the upper left hand corner plugs the fact that the film is in color with vari-colored neon on a series of flashers. Giant title letters are in mirror mosaic low relief.

This is in accordance with the modern understanding of acoustics, which holds that a given sound wave is reflected over and over again, from practically every surface in the theatre, before it finally dies away, and that the same sound-absorbing surface will therefore have practically the same effect on reverberation time no matter where in the auditorium it is located.

There is a special case of reverberation, namely echo, in the treatment of which the above statement does not hold true. A direct attack must be made on the specific surface area that is causing the echo.

For treatment of reverberation faults, however, sound absorbing material, if needed, can be installed wherever it will harmonize best with the existing decorative scheme and with considerations of maintenance.

Sound Distribution

In some theatres the problem of securing effective distribution of sound is still as difficult and important as control of reverberation. This is especially true in theatres that have not installed modern speaker systems.

Since sound should be neither so weak as to be hard to understand and enjoy, nor so loud as to be unnatural or annoying, the volume level at each individual seat must be pretty much the same otherwise sound will be too weak for some patrons and too loud for others.

This even distribution of volume must be obtained not at one frequency only but at all frequencies, otherwise there will be frequency distortion at some seats exactly as there would be in the entire theatre if the amplifier developed certain faults.

The problem of obtaining such even distribution is complicated by reverberation —that is, by the additional volume at some frequencies which reflected sound will contribute at some seats.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that high and low frequencies of sound do not behave in exactly the same way; the low frequencies tend to spread more evenly while the higher ones behave more in the nature of beams of light, following straight lines. The distribution of reflected sound in the auditorium thus differs considerably at different frequency bands.

Earlier type speakers, still in use in many theatres, were designed to give compromise results. They were partly directional. One speaker, as a rule, reproduced all frequencies.

Securing good distribution with such speakers is in some theatres a very difficult matter, often best approached by utilizing the semi-directional properties of the trumpets to point the sound rather directly at the audience and thus minimize the volume that will reach reflecting surfaces. However, every set of speakers and every auditorium present an individual problem, to be solved principally by trial and error and endless patience.

For many years, however, progressive improvements looking toward better distribution as well as better initial sound quality, have been available, and all earlier types of speakers, even though still used, are obsolete types now. In modern systems the low and high frequencies are reproduced by entirely different units, and adequate spreading of the higher frequencies is secured by equipping h.f. units with a trumpet cluster. Reverberation is controlled, where necessary, by suitable treatment of reflecting surfaces; distinctly improved distribution of all frequencies is secured throughout the auditorium, and expensive experimental pointing and repointing of the trumpets is no longer a burden on installation costs.

Echo

Flat surfaces act upon sound waves the way a flat mirror acts on light. Curved surfaces, however, are sometimes found in auditorium interiors which act like converging mirrors. By concentrating substantial volumes of reflected sound in a relatively small area, they create echo.

An echo will sound like simple reverberation if it reaches the listener's ear promptly after the direct sound. To be distinguishable as echo there must be a time interval of not less than 1/17th second after the direct sound has been heard. Hence the path followed by the reflected sound must be at least 65 feet longer than the direct path (allowing the sound wave a velocity of 1105 feet per second).

Application of sound-absorbing material to the offending surface is one of two methods used to control echo. Another is called "coffering." It consists of breaking up the surface into smaller surfaces, which in turn break up the sound wave and convert echo into simple reverberation. A coffer is a deeply-sunk panel. A typical theatre coffer may be about four feet square, recessed perhaps ten inches below the main surface. There usually are several such recesses, one inside the other.

If coffering is used, the smaller surfaces created should be proportioned to the wave length at which the echo is predominant. If they are made too small or too large in proportion to wavelength, they will continue to serve as echo-producing reflecting surfaces.

Noise

Depending on location and details of construction, a theatre may be troubled by noise, particularly traffic noise, and especially so when one wall abuts directly on a busy street. Machine noise originating within the theatre may also be troublesome. Heavy motors or generators, ventilating machinery or air conditioning machinery, may be the source of such noise, and some of it may be transmitted through ventilating ducts. The projection room is sometimes a source of distracting noise to balcony patrons.

Both walls and floors can be sound-proofed with materials made for that purpose. There are special materials for soundproofing ventilating ducts. Where street noises are transmitted into the theatre through exit doors, soundproof doors can be substituted. Machinery can be so mounted that it will not transmit vibration to the floor on which it is mounted; this is usually effective in eliminating machine noise. Projection room ports can be soundproofed.

Conditions that give rise to disturbing noise in the auditorium are many and varied; remedies vary accordingly. Some of the commoner of these problems will be reviewed herein from time to time.

One word of important caution, however, should be stressed now: errors in acoustic treatment can be expensive! Expert advice is obtainable from consulting engineers as well as from manufacturers of acoustical materials. The theatre manager is that much further ahead if he knows enough of what acoustics is all about to be able to talk intelligently with expert advisers, and with salesmen; but if he tries to be his own expert, he will almost certainly be making a serious mistake.

The Cover

The sound of the loudspeakers and the image on the screen are the two things the patrons come to the theatre for. In both, quality of results is of supreme importance. Our cover shows the Altec Lansing Model A-1 Voice of the Theatre behind the proscenium of the huge New York Paramount Theatre in Times Square. Paramount's Supervisor of Projection and Sound, Harry Rubin, tells STR that replacing the very excellent speakers previously used with this Voice of the Theatre unit gave him an increase in volume range of approximately 4 db, with strikingly audible improvement in quality and sound "presence."

'DECIDEDLY DIFFERENT.' Rita Hayworth, bright particular singing and dancing darling of many big musicals, takes a new path in her histrionic career in a highly emotional role in "Gilda," which Hollywood observers call a "decidedly different" sort of picture for the glamorous redhead.

ROBUST ROMANCE. Cornel Wilde, who came to the fore in "A Song to Remember" makes his third appearance in a Columbia production as the swashbuckling hero of "The Bandit of Sherwood Forest," scene from which is shown above. Anita Louise is the object of the romantic hero's attentions.

West, presents Evelyn Keyes as the frontier girl who is loved by two men, Willard Parker, only doctor in the town, and Larry Parks, youngest son of a family of outlaws. Others in the cast include Edgar Buchanan, Jim Bannon, Forrest Tucker, Ludwig Donath, Frank Sully, Willard Robertson and Paul Burns. George Sherman directed.

O'Brien in Thriller

Pat O'Brien and Ruth Warrick star in "Perilous Holiday," a comedy thriller laid in Mexico. O'Brien is seen as a Government agent whose job is to break up a gang of international thieves, and Miss Warrick plays a newspaper woman who works on the case with him. The cast includes Alan Hale, Edgar Buchanan, Audrey Long and Eddie LeBaron and his orchestra. Phil L. Ryan produced and Edward H. Griffith directed.

Another on the list is "Tars and Spars," screen version of the famous Coast Guard musical which stars Alfred Drake, Janet Blair and Marc Platt with Sid Caesar and Jeff Donnell. Alfred E. Green directed, and in addition to the singing of Drake (of "Oklahoma!" fame) and Miss Blair, and the spectacular dancing of Marc Platt, the film introduces a new comic, Sid Caesar.

Current Hits on List

Already playing briskly to rushing business at first run theatres, and set to enjoy the majority of its run during the Silver Anniversary year, is "Kiss and Tell," screen version of the George Abbott stage hit, which presents Shirley Temple in her first adult solo starring role. Jerome Courtland, Walter Abel, Robert Benchley, Porter Hall and Tom Tully are featured. Sol Siegel produced and Richard Wallace directed.

Another of the already realeased productions which will hit the majority of theatres during the Anniversary year, is "She Wouldn't Say Yes," comedy starring Rosalind Russell and Lee Bowman with Adele Jergens, Charles Winninger, Harry Davenport and Sara Haden. Alexander Hall directed for Producer Virginia Van Upp.

Fred MacMurray stars in twin roles in "Pardon My Past," a fast moving comedy of mistaken identity, which features Marguerite Chapman, Akim Tamiroff, William Demarest, Rita Johnson, Harry Davenport and Douglas Dumbrille. Leslie Fenton produced and directed.

THE PROPER SETTING FOR DIAMONDS!

M-G-M will soon entrust to the expert care of our customers two of the greatest attractions in the 22 years of our existence.

The mere mention of these names excites the imagination: CLARK GABLE, GREER GARSON in "ADVENTURE" and the star-studded Technicolor marvel M-G-M's "ZIEGFELD FOLLIES OF 1946."

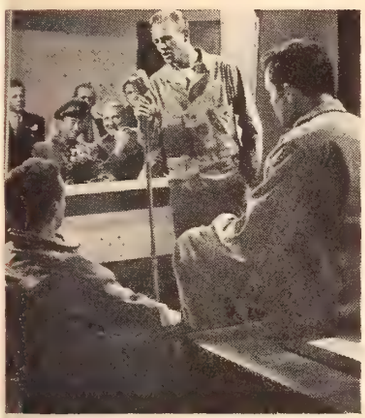
Let us be frank! M-G-M exhibitors make it possible for us to create this multi-million dollar magic to enthrall the movie masses.

We thank you for telling us "Go ahead M-G-M, make those BIG ONES. That's what makes this industry GREAT!"

"ADVENTURE" and M-G-M's "ZIEGFELD FOLLIES OF 1946" are jewels beyond compare.

The Friendly Company and its loyal customers have a mutual opportunity without equal.

We enlist your cooperation to obtain the proper setting for these diamonds. You can give new meaning to showmanship. Advertising these attractions is not an expense, it is an investment in undreamed of grosses, in extra shows, in record-breaking playing time.



Box-office history is in your hands!

Percentage on Popcorn!

Those who thought the distributors had climbed the highest mountain to attain the peak of demands for their share of theatre receipts may soon find that a new ceiling has been reached.

It is reliably reported that several companies really believe they have a right to claim a percentage of a theatre's candy and/or popcorn receipts when their percentage pictures play the house.

Not long ago we heard what we thought at the time was a gag for laughs: that a new clause was being inserted in percentage contracts calling for a cut on the candy profits. Now we are reliably informed this wasn't any gag, but that the reference was to things that were actually being planned.

There's something to this "like begets like" and probably the ever-increasing distributor demands have whet appetites that just can't be satisfied without a "bite" of those receipts over the popcorn, candy or other counter in the theatres.

Next thing we know, there'll be checkers hanging around the roasting machine to tally the nickels and dimes being paid by the patrons for a bag of popcorn.

All kidding aside: isn't this the screwiest thing you ever heard?

Meet the Issue

We were greatly impressed by the Herbert Yates suggestion last week that the way to put an end to the jurisdictional disputes that have the whole production branch of the business in a state of confusion is for the studios to shut down and force the warring Unions to iron out their difficulties among themselves.

There is no doubt that the studios are right in the middle of a dog-fight with which they have had nothing to do and about which they cannot do a thing to end the sorry mess. There is a terrific loss of money to the production branch of the industry through this protracted wrangling, and some finely planned and excellently set up new production enterprises are stymied by conditions with which they cannot cope. The whole thing is in need of handling, and if it takes heroic treatment, well, that's not the fault of the producers.

Maybe a move like Yates suggested takes guts, but isn't it about time our studios and our industry started to show some guts? Thus far the studios have been taking a mauling and have been practicing what has come to look like a very supine yielding of the other cheek, and then the other in a he-who-gets slapped act.

If several headstrong unions stand off and continue to battle each other, possibly their problems can be solved for them by other unions which are not now involved but which will suffer along with the studios by the intolerable situation now existing.

"Head Man"?

Quite a few exhibitors vacationing in Miami have been commenting that Czar Eric Johnston in a radio address referred to himself as "head of the motion picture industry." And they go on to ask all and sundry what Johnston means when he speaks of a "head of the industry"—after all, they say, they don't know that Johnston represents the exhibition branch of the business.

Perhaps Mr. Johnston hopes to see the day when not only producers and distributors but exhibitors will be members of the Motion Picture Association of America, which is the new name Johnston has given the former MPPDA of Will Hays. But up to the present there is no real representation of the exhibition branch in Mr. Johnston's MPAA. Whatever representation there may be is in theatres which are controlled by the distributors, and that group does not by any means represent the exhibition field—as lawyers for the distributors were most eloquent in declaring during the recent anti-trust trial in New York.

We rather expect that Francis Harmon would like to see exhibitors, nationally, brought into the Johnston organization. But that, we feel, is very wishful thinking and it will require more than a Harmon to bring it about.

Frankly, we don't think we would like to see the exhibition branch become a part of the new version of the old Hays office. The happy medium might be for the exhibitor organizations to appoint a group to serve as liaison between their units and the Johnston office.

But in the meantime, let's keep the record straight by having it understood that there is no one "head" of the motion picture industry.

Percentage-on-Candy Idea Riles Exhibitors

News That Loew's Figures 'Sweets' Profits in Picture Deals Shocks Theatremen

Few, if any, announcements by executives at company sales meetings have caused such a flare of excitement as followed the declaration by Joe Vogel, Loew's vice-president, to salesmen of the MGM organization that the Loew's theatres figure profits on candy concessions as part of the income when calculating the payoff to distributors on percentage pictures. Theatremen from one end of the country to another—or as the orators put it: from New York to California, and from Maine to Florida (but especially Florida)—received the news wth unmixed emotions. They want to see no such arrangement become general practice.

Mr. Vogel, who is in charge of theatre operations for Loew's, made his statement about the candy profits at one of the closing sessions of the MGM sales meetings in New York last week. He said that Loew's took the position that people didn't come to their theatres to buy candy, but to see pictures and the bigger the picture the bigger the candy sale.

This statement was looked upon by many exhibitors as the first move for the distributor to be declared in on the candy and popcorn profits. Many of the top circuit men have been expecting some such development, because, according to one story, a certain circuit's figures on candy profits became known to a distribution sales head and ever since that time there has been plenty of home office figuring as to why the film companies shouldn't derive some of that extra money which they calculated flows to the theatre candy till because their pictures draw crowds to the show houses.

It is said that Loew's is not alone among the major circuits in accounting for the candy profits in figuring the payoff for percentage pictures.

In the distribution branch it is observed that the candy and popcorn concession accounting came into the picture because many theatres carry salaries and expenses of candy and popcorn merchandising as an operational cost item in figuring their side of the percentage deal, but never account for the profits derived from these enterprises. It is understood that many distributors regard these candy expense items as "leaks" of income due them on percentage deals.

Landlords Claim Percentage On Theatre's Candy Receipts

The question of whether candy, popcorn and dish receipts, plus money taken in for admission taxes, should be included in gross receipts caught the ear of exhibitors in Easton, Pa. this week when the Easton Theatre brought action for a declaratory judgment against the real estate corporation owning the theatre. According to the Harold S. Eskin interests, who operate the house, the ownership of the Easton had recently changed hands and the new landlords claimed they were entitled to a percentage on gross receipts which included the cash items not attributable directly to the pictures shown.

Rathvon to Head RKO Production

(See Cover)

As the result of the death of Charles Koerner last Saturday, a new alignment of RKO executives was announced on Wednesday by Floyd Odlum, chairman of the board of RKO. N. Peter Rathvon, president of RKO Corporation, will now become president of RKO Radio Pictures and transfer his activities to the coast, where he will be in charge of studio production. Mr. Rathvon was formerly president of RKO Theatres, Inc., and because of his production activities will turn that post over to Malcolm Kingsberg, although remaining chairman of the RKO Theatres board.

Ned E. Depinet, who has been serving as president of RKO Radio Pictures, will become the chief executive of the company in New York, taking on the jobs of vice-president and vice-chairman of that unit's board.

Other changes in the executive set-up include Sol Schwartz and A. W. Dawson as vice-president of RKO Theatres; William H. Clark to succeed Kingsberg as treasurer of RKO; and Robert Mochrie as a vice-president of RKO Radio Pictures, general sales manager and a board of directors member.

Allied TO of N. J. Protests 20th-Fox Selling Methods

Allied Theatre Owners of New Jersey this week lodged formal complaint in the form of a protest resolution against selling methods of 20th Century-Fox in connection with the feature "Leave Her to Heaven." In the resolution, adopted unanimously at a meeting on Monday, the Jersey exhibitors specifically protested against "the shifting policies of this company and its bad faith in dealing with the independent exhibitors of New Jersey."

The bill of particulars maintained that 20th-Fox several times increased its percentage scale and preferred playing time demands on "Leave Her to Heaven" and in one instance "tried to impose a split figure after the picture had played on straight percentage terms, stating that the exhibitor had made too much money."

Atlanta Bans 'Scarlet Street' As Licentious and Obscene

Declaring Universal's "Scarlet Street" to be "licentious, profane, obscene and contrary to good order," Miss Christine Smith, Atlanta city censor, has banned the picture from that city and is quoted as declaring the film "violates several phases of the code of decency and property by which motion pictures offered here as public entertainment are judged."

Harry G. Graham, Universal's southeastern district manager, declared his company will fight the ban. The picture was recently passed by the New York censor board after the elimination of 55 feet.

New RKO Theatres Corporation To Retire $10,000,000 Notes

RKO Theatres Inc., concluded the sale of a $22,000,000 three per cent 20-year debenture to the Equitable Life Assurance Society last week, at the Bankers' Trust. Approximately $10,000,000 will be used to refund existing indebtedness, and the balance will be added to the working capital of the company.

In anticipation of this transaction, all the RKO theatre subsidiaries were consolidated into B. F. Keith Corporation, which has now become RKO Theatres, Inc. Malcolm Kingsberg, executive vice-president, represented the company.

3 from 20th-Fox in March

Twentieth Century-Fox this week announced the release of "Sentimental Journey," "A Yank in London" and "A Walk in the Sun" during March.

Stiff New Censor Taxes Stun Quebec Exhibitors

A crushing load of taxation has been dumped on theatremen of the Province of Quebec by the newly appointed and reconstituted Board of Cinema Censors, it was reported this week from Montreal. Censorship charges have been hoisted as high as 1000 per cent in some instances. The move was made by the Attorney-General, and theatremen were informed January 31 that the measure took effect the next day. The legislation was passed by Order-in-Council—which means without discussion in the House, a procedure usually reserved for urgent situations where the public interest must be served.

The order provides for increased levies on the censorship of films, posters, stills, slides and all other outdoor advertising. Here are the old and new scales: On 35-mm. films, 1000-ft. reel, the old scale was $3 but is now $6. If the film is sent back for cutting, re-presentation costs $10 per reel and the same is charged if a second re-presentation is made. Trailers used to cost $1.50 each. Now anything under 500 ft. cost $3.

On posters, a set of eight 11x14s jumps from eight cents to 80 cents. Similar sets, 14x36 and 22x28 were previously three cents per print, but are now 25 cents. One-sheet posters jump from three to 25 cents, while six-sheets go from five cents to 50 cents each. Twenty-four sheets rocket from 10 cents to one dollar. Stills, 8x10, are upped from one cent each to 25 cents. Glass sides got by for nothing previously, but now cost 25 cents, while outdoor signs are charged at the rate of one cent per square foot.

Stunned showmen are picking themselves off the floor and will meet soon to decide a future course of action.

Closeups of Names in the News Spotlight This Week

Ben L. Strozier

Steve Broidy

William F. Crockett

Dr. Isador Lubin

Jay Bonafield

Five industry figures were prominent in the news spotlight this week. Dr. Isador Lubin, internationally known economist and administrator, was appointed president of Confidential Reports, Inc. John J. O'Connor, the retiring president, formally introduced Dr. Lubin to representatives of the industry at a luncheon Tuesday in the Sherry-Netherlands Hotel. Steve Broidy, president of Monogram Pictures Corp., was feted in Boston, his home town and scene of his entry into the industry as an independent distributor, at a testimonial dinner Tuesday night. A "Steve Broidy Testimonial Drive" which started Feb. 1 is now being conducted by his sales organization. Election of Jay Bonafield, associated with RKO-Pathe for the past 15 pears, as a vice-president in charge of all production except the newsreel, was announced last weekend by Frederic Ullman, Jr., president of the organization, prior to Ullman's departure for the coast. Ben L. Strozier, of Rock Hill, S. C., is the new president of the Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina, having been elected to succeed A. F. Sams, Jr., of Statesville, N. C., at the association's meeting held recently in Charlotte. Convening at the Hotel John Marshall last week, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia re-elected William F. Crockett president. Crockett, who is vice-president and general manager of Bayne Roland Corp., which operates the Bayne and Roland theatres in Virginia Beach, Va., has long been active in Virginia MPTO affairs and has also gained industry prominence through his participation in various phases of the industry's war effort. Crockett first became president of the Virginia MPTO in 1937 when he succeeded Morton G. Thalhimer.

20th-Fox Has 21 Films Ready for Distribution

The backlog of 20th Century-Fox features for the 1945-46 releasing season already delivered in New York or completed at the studio grew to 21 this week, according to Darryl F. Zanuck, executive vice-president in charge of production. In preparation for filming later this winter and in the spring and summer are 32 additional properties, most of which will be picturizations of popular books and Broadway stage successes.

From a list of 48 popular books for which screenplays have already been constructed at least 13 will be released this season, putting the company on a releasing schedule of not less than one production per month. Eight of the 13 have been released, or are in the final stages of production. This total does not include independently-made films, such as "Black Beauty," which are released through 20th-Fox.

Sees MPTOA at Peak Strength

The MPTOA occupies the strongest position among exhibitors in its history, Ed Kuykendall, president, said this week following a meeting in Columbus, Miss., with Fred Wehrenberg of St. Louis, chairman of the MPTOA national board of directors. Discussions centered on the future postwar activities of the MPTOA.

With Ed Kuykendall, at present recovering from an illness, it appears likely now that the next meeting of the board will be held at Kuykendall's home in Columbus, Miss. to save him the necessity of traveling. This meeting, the first in several years for the directors, is expected to take place soon.

England to Use U. S. Stars To Crack American Market

Maurice Ostrer, executive producer of Gainsborough Pictures, one of the Rank interests' chief British production units, said this week in New York that his company hopes to crack the American market through the use of American name stars in its productions to aid their box-office draw.

Ostrer, who is enroute to Hollywood for a six weeks stay, intends to discuss an exchange of stars with Universal, and familiarize himself with those stars who are now top box-office in the United States. His six pictures, which will cost about $650,000 each, will get their cost back from England alone and he anticipates a $1,800,000 gross on "Wicked Lady" in England.

Tradeshow 'Trunk' March 4

Warners' "Saratoga Trunk" will be tradeshown nationally on March 4. General release is set for the latter part of March.

Unions Seek More Pay

Setting February 16 as the deadline for compliance, the Conference of Studio Unions has notified the major producers that its ten unions want 48 hours' pay for 36 hours' work. Carpenters joined the CSU last Sunday and painters announced that no members of their unions would be allowed to work more than eight hours daily before February 16. According to a report from Hollywood, the IATSE has also presented wage demands calling for wage increases of between 30 and 50 per cent, or 48 hours' pay for 36 hours' work.

Holdovers Jamming Studio Product Flow

The sustained long runs for Hollywood's top grade product in the nation's first run theatres has resulted in a terrific jam of product currently finished, in production or shooting. The backlog on the coast comes to more than 50 per cent of the total amount available in 1941, the last peace year.

A survey by SHOWMEN'S TRADE REVIEW reveals that currently the coast has 209 pictures completed or in production without release dates. This figure is 27 more than in February 1945, when 182 pictures were completed or in production and 78 more than in February, 1941, when only 131 films were completed and awaiting release.

A breakdown of this years' program shows Columbia with 13; MGM, 27; Monogram, 14; Paramount, 23; PRC, 4; RKO, 32, Republic, 24; 20th-Fox, 17; United Artists, 12; Universal, 18 and Warners, 25. Figures for 1945 show Columbia, 18; MGM, 21; Monogram, 13; Paramount, 28; PRC, 6; RKO, 12; Republic, 16; United Artists, 13; Universal, 19 and Warners, 20. In February, 1941, the figures reveal Columbia with 12; MGM, 12; Monogram, 4; Paramount, 22; RKO, 13; Republic, 6; 20th-Fox, 17; United Artists, 10; Universal, 14 and Warners, 21.

Rank Enters Equipment Field

J. Arthur Rank announced in London last weekend that he intends to challenge U. S. producers in the field of film equipment, and that he will manufacture such items for export as well as for use in the British Isles. Rank also disclosed he will spend $800,000 this year on films for children, as part of a non-profit making venture.

Distributors Ridicule Foreign Film Squawks

Complaints by local Allied exhibitor groups against inclusion of foreign pctures in blocks with home-produced films has brought a "so what?" reaction among distributor executives in New York. For one thing the attitude of the home office sales heads is that cancellation provisions give an out to all exhibitors who don't want to play the foreign-made films. For another, the squawks are dismissed as turning down pictures sight unseen and in advance.

The general comment is that blanket turndown of foreign pictures by groups of exhibitors is far from smart business. For one thing, many of the distributor heads declare, there has been a vast improvement in production from abroad, particularly English films. For another, trade barriers are being thrown up against American product in foreign markets unless there is some reciprocal distribution of that country's pictures in the U. S.

"Much of the product is good and that being selected for distribution by the leading companies here," said one distributor, "is equal to some of our American films. Properly edited and dubbed, and properly exploited by theatres these pictures can do business at the American theatres," he continued, "and the exhibitor will be doing a service to the industry as well as serving his own selfish interests by at least looking them over for their potential value as attractions at his theatre before turning them down. For while it is claimed American producers should be able to produce top notch pictures at a profit on the returns from the domestic market, years of effort and experience prove that it can't be done, and if American films are going to be shut out of foreign markets because foreign pictures are shut out of this market, well, the answer is going to be lowered quality of American films."

Monogram Reports Earnings of $181,223 For 26 Week Period

Monogram's net earning for the 26-week period ended December 29, 1945 were $181,223 after all charges, compared with $85,262 in the corresponding period in 1944, Steve Broidy, president, announced this week. A special board meeting approved negotiations for the 100 per cent acquisition of the St. Louis exchange and a 62 per cent interest in the Cincinnati branch.

A Steve Broidy testimonial drive was launched February 1 and will run to May 31 with $15,000 in awards offered. The board also elected Edward Morey, executive assistant to Broidy, a vice-president of the company.

Trust Suit on PCCITO Agenda

Unwarranted theatre invasion, status of the government anti-trust suit against the eight majors, the federal admission tax, non-theatrical competition and television will highlight the subjects for consideration at the next regular meeting of the PCCITO to be held February 12-15 at the Fairmount Hotel in San Francisco.

200 Due at TAC Meet

Delegates to the first convention of the Theatre Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry will number from 150 to 200 when the representatives take up their work on April 1-2 in St. Louis, it was announced Thursday. Naming of the delegates has already started in many states. Those in charge of the convention point out that arrangements are being made to take care of as many as 250 persons and that there is a standing invitation to all exhibitors to attend, whether delegates or not.

GI Sues for Job

Barred from his old job as a projectionist at the Ogden Theatre, Chicago, unless he joins the Operators' Union and waits for his turn, Edward J. Cooney, a war veteran, has filed suit seeking to force his uncle, Ben Cooney, owner of the theatre, to rehire him. Although the Operators' Union is challenging the suit, Assistant District Attorney Maurice Handleman said he had received word from Washington to "waste no time in defending GIs who are seeking to regain their jobs under Section 8 of the Selective Service Act.

Bonafield Elected to Pathe Vice-Presidency

Jay Bonafield, associated with RKO-Pathe for the past 15 years, has been elected a vice-president in charge of all production except for the newsreel which remains under the supervision of Walton C. Ament.

Frederic Ullman, Jr., RKO-Pathe president, who announced Bonafield's election last weekend, also revealed that Douglas Travers, who came to Pathe a year ago from the RKO Studio in Hollywood, will succeed Bonafield as production manager, while Lee Charles, on leave of absence in the Navy, returns as an assistant treasurer.

Charles Underhill, formerly in charge of the motion picture department of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, Inc., advertising agency, and more recently assistant director of radio in that organization, has joined Pathe as production manager in the Commercial Department.

Rites Held in Hollywood for Chas. Koerner, RKO Studio Head

Funeral services were held in Hollywood Tuesday for Charles W. Koerner, 49, executive vice-president of RKO Radio in charge of production, who died Saturday in the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital of acute leukemia following an illness of several weeks.

Charles Koerner

Koerner came to RKO in 1931 as head of the company's theatre circuit operations in the southwest and progressed through similar positions to general manager of all RKO theatres in 1941. In March, 1942, he was called to the coast to become acting manager of the studio, and on June 25 was named vice-president of RKO Radio in charge of producton.

Honorary pallbearers were Sam Briskin, Dave Bershon, Nate Blumberg, Joseph Breen, Harry Cohn, William Dozier, Roy Disney, Walt Disney, Ned E. Depinet, Y. Frank Freeman, William Goetz, Samuel Goldwyn, Henry Ginsberg, Leon Goldberg, Jack Gross, Ben Kahane, Herbert T. Kalmus, Will H. Hays, Al Hanson, Nat Holt, Eric Johnston, Malcolm Kingsberg, Jack Kennedy, Jesse L. Lasky, Perry Lieber, Sol Lesser, Leo McCarey, Louis B. Mayer, Eddie Mannix, Robert Mochrie, J. H. MacIntyre, Donald Nelson, J. J. Nolan, Daniel O'Shea, Floyd Odlum, Ben Piazza, Byron Price, Myron Prinzmetal, Rodney Pantages, Robert Riskin, Phil Reisman, Joe Rosenberg, N. Peter Rathvon, Frank Ross, James Riley, Sid Rogell, Mike Rosenberg, Leo Spitz, Joseph Schenck, David O. Selznick, Charles P. Skouras, Mendel Silberg, Harry Warner, Jack Warner, Cliff Work, Al Wilson, Herbert Yates and Darryl Zanuck. The studio remained closed on the day of the funeral and the home office closed at 2:30.

See No Need to Increase Production or Releases

There is no immediate prospect of a speed-up in releases being brought into the market, according to distributor heads. The current business at key first run houses is maintaining peak levels, with the result that first run bookings are now at about the same level as during the past two years, which means that there is no prospect of moving top-grade product into the market any faster than at present.

It is the belief of distribution men that no matter how production may increase at the studios, there is no indication that release schedules will grow in volume from the major distribution sources. This is so for several reasons, the first and foremost being that there is a practical saturation point in the seating now existing in the first run situations. For another, there is no way in sight to market a top picture in a way that would by-pass the key first runs, where currently the bigger pictures are playing four or more weeks engagements.

On the basis of present conditions, according to one of the industry's top distribution men, there will be a continuation of the production trend to fewer and more elaborate productions. Thus the long runs may get further impetus from the very factor of their own effect on production—which is that a bigger, more elaborate type of attraction induced by the slowdown in release requirements will play even longer runs at the key and other situations.

However, all companies are observing the situation very carefully, and distribution forces are watching for a possible change in general conditions at the theatres. Also, plans for increased production are ready for immediate application at the studios instantly there are signs that the market can absorb more product.

MPTO of Virginia Supports TAC Special Showings Plan

The Theatre Activities Committee won the support last week of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia when that body voted at its Richmond convention to afford the new national association temporary financial backing. The action of the Virginia MPTO means that its members agree to the TAC's basic scheme of using the theatres for showing of Government and other special films to aid with the problems of reconversion during the critical postwar period. A special committee will be appointed to consider such pictures for exhibition.

The members also adopted a resolution protesting "excessive prices" in individual bookings, charging that increased cost of product is detrimental to the industry. All officers of the Virginia MPTO were re-elected for the coming year: William F. Crockett, president; Benjamin T. Pitts, vice-president; Sam Bendheim, treasurer; and Harold Wood, secretary.

Paramount Field Promotions

Clyde Goodson, Paramount sales manager in Atlanta and Gordon Bradley, Atlanta salesman, have been promoted to New Orleans branch manager and Atlanta sales manager, respectively. Jack Price, New Orleans branch manager, has been transferred to the Atlanta exchange sales department.

Eternal Feminine

A feminine patron of the Kenmore Square Theatre, Boston, removed her shoes during a performance last week. Unable to get them on again, she enlisted the aid of Manager Irving Conn who provided a shoe horn so that the lady might leave the theatre properly shod.

Actors Set Wartime Record For Services

A wartime record of world-wide service with 56,037 patriotic appearances was set by Hollywood actors during the four years and 21 days of their activity, the Hollywood Victory Committee's final report released this week reveals. Included in the activities were some five million miles of traveling to fill engagements; 122 overseas entertainment trips on which 176 personalities played 13,555 days; 407 players making hospital and camp tours; 214 making bond tours and who were credited with being responsible for more than three billion in bond purchases.

Other contributions included 7700 events by 4147 personalities; 2056 one-night stands by variety troupes at West Coast ports, camps and hospitals; 2428 entertainment transcriptions for overseas transmission by the Armed Forces Radio Service; 38 film shorts; Canadian bond tours by 50 personalities and thousands of individual personal appearances, broadcasts and transcriptions.

George Schaefer's Son Awarded The Bronze Star Posthumously

Lieutenant James Gerard Schaefer, son of George J. Schaefer, film executive, who was killed in action in Normandy on D-Day, has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Heroic Conduct posthumously. The citation read in part:

"For heroic conduct against the enemy on the morning of October 21, 1943 in Italy. . . . His alertness, courage and devotion to duty displayed in this action are exemplary of the highest traditions of the Airborne Forces."

Gelbspan Joins Hal Roach

Capt. Herbert Gelbspan, recently out of the Army after four years in the ETO, has joined the Hal Roach organization as assistant to Grace Rosenfield, eastern representative. Before his enlistment in the Army Gelbspan had served in a sales capacity for Roach.

Exhibitors Key to Prosperity

The film industry cannot enjoy prosperity unless the outlets for the product (the exhibitors) are kept in a healthy financial condition, Dr. Isador Lubin, internationally known economist, said last Tuesday in New York following announcement of his election as president of Confidential Reports, Inc. Dr. Lubin, who was an economic advisor to the late President Roosevelt, declared that the various branches of the industry are inter-dependent to a very pronounced degree and that relations between them must be on a basis of cooperation in order that the industry as a whole may prosper. He declared that the films came into being as an amusement for the masses, whereas most other articles (automobiles, etc.) which now are regarded as necessities originally were luxuries to be enjoyed only by the wealthy.

Announcement of Dr. Lubin's election to head CRI was made at a lunch attended by the trade press and representatives of the major film companies which established CRI. John J. O'Connor, retiring president, who announced Dr. Lubin's appointment, said that CRI is now servicing 7,000 booking dates per week.

Says Monogram Makes High Budget Films to Supply Exhibitor Demand

Exhibitors who are talking (in a manner not too complimentary) about smaller companies tha tare making elaborate, costly pictures to the exclusion of bread-and-butter modest budget films, must be referring to somebody other than Monogram, Steve Broidy, president told an STR reporter in New York last weekend. Monogram's production policy, Broidy said, is conditioned for the company by its exhibitor accounts, and he declared that it is a fundamental of the industry that a smaller company must operate on that basis in order to stay in business.

Broidy declares that it was the demand of a majority of Monogram's exhibitor customers that started the company on its entry into the field of higher-budgeted productions. "The exhibitors we do business with ask us for pictures of bigger show values and it is in response to them that Monogram has understaken such ambitious productions as 'Suspense'."

The latter picture is said to be costing a million dollars to complete and is being made by the King Brothers, producers of "Dillinger." Monogram plans a strong exploitation campaign for "Suspense," having announced that $91,802 already has been allotted to cover commitments for advertising in various consumer mediums.

"The bigger budget pictures we are making and those we plan for the near future," Broidy said, "are in addition to our so-called 'bread-and-butter' films and do not supplant efforts in that department of film making with respect either to our talent and manpower nor our finances." He pointed out that Monogram is continuing to make and is delivering on schedule, its five series of "family pictures." These are the "Charlie Chan," "Cisco Kid," "Bowery Boys" "Teen Age" and "Shadow" pictures—which Broidy declared are played by every circuit in the U. S. In this latter reference, Broidy said that not all circuits play all pictures in each of the five groups, but that every circuit plays one or more of at least one of the "Family series" films. In addition to these pictures, Monogram produces two or three "exploitation pictures" a year. Broidy said that the current Monogram exploitation picture, "Black Market Babies" is bettering figures run up by the sensational "Dillinger" picture released last season.

The Monogram president insists that his company will have to grow a great deal richer than it is before Monogram can set production policies entirely on its own and without very definite control by the exhibitors who buy the pictures. "It's all right for a company with tremendous financial resources to go ahead making pictures that cost lots of money on the theory that the pictures will be successful," he says. "That kind of company can afford to be wrong now and then, because there are other big pictures to pay out and offset losses sustained on a few of the many such films made. Monogram, however, is forced to watch every single penny invested in production, and we take our cue from the exhibitors to whom we are going to offer the picture when it is completed. That doesn't mean we can't and won't make a mistake, but the chances of doing so are lessened, I think everybody will agree, and we definitely cannot get far out of line with what the exhibitors want from us under such conditions."

Steve Broidy, who took over the reins as president recently and has long been associated with Monogram's high command, was feted in Boston, his home town and scene of his entry into the industry as an independent distributor, at a testimonial dinner Tuesday night. His company's sales organization is now conducting a "Steve Broidy Testimonial Drive," which was started Feb. 1.

Lost Articles Useful

The Capitol Theatre is contributing approximately 250 pounds of unclaimed pieces of wearing apparel from the Lost and Found Department to the Victory Clothing Collection for Overseas Relief. The articles include men's, women's and children's woolen sweaters, scarfs and gloves. At the Capitol it is the policy, if no identification is found, to keep lost articles for ninety days and then turn them over to relief organizations.

Autry Returns to Republic; To Make Four During Year

Gene Autry, whose career as a singing cowboy star was interrupted by the war, will return to the screen under a new contract signed this week with Republic which calls for four productions to be turned out between now and March 1, 1947.

The Autry pictures are scheduled to be high-budget musical westerns, the first of the group to go into production within two months. In order to keep his present rodeo and radio commitments Autry's agreement allows him sufficient time from the studio between films so that no postponements will be necessary.
